

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

From the Ewald Flügel Library

LELAND STANF

Y

943:056

C286a

cc p.1

WALL

PAUL ALIO CAL

COLLECTION
OF
BRITISH AUTHORS.
VOL. CCCCXLVII.

FREDERICK THE GREAT BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

VOL. IV.

HISTORY
OF FRIEDRICH II. OF PRUSSIA, CALLED FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

COPYRIGHT EDITION.

VOL. IV.

STANFORD LIBRARY
LEIPZIG

BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ

1858.

FD

The Right of Translation is reserved.

220019

YWA.061.0307MA12

CONTENTS

OF VOLUME IV.

BOOK VII.

FEARFUL SHIPWRECK OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE PROJECT.

(Continued.)

CHAPTER	PAGE
IV. EXCELLENCY HOTHAM QUITS BERLIN IN HASTE	1
V. JOURNEY TO THE REICH	16
VI. JOURNEY HOMEWARDS FROM THE REICH; CATASTROPHE ON JOURNEY HOMEWARDS	40
Ludwigsburg in 1730, p. 42.
Catastrophe on Journey homewards, 55.
VII. CATASTROPHE, AND MAJESTY, ARRIVE IN BERLIN	76
Scene at Berlin on Majesty's Arrival, p. 84.
VIII. SEQUEL TO CROWN-PRINCE AND FRIENDS	90
IX. COURT-MARTIAL ON CROWN-PRINCE AND CONSORTS	99
Crown-Prince in Cüstrin, p. 102.
Sentence of Court-Martial, 105.
Katte's End, 6th November, 110.

BOOK VIII.

CROWN-PRINCE RETRIEVED: LIFE AT CÜSTRIN.

NOVEMBER 1730—FEBRUARY 1732.

I. CHAPLAIN MÜLLER WAITS ON THE CROWN-PRINCE	115
II. CROWN-PRINCE TO REPENT AND NOT PERISH	121
Crown-Prince begins a new course, p. 124.

CHAPTER	PAGE
III. WILHELMINA IS TO WED THE PRINCE OF BAIREUTH	130
IV. CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN PREUSSEN AND ELSEWHERE .	141
Case of Schlubhut, p. 142.
Case of the Criminal-Collegium itself, 146
Skipper Jenkins in the Gulf of Florida, 150.
Baby Carlos gets his Apanage, 153.
V. INTERVIEW OF MAJESTY AND CROWN-PRINCE AT CÜSTRIN	157
Schulenburg's Three Letters to Grumkow, on visits to the Crown-Prince, during the Cüstrin time, p. 171.
His Majesty's Building Operations, 190.
VI. WILHELMINA'S WEDDING	195

BOOK IX.

LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP: LIFE IN RUPPIN. 1732-1736.

I. PRINCESS ELIZABETH CHRISTINA OF BRUNSWICK-BEVERN	211
Who his Majesty's Choice is; and what the Crown-Prince thinks of it, p. 223.
Duke of Lorraine arrives in Potsdam, and in Berlin, 238.
Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to the Brunswick Charmer, Niece of Imperial Majesty, Monday evening, 10th March, 1732, 241.
II. SMALL INCIDENTS AT RUPPIN	245
III. THE SALZBURGERS	255
IV. PRUSSIAN MAJESTY VISITS THE KAISER	279
V. GHOST OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE RISES; TO NO PURPOSE	306
Session of Tobacco-Parliament, 6th December 1732, p. 309.

MAP.

CÜSTRIN	185
-------------------	-----

BOOK VII.

FEARFUL SHIPWRECK OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE PROJECT.

(Continued.)

CHAPTER IV.

EXCELLENCY HOTHAM QUITS BERLIN IN HASTE.

WHILE the Camp at Radewitz is dissolving itself in this manner, in the last days of June, Captain Guy Dickens, the oracles at Windsor having given him their response as to Prince Friedrich's wild project, is getting under way for Berlin again, — whither also Hotham has returned, to wait for Dickens's arrival, and directly thereupon come home. Dickens is henceforth to do the British Diplomacy here, any Diplomacy there can well be; Dickens once installed, Hotham will, right gladly, wash his hands of this Negotiation, which he considers to be as good as dead for some good while past. First, however, he has one unexpected adventure to go through in Berlin; of most unexpected celebrity in the world: this once succinctly set forth, History will dismiss him to the shades of private life.

Guy Dickens, arriving we can guess about the 8th or 9th of July, brings two important Documents with him to Berlin. First, the English Response (in the shape of "Instructions" to himself, which may be ostensible in the proper quarter,) in regard to the Crown-Prince's project of flight into England. Response which is no other than might have been expected in the circumstances: "Britannic Majesty sorry extremely for the Crown-Prince's situation; ready to do anything in reason to alleviate it. Better wait, however: Prussian Majesty will surely perhaps relent a little: then also the affairs of Europe are in a ticklish state. Better wait. As to that of taking temporary refuge in France, Britannic Majesty thinks that will require a mature deliberation (mûre délibération). Not even time now for inquiry of the French Court how they would take it; which his Britannic Majesty thinks an indispensable preliminary," — and so terminates. The meaning, we perceive, is in sum: "Hm, you won't, surely? Don't; at least Don't yet!" But Dryasdust, and any readers who have patience, can here take the Original Paper; which is written in French (or French of Stratford at the Bow), probably that the Crown-Prince, if needful, might himself read it, one of these days:

"Monsieur Guy Dickens pourrait donner au Prince les assurances les plus fortes de la compassion que le Roi a du triste état où il se trouve, et du désir sincère de Sa Majesté de concourir par tout ce qui dépendra d'elle à l'en tirer. M. Guy Dickens pourrait lui communiquer en même tems les Instructions données à Monsieur Hotham" (our Answer to the Outrageous propositions, which amounts to nothing, and may be spared the reader), "et lui marquer qu'on avait lieu d'espérer que Sa Majesté Prussienne ne refuserait pas au moins de s'expliquer un peu

*“plus en détail qu'elle n'a fait jusqu'ici. Qu'en attendant les suites que cette negociation pourrait avoir, Sa Majesté était d'avis que le Prince ferait bien de différer un peu l'exécution de son dessein connu: Que la situation où les affaires de l'Europe se trouvaient dans ce moment critique ne paraissait pas propre à l'exécution d'un dessein de cette nature: Que pour ce qui est de l'intention où le Prince a témoigné être, de se retirer en France, Sa Majesté croit qu'elle demande une mûre délibération, et que le peu de tems qui reste ne promet pas même qu'on puisse s'informe de ce que la Cour de France pourrait penser là-dessus; dont Sa Majesté trouvait cependant absolument nécessaire de s'assurer, avant de pouvoir conseiller à un Prince qui lui est si cher de se retirer en ce pays là.”

This is Document First; of no concernment to Hotham at this stage; but only to us and our Crown-Prince. Document Second would at one time have much interested Hotham: it is no other than a Grumkow Original seized at St. Mary Axe, such as Hotham once solicited, “strong enough to break Grumkow’s back.” Hotham now scarcely hopes it will be “strong enough.” No matter; he presents it as bidden. On introducing Dickens as successor, Monday, 10th July, he puts the Document into his Prussian Majesty’s hand: and — the result was most unexpected! Here is Hotham’s Despatch to Lord Harrington; which it will be our briefest method to give, with some minimum of needful explanation intercalated here and there:

* Prussian Despatches, vol. lxi.: No date or signature; bound up along with Harrington’s Despatch, “Windsor, 20th June” (1st July) “1780,” — on the morrow of which day we may fancy Captain Dickens took the road for Berlin again, — where we auspiciously see him on Monday, 10th July, probably a night or two after his arrival.

"To the Lord Harrington (from Sir Charles Hotham).

"Berlin, 30th June (11th July) 1730.

"My Lord, — Though the conduct of his Prussian Majesty
"has been such, for some time past, that one ought to be "surprised at nothing he does, — it is nevertheless with great "concern that I now have to acquaint your Lordship with an "extravagancy of his which happened yesterday," Monday 10th July 1730.

"The King of Prussia had appointed me to be with him
"about noon, with Captain Guy Dickens" (who has just returned from England on what secret message your Lordship knows!). — "We both attended his Prussian Majesty, and I "presented Captain Guy Dickens to him, who delivered his "credentials: after which the King talked to us a quarter of "an hour about indifferent matters. Seeing him in a very "good humour, I took that opportunity of telling him, 'That
"as General Grumkow had denied his having held a Secret
"Correspondence with Reichenbach, or having written the "Letters I had some time ago delivered to his Majesty, I "was now ordered by the King my Master to put into his hands
"an Original Letter of General Grumkow"' —

— Where is that Original Letter? ask some minute readers. Minute readers, the ipsissimum corpus of it is lost to mankind. Official Copy of it lies safe here in the State-Paper Office (Prussian Despatches, volume xli.; without date of its own, but near a Despatch dated 20th June 1730); has, adjoined to it, an Autograph jotting by George Second to the effect, "Yes, send it," and also some preliminary scribbles by Newcastle, to the like purport. No date of its own, we say, though, by internal evidence and light of Fassmann,* it is conclusively dateable, "Berlin, 20th May," if anybody cared to date it. The Letter mentions lightly that "pretended discovery" (the St. Mary Axe one, laid on the table of Tobacco-Parliament, 6th May or soon after), "innocent trifles all I wrote; hope you burnt them, nevertheless, according to promise: yours to me "I did burn as they came, and will defy the Devil to "produce;" brags of his Majesty's fine spirits; — and is, Jotting and all, as insignificant a Letter as any other portion of the "Rookery Colloquy," though its fate was a little more distinguished. Prussian Dryasdust is expected to give it in Facsimile, one day, — surely no British Under-Secretary will exercise an unwise discretion, and forbid him that small pleasure! —

"which was an undeniable proof of all the rest, and could not "but convince his Prussian Majesty of the truth of them." — Well?

"He took the Letter from me, cast his eye upon it; and "seeing it to be Grumkow's hand, said to me with all the "anger imaginable" (fancy the thunderburst!), "Messieurs, "j'ai eu assez de ces choses là;" "threw the Letter upon the "ground, and immediately turning his back went out of the "room, and shut the door upon us," — probably with a slam! And that is the naked truth concerning this celebrated Intercepted Letter. Majesty answered explosively, — his poor heart being in a burdened and grieved condition, not unlike growing a haunted one, — “I have had enough of that stuff before!” pitched the new specimen away, and stormily whirled out with a slam of the door. That he stamped with his foot, is guessable. That he “lifted his foot as if to kick the Hon. English Excellency,”* which the English Excellency never could have stood, but must have died on the spot, — of this, though several Books have copied it from Wilhelmina, there is no vestige of evidence: and the case is bad enough without this.

“Your Lordship will easily imagine that Captain Guy Dickens and I were not a little astonished at this most extraordinary behaviour. I took up the Letter he had thrown upon the floor” (ipsissimum corpus of it lost to mankind, last seen going into Hotham’s pocket in this manner); “and re- turning home, immediately wrote one to his Prussian Majesty, of which a copy is here enclosed.” — Let us read that essential Piece: sound substance, in very stiff indifferent French of Stratford, — which may as well be made English at once:

“To his Majesty the King of Prussia.

“Sire, — It is with the liveliest grief that I find myself under the necessity, — after what has passed today at the audience I had of your Majesty, where I neither did nor said anything in regard to that Letter of Monsieur Grumkow’s or to putting it into your Majesty’s hands, that was not by my Master’s order, — it is, I say, Sire, with the liveliest grief that I am obliged to inform your Majesty of the necessity there lies on me to despatch a Courier to London to apprise the King my Master of an incident so surprising as the

* Wilhelmina, i. 228.

10th July 1730.

“one that has just happened. For which reason I beg (supplie)
“your Majesty will be pleased to cause the necessary Orders
“for Posthorses to be furnished me, not only for the said “Courier, but also for myself, — since, after what has just “happened, it is not proper for me to prolong my stay here “(faire un plus long séjour ici).

“I have the honour to be, your Majesty’s &c. &c. &c.

“CHARLES HOTHAM.”

“About two hours afterwards, General Borck came to me;
“and told me He was in the utmost affliction for what had “happened; and beseeched me to have a little patience, and “that he hoped means would be found to make up the matter “to me. Afterwards he communicated to me, by word of “mouth, the Answer the King of Prussia had given to the “last Orders I had received by Captain Guy Dickens,” — Orders, “Come home immediately,” to which the “Answer” is conceivable.

“I told him that after the treatment I had received at noon,
“and the affront put upon the King my Master’s character, I “could no longer receive nor charge myself with anything
“that came from his Prussian Majesty. That as to what re“lated to me personally, it was very easily made up; but “having done nothing but in obedience to the King my Mas“ter’s orders, it belonged to him only to judge what satis“faction was due for the indignity offered to his character.
“Wherefore I did not look upon myself as authorised to listen “to any expedients till I knew his Majesty’s pleasure upon the “matter.

“In the evening, General Borck wrote a Letter to Captain “Guy Dickens and two to me, the Copies of which are en“closed,” — fear not, reader! “The purport of them was to “desire That I would take no farther notice of what had hap“pened, and that the King of Prussia desired I would come “and dine with him next day,” — Engaged otherwise, your Majesty, next day! “The answer to these Letters I also “enclose to your Lordship,” — reader not to be troubled with it. “I excused myself from dining with the King of Prussia, “not thinking myself at liberty to appear any more at Court “till I received his Majesty’s,” my own King’s, “commands;

“and told General Borck that I looked upon myself as in“dispensably obliged to acquaint the King my Master with “everything that had passed, it being to no purpose to “think of concealing it, since the thing was already become “public, and would soon be known in all the Courts of Europe.

“This, my Lord, is the true state of this unaccountable “accident. You will see, by General Borck’s Letter, that “the King of Prussia, being now returned to his senses, is “himself convinced of the extravagancy of this proceeding;
“and was very desirous of having it concealed; — which was “impossible; for the whole Town knew it an hour after it had “happened.

“As to my own part, I am not a little concerned at this “unfortunate incident. As it was impossible to foresee this “fit of madness in the King of Prussia, there was no guarding “against it; and after it had happened, I thought I could do
“no less than resent it in the manner I have done, — without “prostituting the character with which the King has been “pleased to honour me. I hope, however, this affair will be “attended with no ill consequences: for the King of Prussia “himself is at present so ashamed of his behaviour, that he “says, He will order Count Degenfeld” (Graf von Degenfeld, going at a leisurely pace to remove Nosti from his perch among you)* “to hasten his journey to England, with orders to en“deavour to make up the affair immediately.

* Suprà, vol. III, p. 277.

“As I had already received the King’s Orders, by Captain “Guy Dickens, To return home forthwith, I thought, after “what had happened, the sooner I left this place the better;
“and the rather because it might be proper I should make a “report of it to his Majesty. I shall therefore set out a few “hours after this Messenger; and will make all the expedition “possible.

“The King of Prussia sets out for Anspach on Saturday
“next,” — 11th July is Tuesday, Saturday next will be 15th
July, which proves correct.* “I am, with the utmost respect, “My Lord, Your Lordship’s most obedient and most humble “servant,

“CHARLES HOTHAM.”

No sooner was the door slammed-to than his Majesty began to repent. At sight of the demand for Post-horses, he repented bitterly; sent Borck to ask Hotham to dinner, with what success we have seen. Sent Borck to negotiate, to correspond, to consult with Dickens, to do his utmost in pacifying Hotham. All which Correspondence exists, but is not worth giving. - Borck’s remonstrances are in rugged soldier-like style, full of earnestness and friendliness. Do not wreck, upon trifles, a noble interest we have in common; King is jealous about foreign interference with his Ministers, but meant nothing; I tell you it is nothing! — Hotham is polite, good-tempered; but remains inflexible: With myself, on my own score, it were soon settled, or is already settled; but with the King my Master, — no

* Fassmann, p. 410.

 State-Paper Office: Prussian Despatches, vol. xli.

expedient but post-horses! The Diplomatist world of Berlin is in a fuss; Queen Sophie and "the Minister of Denmark," with other friendly Ministers, how busy! "All day," this day and the next, "they spent in comings and goings;"* advising Hotham to relent: Hotham could not relent. The Crown-Prince himself writes, urged by message from his Mother; Crown-Prince sends Katte off from Potsdam with this Billet (if this be a correct copy to translate from):

"To his Excellency Monsieur the Chevalier Hotham.

Potsdam, 11th July 1730.

"Monsieur, — Having learned by M. de Leuvenier," the Danish Minister, a judicious well-affected man, "what the "King my Father's ultimate intentions are, I cannot doubt "but you will yield to his desires. Think, Monsieur, that my "happiness and my Sister's depend on the resolution you shall "take, and that your answer will mean the union or the dis- "union forever of the two Houses! I flatter myself that it "will be favourable, and that you will yield to my entreaties. "I never shall forget such a service, but recognise it all my "life by the most perfect esteem," with which I now am, Tout à vous,

"FRÉDÉRIC."

This Billet Katte delivers; but to this also Hotham remains inexorable; polite, hopeful even: No harm will come; Degenfeld will go, I myself will help when at home; but for the present, no resource but post-horses! Which they at last yield him, the very post-horses ready to weep.

* Wilhelmina, i. 229, 230.

 Ib. i. 230.

And so Hotham, spirited judicious English gentleman, rolls off homewards,* a few hours after his Courier, — and retires honourably into the shades of private life, steady there thenceforth. He has not been successful in Berlin: surely his Negotiation is now out in all manner of senses! Long ago (to use our former ignoble figure) he had “laid down the bellows, though there was still smoke traceable:” but now, by this Grumkow Letter, he has, as it were, struck the poker through the business; and that dangerous manœuvre, not proving successful, has been fatal and final! Queen Sophie and certain others may still flatter themselves; but it is evident the Negotiation is at last complete. What may lie in Flight to England and rash desperate measures, which Queen Sophie trembles to think of, we do not know: but by regular negotiation this thing can never be.

It is darkly apprehended the Crown-Prince still meditates Flight; the maternal heart and Wilhelmina’s are grieved to see Lieutenant Katte so much in his confidence, — could wish him a wiser counsellor in such predicaments and emergencies! Katte is greatly flattered by the Prince’s confidence; even brags of it in society, with his foolish loose tongue. Poor youth, he is of dissolute ways; has plenty of “unwise intellect,” little of the “wise” kind; and is still under the years of discretion. Towards Wilhelmina there is traceable in him something, — something as of almost loving a bright particular star, or of thrice-privately worshipping it for his own behoof. And Wilhelmina, during the late Radewitz time, when Mamma "gave four Apartments (or Royal Soirees) weekly," was severe upon him, and inaccessible in these Court Soirees. A rash young fool; carries a loose tongue: — still worse, has a Miniature, recognisable as Wilhelmina; and would not give it up, either for the Queen's Majesty or me! — "Thousand and thousand pardons, High Ladies both; my loose tongue shall be locked: but these two Miniatures, the Prince and Princess Royal, I copied them from two the Prince had lent me and has got back, ask me not for these; — never, oh, I cannot ever!" — Upon which Wilhelmina had to take a high attitude, and pass him speechless in the Soirees. The foolish fellow: — and yet one is not heartily angry either; only reserved in the Soirees; and anxious about one's Brother in such hands.

* “Wednesday,” 12th (Dickens).

Friedrich Wilhelm repents much that Hotham explosion; is heard saying that he will not again treat in person with any Envoy from foreign parts, being of too hot temper, but will leave his Ministers to do it.* To Queen Sophie he says coldly, "Wilhelmina's marriage, then, is off; an end to it. Abbess of Herford" (good Protestant refuge for unprovided Females of Quality, which is in our gift), "let her be Abbess there;" — and writes to the then extant Abbess to make Wilhelmina "Coadjutress," or Heir-Apparent to that Chief-Nunship! Nay what is still more mortifying, my Brother says, "On the whole I had better, had not I?" The cruel Brother; but indeed the desperate! — For things are mounting to a pitch in this Household.

* Dickens's Despatch, Berlin, 22d July (n. s.) 1780.

Queen Sophie's thoughts, — they are not yet of surrender; that they will never be, while a breath of life is left to Queen Sophie and her Project: we may fancy Queen Sophie's mood. Nor can his Majesty be in a sweet temper; his vexations lately have been many. First, England is now off, not off-and-on as formerly: that comfortable possibility, hanging always in one's thoughts, is fairly gone; and now we have nothing but the Kaiser to depend on for Jülich and Berg, and the other elements of our salvation in this world! Then the St. Mary Axe discoveries, harassing shadows of suspicion that will rise from them, and the unseemly Hotham catastrophe and one's own blame in it; Womankind and Household still virtually rebellious, and all things going awry: Majesty is in the worst humour; — bullies and outrages his poor Crown-Prince almost worse than ever. There have been rattan-showers, hideous to think of, descending this very week,* on the fine head, and far into the high heart of a Royal Young Man; who cannot, in the name of manhood, endure, and must not, in the name of sonhood, resist, and vainly calls to all the gods to teach him what he shall do in this intolerable inextricable state of matters.

* Guy Dickens's Despatch, 18th July 1730.

Fate and these Two Black-Artists have driven Friedrich Wilhelm nearly mad; and he, in turn, is driving everybody so. He more than suspects Friedrich of an intention to fly; which is horrible to Friedrich Wilhelm: and yet he bullies him occasionally, as a spiritless wretch, for bearing such treatment. "Cannot you renounce the Heir-Apparentship, then; your little Brother is a fine youth. Give it up; and go, unmolested, to the — in fact to the Devil: Cannot you?" — "If your Majesty, against the honour of my Mother, declare that I am not your eldest son: Yes, so; not otherwise, ever!" modestly but steadily persists the young man, whenever this expedient is proposed to him, — as perhaps it already sometimes is. Whereat the desperate Father can only snort indignantly futile. A case growing nearly desperate. Desperate, yes, on all hands: unless one had the "high mast" above alluded to, with two pulleys and ropes; and could see a certain Pair of Scoundrels mount rapidly thither, what hope is there for anybody? A violent crisis does not last, however; that is one certainty in it. Either these agonistic human beings, young and old, will all die, all go to Bedlam, with their intolerable woes; or else something of explosive nature will take place among them. The maddest boil, unless it kill you with its torments, does at length burst, and become an abscess.

Of course Captain Dickens, the instant Hotham was gone, hastened privily to see the Crown-Prince; saw Katte and him "at the Gate of the Potsdam Palace at midnight,"* or in some other less romantic way; — read him the Windsor Paper of "Instructions" known to us; and preached from that text. No definite countenance from England, the reverse rather, your Highness sees; — how can there be? Give it up, your Highness; at least delay it! — Crown-Prince does not give it up a whit; whether he delays it, we shall see.

A busy week for the Crown-Prince and Katte, this of the Hotham Catastrophe; who have many consultations, the Journey to Anspach being on Saturday next! Crown-Prince has given him in keeping a writing case with private letters; 1,000 ducats of money, money raised by loan, by picking jewels off some miniatures of honour, and the like sore methods. Katte has his very coat, a gray topcoat or travelling roquelaure, in keeping; — and their schemes are many. Off we must and will be, by some opportunity. Could not Katte get a "Recruiting Furlough," leave to go into the Reich on that score; and join one there? Lieutenant Keith is at Wesel; ready, always ready. Into France, into Holland, England? If the English would not, there is war to be in Italy, say all the Newspapers: why not a campaign as Volunteers in Italy, till we saw how matters went? Anything and all things are preferable to ignominy like this. No dog could endure it! —

* Wilhelmina; Ranke, i. 301.

CHAPTER V.

JOURNEY TO THE REICH.

ON Saturday the 15th July 1730, early in the morning as his wont was, Friedrich Wilhelm, with a small train of official military persons, rolled off from Potsdam, towards Leipzig, on that same journey of his, towards Anspach and the Reich. To Anspach, to see our poor young Daughter, lately married there; therefrom we can have a run into the Reich, according to circumstances. In this wide route there lie many Courts and scenes, which it might behove us to look into; Courts needing to be encouraged to stand for the Kaiser's rights, against those English, French and intrusive Foreigners of the Seville Treaty. We may hope at least to ease our own heavy mind, and have the chaff somewhat blown out of it, by this rushing through the open atmosphere. — Such, so far as I can gather, were Friedrich Wilhelm's objects in this Journey; which turned out to be a more celebrated one than he expected. The authentic records of it are slight, the rumours about it have been many.* After painful sifting through mountains of dust and ashes for

* Förster (iii. 1-11) contains Seckendorf's Narrative, as sent to Vienna; Preuss (iv. 470), a Prussian Relatio ex Actis: these are the only two original pieces which I have seen; Excerpts of others (correct doubtless, but not in a very distinct condition) occur in Ranke, i. 294-340.

15th-31st July 1730.

a poor cinder of a fact here and there, our duty is, to tell the English reader, one good time, what certainties, or available cinders, have anywhere turned up.

Crown-Prince Friedrich, it has been decided, after some consultation, shall go with his Majesty. Better he go with us, to be under our own eyes, lest he run away, or do other mischief. Old General Buddenbrock, old Colonel Waldau, and Lieutenant-Colonel Rochow travel in the same carriage with the Prince; are to keep a strict watch over him, one of them at least to be always by him. Old General Buddenbrock, a grim but human old military gentleman, who has been in all manner of wars: he fought at Steenkirk even, and in the Siege of Namur, under Dutch William; stood, through Malplaquet and much else, under Marlborough; did the Siege of Stralsund too, and descent on Rügen there, which was not his first acquaintance with Karl of Sweden; and is a favourite old friend of Friedrich Wilhelm's. A good old gentleman, though very strict; now hard on sixty. He is chief of the Three.

Old Waldau, not younger, though still only Colonel of Horse, likewise celebrates the Malplaquet anniversary; a Pomeranian man, and silent smoker in the Tabagie, well seen by the master there. To these two elderly authorities, Lieutenant-Colonel Rochow, still only about forty, and probably sharper of eye, is adjoined as active partner. I conclude, the Prince and Buddenbrock ride face forward; Buddenbrock can tell him about so many things, if he is conversible: about Dutch William; about Charles XII., whose Polish fights he witnessed, as an envoy from Berlin, long ago. A Colonel Kröcher, I find, is general manager of the Journey: — and it does not escape notice that Friedrich, probably out of youthful curiosity, seems always very anxious to know, to the uttermost settled point, where our future stages are to be. His Royal Highness laid-in a fair stock of District Maps, especially of the Rhine Countries, at Leipzig, too;* and is assiduous in studying them, — evidently very desirous to know the face of Germany, the Rhine Countries in particular?

Potsdam, Wittenberg, Leipzig, the wheels rush rapidly on, stage succeeding stage; and early in the afternoon we are at Leipzig, — never looking out at Luther's vestiges, or Karl V.'s, or thinking about Luther, which thou and I, good English reader, would surely have done, in crossing Wittenberg and the birthplace of Protestantism. At Leipzig we were thinking to have dined. At the Peter's Gate there, — where at least fresh horses are, and a topographic Crown-Prince can send hastily to buy maps, — a General Hopfgarten, Commandant of the Town, is out with the military honours; he has, as we privately know, an excellent dinner ready in the Pleissenburg Fortress yonder, — but he compliments to a dreadful extent! Harangues and compliments in no end of florid inflated tautologic ornamental balderdash; repeating and again repeating, What a never-imagined honour it is; in particular saying three times over, How the Majesty of Saxony, King August, had he known, would have wished for wings to fly hither; and bowing to the very ground, "as if, in the Polish manner, he wished to clasp your feet," said Friedrich Wilhelm afterwards. I can fancy Friedrich Wilhelm somewhat startled! How, at the first mention of this idea of big August, with his lame foot, taking wing, and coming like a gigantic partridge, with lame foot and cocked hat, Friedrich Wilhelm grinned. How at the second mention, and Polish threat of your feet, Friedrich Wilhelm, who hates all lies, and cares not for salutations in the market-place, jerks himself impatiently and saves his feet. At the third mention, clear it is, Friedrich Wilhelm utters the word, "Anspannen, Horses!" — and in very truth takes to the road again; hungry indeed, but still angrier; leaving Hopfgarten bent into the shape of a parabola, and his grand dinner cooling futile, in what tragic humour we can imagine. Why has no Prussian Painter done that scene? Let another Chodowiecky, when another comes, try whether he cannot.*

* Förster, iii. 2.

 Fassmann, p. 410.

Friedrich Wilhelm regretted the dinner, regretted to hurt the good man's feelings; but could stand it no longer. He rushes off for Meuselwitz, where Seckendorf, with at least silence, and some cold collation instead of dinner, is awaiting him. Twenty miles off is Meuselwitz; up the flat valley of the Pleisse River, towards Altenburg: through a region memorable, were we not so hungry. Famed fights have had their arena

* Fassmann, p. 411.

here; Lützen, the top of its church-steeple visible on your right, it is there where the great Gustavus fell two hundred years ago: on that wide champaign, a kind of Bullring of the Nations, how many fights have been, and will be! Altenburg one does not see tonight: happy were we but at Meuselwitz, a few miles nearer, and had seen what dinner the old Feldzeugmeister has.

Dinner enough, we need not doubt. The old Feldzeugmeister has a big fine Schloss at Meuselwitz; his by unexpected inheritance; with uncommonly fine gardens; — with a good old Wife, moreover, blithe though childless; — and he is capable of “lighting more than one candle” when a King comes to visit him. Doubtless the man hurls his thrift into abeyance; and blazes out with conspicuous splendour, on this occasion. A beautiful Castle indeed, this Meuselwitz of his; the towers of Altenburg visible in the distance: Altenburg, where Kunz von Kauffungen stole the two little Princes, centuries ago; — where we do not mean to pause at this time. On the morrow morning, — unless they chose to stay over Sunday, which I cannot affirm or deny, — Seckendorf also has made his packages; and joins himself to Friedrich Wilhelm’s august travelling party. Doing here a portion of the long space (length of the Terrestrial Equator in all) which he is fated to accomplish in the way of riding with that Monarch.

From Meuselwitz, through Altenburg, Gera, Saalfeld, to Coburg, is our next day’s journey. Up one fork of the Leipzig Pleisse, then across the Leipzig Elster, these streams now dwindling to brooks; leading us up to the watershed, or central Hill countries between the Mayn and Saale Rivers; where the same shower will run partly, on this hand, northward, by the Elster, Pleisse or other labyrinthic course, into the Saale, into the Elbe; and partly, on the other hand, will flow southward into the Mayn; and so, after endless windings in the Fir Mountains (Fichtel-Gebirge), get by Frankfurt into the Rhine at Maintz. Mayn takes the south end of your shower; Saale takes the north, — or farther east yonder, shower will roll down into the same grand Elbe-river by the Mulde (over which the Old Dessauer is minded to build a new stone bridge; Wallenstein and others, as well as Time, have ruined many bridges there). That is the line of the primeval mountains, and their ever-flowing rain-courses, in those parts.

15th-31st July 1780.

At Gera, dim old Town, — does not your Royal Highness well know the “Gera Bond (Geraische Vertrag)”? Duhan did not forget to inform you of that? It is the corner-stone of the House of Brandenburg’s advancement in the world. Here, by your august ancestors, the Law of Primogeniture was settled, and much rubbish was annihilated in the House of Brandenburg: Eldest Son always to inherit the Electorate unbroken; after Anspach and Baireuth no more apagnages, upon any cause or pretext whatsoever; and these themselves to lapse irrevocable to the main or Electoral House, should they ever fall vacant again. Fine fruit of the decisive sense that was in the Hohenzollerns; of their fine talent for annihilating rubbish, — which feat, if a man can do it, and keep doing it, will more than most others accelerate his course in this world. It was in this dim old Town of Gera, in the Year 1598, by him that had the twenty-three children, that the “Gera Bond” was brought to parchment. But indeed it was intrinsically only a renewal, more solemnly sanctioned, of Albert Achilles’s Haus-Ordnung (House-Order), done in 1478, above a century earlier. —

But see, we are under way again. His Prussian Majesty rushes forward without pause; will stop nowhere, except where business demands: no Majesty of his day travels at such a speed. Orlamünde an hour hence, — your Royal Highness has heard of Orlamünde and its famed Counts of a thousand years back, when Kaiser Redbeard was in the world, and the Junior Hohenzollern, tired of hawking, came down from the Hills to him? Orlamünde (Orla-mouth) is not far off, on our right; and this itself is the Orla; this pleasant streamlet we are now quitting, which has borne us company for some time: this too will get into the Saale, and be at Magdeburg, quite beyond the Dessauer’s Bridge, early tomorrow. Ha, here at last is Saalfeld, Town and Schloss, and the incipient Saale itself: his Serene Highness Saalfeld-Coburg’s little Residenz; — probably his Majesty will call on him, in passing? I have no doubt he does; and transacts the civilities needful.

Christian Ernst, whose Schloss this is, a gentleman of his Majesty's age (born 1683), married an amiable Fräulein not of quality, whom indeed the Kaiser has ennobled: he lives here, — I think, courting the shade rather; and rules conjointly with his younger Brother, or Half-Brother, Franz Josias, who resides at Coburg. Dukes of Saalfeld-Coburg, such is their style, and in good part their possession; though, it is well known to this travelling party and the world, there has been a Lawsuit about Coburg this half-century and more; and though somewhere about 200 "Conclusa,"* or Decrees of Aulic Council, have been given in favour of the Saalfelders, their rivals of Meiningen never end. Nor will end yet, for five years more to come; till, in 1735, "206 Conclusa being given," they do end, and leave the Saalfelders in peaceable possession; who continue so ever since to this day. How long his Majesty paused in that Schloss of Saalfeld, or what he there did, or what he spake, — except perhaps encourage Christian Ernst to stand by a Kaiser's Majesty against these French insolences, and the native German, Spanish, English derelictions of duty, — we are left to the vaguest guess of fancy. And must get on to Coburg for the night.

15th-31st July 1730.

At Coburg, in its snug valley, under the Festung or Hill Castle, — where Martin Luther sat solitary during the Diet of Augsburg (Diet known to us, our old friend Margraf George of Anspach hypothetically

* Michaelis, i. 524, 518; Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, vi. 2464; Certe!, t. 74; Hübner, t. 166.

 Carlyle's Miscellanies, iv. § Prinzenraub.

“laying his head on the block” there, and the great Kaiser, Karl V., practically burning daylight, with pitiable spilling of wax, in the Corpus-Christi procession there),* where Martin Luther sat solitary, and wrote that celebrated Letter about “Crows holding “their Parliament all round,” and how “the Pillars of “the world were never seen by any body, and yet the “world is held up, in these dumb continents of space;” — at Coburg, we will not doubt, his Majesty found Franz Josias at home, and illuminated to receive him. Franz Josias, a hearty man of thirty-five, he too will stand by the Kaiser in these coming storms? With a weak contingent truly, perhaps some score or two of fighters: but many a little makes a mickle! — I remark, however, two points, of a merely genealogical nature. First, that Franz Josias has, or rather is going to have, a younger Son, who in some sixty years hence will become dreadfully celebrated in the streets of Paris, as “Austrian Coburg.” The Austrian Coburg of Robespierre and Company. An immeasurable terror and portent, — not much harm in him, either, when he actually comes, with nothing but the Duke of York and Dunkirk for accompaniment, — to those revolutionary French of 1792-4. This is point first. Point second is perhaps still more interesting; this namely: That Franz Josias has an Eldest Son (boy of six when Friedrich Wilhelm makes his visit), — a GRANDSON’S GRANDSON of whom is, at this day, Prince of Wales

* Antea, vol. i. p. 281.

 Friedrich Josias: 1787-1815.

15th-31st July 1780.

among the English People, and to me a subject of intense reflection now and then! —

From Coburg, Friedrich Wilhelm, after pause again unknown, rushed on to Bamberg; new scenes and ever new opening on the eyes of our young Hero and his Papa. The course is down the valley of the Itz, one of the many little valleys in the big slope of the Rodach; for the waters are now turned, and all streams and brooks are gurgling incessantly towards the Mayn. Towards Frankfurt, Maintz, and the Rhine, — far enough from the Saale, Mulde, or the Old Dessauer's Bridge today; towards Rotterdam and the uttermost Dutch swamps today. Near upon Bamberg we cross the Mayn itself; Red Mayn and White conjoined, coming from Culmbach and Baireuth, — mark that, your Highness. A country of pleasant hills and vines: and in an hour hence, through thick fir-woods, — each side of your road horribly decked with gibbeted thieves swinging aloft,* — you arrive at Bamberg, chief of Bishoprics, the venerable town; whose Bishop, famous in old times, is like an Archbishop, and "gets his palium direct from the Pope," — much good may it do him. "Is bound, however, to give up his Territory, if "the Kaiser elected is landless," — far enough from likely now. And so you are at last fairly in the Mayn Valley; River Mayn itself a little step to north; — long course and many wide windings between you and

* Pöllnitz: Memoirs and Letters (English Translation, London, 1745), l. 209. Let me say again, this is a different Book from the "Memoirs of Pöllnitz;" and a still different from the Memoiren, or "Memoirs of Brandenburg by Pöllnitz:" such the excellence of nomenclature in that old fool!

Maintz or Frankfurt, not to speak of Rotterdam, and the ultimate Dutch swamps.

At Bamberg why should a Prussian Majesty linger, except for picturesque or for mere baiting purposes? At Bamberg are certain fat Catholic Canons, in indolent, opulent circumstances; and a couple of sublime Palaces, without any Bishop in them at present. Nor indeed does one much want Papist Bishops, wherever they get their pallium; of them as well keep to windward! thinks his Majesty. And indeed there is no Bishop here. The present Bishop of Bamberg, Cardinal Sinzendorf by name, is a Kaiser's Minister of State; lives at Vienna, enveloped in red tape, as well as red hat and stockings; and needs no exhortation in the Kaiser's favour. Let us yoke again, and go. — Firwoods all round, and dead malefactors blackening in the wind: this latter point I know of the then Bamberg; and have explanation of it. Namely, that the Cardinal-Bishop, though a humane Catholic, is obliged to act so. His small Domain borders on some six or seven bigger sovereignties; and, being Ecclesiastical, is made a cesspool to the neighbouring scoundrelism; which state of things this Cardinal has said shall cease. Young Friedrich may look, therefore, and old Friedrich Wilhelm and Suite; and make of it what they can.

"Bamberg, through Erlangen, to Nürnberg:" so runs the way. At Erlangen there loiters now, recruiting, a certain Rittmeister von Katte, cousin to our Potsdam Lieutenant and confidant; to him this transit of the Majesty and Crown-Prince must be an event like few, in that stagnant place. French Refugees are in Erlangen, busy building new straight streets; no University as yet; — nay a high Dowager of Baireuth is in it, somewhat exuberant Lady (friend Weissenfels's Sister), on whom Friedrich Wilhelm must call in passing. This high Widow of Baireuth is not Mother of the present Heir-Apparent there, who will wed our Wilhelmina one day: — ah no, his Mother was "divorced for weighty reasons;"* and his Father yet lives, in the single state; a comparatively prosperous gentleman these four years last.past; Successor, since four years past, of this Lady's Husband, who was his Cousin-german. Dreadfully poor before that, the present Margraf of Baireuth, as we once explained; but now things are looking up with him again, some jingle of money heard in the coffers of the man; and his eldest Prince, a fine young fellow, only apt to stammer a little when agitated, is at present doing the return part of the Grand Tour, — coming home by Geneva, they say.

15th-31st July 1780.

Rittmeister von Katte, I doubt not, witnesses this transit of the incognito Majesty, this call upon the exuberant Dowager; but can have little to say to it, he. I hope he is getting tall recruits here in the Reich; that will be the useful point for him. He is our Lieutenant Katte's Cousin, an elder and wiser man than the Lieutenant. A Reichsgraf's and Field-marshal's nephew, he ought to get advanced in his profession; — and can hope to do so when he has deserved it, not sooner at all, in that thrice-fortunate Country. Let the

* Hübner, t. 181.

Rittmeister here keep himself well apart from what is not his business, and look out for tall men.

Bamberg is halfway-house between Coburg and Nürnberg: whole distance of Coburg and Nürnberg, — say a hundred and odd miles, — is only a fair day's driving for a rapid King. And at Nürnberg, surely, we must lodge for a night and portion of a day, if not for more. On the morrow, it is but a thirty-five miles drive to Anspach; pleasant in the summer evening, after all the sights in this old Nürnberg, "city of the Noricans, (Noricorum Burgum).". Trading Staple of the German world in old days; Toyshop of the German world in these new. Albert Dürer's and Hans Sachs's City, — mortals infinitely indifferent to Friedrich Wilhelm. But is it not the seed-ground of the Hohenzollerns, this Nürnberg, memorable above cities to a Prussian Majesty? Yes, there in that old white Castle, now very peaceable, they dwelt; considerably liable to bickerings and mutinous heats; and needed all their skill and strength to keep matters straight. It is now upon Seven-Hundred years since the Cadet of Hohenzollern gave his hawk the slip, patted his dog for the last time, and came down from the Rough-Alp countries hitherward. And found favour, not unmerited I fancy, with the great Kaiser Redbeard, and the fair Heiress of the Vohburgs; and in fact, with the Earth and with the Heavens, in some degree. A loyal, clever and gallant kind of young fellow, if your Majesty will think? Much has grown and waned since that time: but the Hohenzollerns, ever since, are on the waxing hand; — unless this accursed Treaty of Seville and these English Matches put a stop to them?

15th-31st July 1780.

Alas, it is not likely Friedrich Wilhelm, in the hurry and grating whirl of things, had many poetic thoughts in him, or pious auroral memories from the Past Ages, instead of grumbly dusty provocations from the present, — his feeling, haste mainly, and need of getting through! The very Crown-Prince, I should guess, was as good as indifferent to this antique Cadet of the Hohenzollerns; and looked on Nürnberg and the old white Castle with little but ennui: the Princess of England, and black cares on her beautiful account and his own, possess him too exclusively. But in truth we do not even know what day they arrived or departed; much less what they did or felt in that old City. We know only that the pleasant little Town of Anspach, with its huge unfinished Schloss, lay five-and-thirty miles away; and that thither was the next and quasi-final bit of driving. Southwestward thirty-five miles; through fine summer hills and dales; climbing always, gently, on the southward hand; still drained by the Mayn River, by the Regnitz and other tributaries of the Mayn: — half-way is Heilsbronn,* with its old Monastery; where the bones of our Hohenzollern Forefathers rest, and Albert Achilles's "skull, with no sutures visible." On the gloomy Church-walls their memorials are still legible: as for the Monastery itself, Margraf George our memorable Reformation friend, abolished that, — purged the monks away, and put Schoolmasters in their stead; who were long of good renown in those parts, but have since gone to Erlangen, so to speak. The July sunset streaming over those old spires of Heilsbronn might awaken thoughts in a Prussian Majesty, were he not in such haste.

* Not Heilsbronn, the well-known, much larger Town, in Würtemberg, 80 or 100 miles to westward. Both names (which are applied to still other places) signify Health-Well, or even Holy-Well, — these two words, Healthy and Holy, being the same in old Teutonic speech.

At Anspach, what a thrice-hospitable youthfully joyful welcome from the young married couple there. Margravine Friderika is still not quite sixteen; “beautiful as Day,” and rather foolish: fancy her joy at sight of Papa’s Majesty and Brother Fritz; and how she dances about, and perhaps bakes “pastries of the finest Anspach flour.” Ah, did you send me Berlin sausages, then, you untrue Papa? Well, I will bake for you, won’t I; — Sarah herself not more loyally (whom we read of in Genesis), that time the Angels entered her tent in a hungry condition! —

Anspach, as we hint, has an unfinished Palace, of a size that might better beseem Paris or London; Palace begun by former Margravs, left off once and again for want of cash; stands there as a sad monument of several things; — the young family living meanwhile in some solid comfortable wing, or adjacent edifice, of natural dimensions. They are so young, as we say, and not too wise. By and by they had a son, and then a second son; which latter came to manhood, to old age; and made some noise in the foolish parts of the Newspapers, — winding up finally at Hammersmith, as we often explain; — and was the last of the Anspach-Baireuth Margraves. I have heard farther that Friderika did not want for temper, as the Hohenzollerns seldom do; that her Husband likewise had his own stock of it, rather scant of wisdom withal; and that their life was not quite symphonious always, — especially cash being short. The Dowager Margravine, Markgraf's Mother, had governed with great prudence during her Son's long minority. I think she is now, since the marriage, gone to reside at her Wittwensitz (Dowager-Seat) of Feuchtwang (twenty miles southwest of us); but may have come up to welcome the Majesties into these parts. Very beautiful, I hear; still almost young and charming, though there is a mortal malady upon her, which she knows of.* Here are certain Seckendorfs too, this is the Feldzeugmeister's native country; — and there are resources for a Royal Travelling-Party. How long the Royal Party staid at Anspach I do not know; nor what they did there, — — except that Crown-Prince Friedrich is said to have privately asked the young Margraf to lend him a pair of riding horses, and say nothing of it; who, suspecting something wrong, was obliged to make protestations and refuse.

15th-31st July 1730.

As to the Crown-Prince, there is no doubt but here at last things are actually coming to a crisis with him. To say truth, it has been the young man's fixed purpose ever since he entered on this Journey, nay was ever since that ignominy in the Camp of Radewitz, to run away; — and indeed all this while he has measures going on with Katte at Berlin of the now-or-never sort. Rash young creatures, neither of them twenty yet; not good at contriving measures. But what then? Human nature cannot stand this always; and it is time there were an end of deliberating. Can we ever have such a chance again? — What I find of certain concerning Friedrich while at Anspach is, That there comes by way of Erlangen, guided forward from that place by the Rittmeister von Katte, a certain messenger and message, which proved of deep importance to his Royal Highness. The messenger was Lieutenant Katte's servant; who has come express from Berlin hither. He inquired, on the road, as he was bidden, at Erlangen, of Master's Cousin, the experienced Rittmeister, Where his Royal Highness at present was, that he might deliver a Letter to him? The Master's Cousin, who answered naturally, "At Anspach," knew nothing, and naturally could get to know nothing, of what the message in this Letter was. But he judged, from cross-questionings, added to dim whispering rumours he had heard, that it was questionable, probably in an extreme degree. Wherefore, along with his Cousin the Lieutenant's messenger to Anspach, the Rittmeister forwarded a Note of his own to Lieutenant-Colonel Rochow, of this purport, "As a friend, I warn you, have a watchful eye on your high charge!" — and, for his own share, determined to let nothing escape him in his corner of the matter. This Note to Rochow, and the Berlin Letter for the Crown-

* Pöllnitz: Memoirs and Letters, i. 209 (date 29th September 1729; — needs watching before believing).

15th-31st July 1730.

Prince reach Anspach by the same hand; Lieutenant Katte's express, conscious of nothing, delivering them both. Rochow and the Rittmeister, though the poor Prince does not know it, are broad awake to all movements he and the rash Lieutenant may make.

Lieutenant Katte, in this Letter now arrived, complains: "That he never yet can get recruiting furlough; "whether it be by accident, or that Rochow has given "my Colonel a hint, no furlough yet to be had: will, "at worst, come without furlough and in spite of all "men and things, whenever wanted. Only — Wesel "still, if I might advise!" This is the substance of Katte's message by express. Date must be the end of July 1730; but neither date nor Letter is now anywhere producible, except from Hearsay.

Deeply pondering these things, what shall the poor Prince do? From Canstatt, close by Stuttgard, a Town on our homeward route, — from Canstatt, where Katte was to "appear in disguise," had the furlough been got, one might have slipt away across the Hills. It is but eighty miles to Strasburg, through the Kniebiss Pass, where the Murg, the Kinzig, and the intricate winding mountain streams and valleys start Rhine-ward: a labyrinthic rock-and-forest country, where pursuit or tracking were impossible. Near by Strasburg is Count Rothenburg's Chateau; good Rothenburg, long Minister in Berlin, — who saw those Profösse, or Scavenger-Executioners in French costume long since, and was always good to me: — might not that be a method? Lieutenant Keith indeed is in Wesel, waiting only a signal. Suppose he went to the Hague, and took soundings there what welcome we should have? No, not till we have actually run; beware of making noise! — The poor Prince is in unutterable perplexity; can only answer Katte by that Messenger of his, to the effect (date and Letter burnt like the former): “Doubt is on every hand; “doubt, — and yet certainty. Will write again before “undertaking anything.”

And there is no question he did write again; more than once: letters by the post, which his faithful Lieutenant Katte in Berlin received; one of which, however, stuck on the road; and this one, — by some industry of postmasters spirited into vigilance, as is likeliest, though others say by mere misaddressing, by “want of Berlin on the address,” — fell into the hands of vigilant Rittmeister Katte at Erlangen. Who grew pale in reading it, and had to resolve on a painful thing! This was, I suppose, among the last Letters of the series; and must have been dated, as I guess, about the 29th of July 1730; but they are now all burnt, huddled rapidly into annihilation, and one cannot say! —

Certain it is that the Royal Travelling Party left Anspach in a few days, to go, southward still, “by the Ettingen Country towards Augsburg.”* Feuchtwang (Wet Wang, not Dürrwang or Dry Wang) is the first stage; here lives the Dowager Margravine of Anspach: here the Prince does some inconceivably small fault, “lets a knife, which he is handing to or from the Serene

* Fassmann, p. 410.

Lady, fall,"* who, as she is weak, may suffer by the jingle; for which Friedrich Wilhelm bursts out on him like the Irish Rebellion, — to the silent despair of the poor Prince. The poor Prince meditates desperate resolutions, but has to keep them strictly to himself.

Doubtless the Buddenbrock Trio, good old military gentlemen, would endeavour to speak comfort to him, when they were on the road again. Here is Nördlingen, your Highness, where Bernhard of Weimar, for his overhaste, got so beaten in the Thirty-Years War; would not wait till the Swedes were rightly gathered: what general, if he have reinforcement at hand, would not wait for it? The waters now, you observe, run all into the Wörnitz, into the Donau: it is a famed war country this; known to me well in my young Eugene-Marlborough days! — "Hm, Ha, yes!" For the Prince is preoccupied with black cares; and thinks Blenheim and the Schellenberg businesses befel long since, and were perhaps simple to what he has now on hand. That Feuchtwang scene, it would appear, has brought him to a resolution. There is a young Page Keith of the party, Lieutenant Keith of Wesel's Brother; of this Page Keith, who is often busy about horses, he cautiously makes question, What help may be in him? A willing mind traceable in this poor lad, but his terrors great.

To Donauwörth from Anspach through Feuchtwang and Nördlingen is some seventy or eighty miles. At Donauwörth one surely ought to lodge, and see the

* Ranke, I. 304 ("from a Letter the Prince had written to Katte").

Schellenberg on the morrow; nay drive to the Field of Höchstädt (Blenheim, Blindheim), which is but a few miles farther up the River? Buddenbrock was there, and Anhalt-Dessau: for their very sake, were there nothing farther, one surely ought to go? Such was the probability, a visit to Blenheim field in passing. And surely, somewhere in those heart-rending masses of Historical Rubbish, I did at last find express evanescent mention of the fact, — but cannot now say where; — the exact record, or conceivable image of which, would have been a perceptible pleasure to us. Alas, in those dim dreary Books, all whirling dismal round one's soul, like vortices of dim Brandenburg sand, how should anything human be searched out and mentioned to us; and a thousand things not-human be searched out, and eternally suppressed from us, for the sake of that? I please myself figuring young Friedrich looking at the vestiges of Marlborough, even in a preoccupied uncertain manner. Your Majesty too, this is the very "Schellenberg (or Jingle-Hill)," this Hill we are now skirting, on highways, on swift wheels; which overhangs Donauwörth, our resting-place this hot July evening. Yes, your Majesty, here was a feat of storming done, — pang, pang! — such a noise as never jingled on that Hill before: like Doomsday come; and a hero-head to rule the Doomsday, and turn it to heroic marching music. A very pretty feat of war, your Majesty! His Majesty well knows it; feat of his Marlborough's doing, famed everywhere for the twenty-six years last past; and will go to see the Schellenberg and its Lines.

15th-31st July 1730.

The great Duke is dead four years; sank sadly, eclipsed under tears of dotage of 'his own, and under human stupidity of other men's! But Buddenbrock is still living, Anhalt-Dessau and others of us are still alive a little while!

Hochstädt itself, — Blenheim, as the English call it, meaning Blindheim, the other village on the Field, — is but a short way up the River; well worth such a detour. By what way they drove to the field of honour and back from it, I do not know. But there, northward towards the heights, is the little wood where Anhalt-Dessau stood at bay like a Molossian dog, of consummate military knowledge; and saved the Fight in Eugene's quarter of it. That is visible enough; and worth looking at. Visible enough the rolling Donau, Marlborough's place; the narrow ground, the bordering Hills all green at this season; — and down old Buddenbrock's cheek, and Anhalt's, there would roll an iron tear or two. Augsburg is but some thirty miles off, once we are across the Donau, — by the Bridge of Donauwörth, or the Ferry of Hochstädt, — swift travellers in a long day, the last of July, are soon enough at Augsburg.

As for Friedrich, haunted and whipt onwards by that scene at Feuchtwang, he is inwardly very busy during this latter part of the route. Probably there is some progress towards gaining Page Keith, Lieutenant Keith of Wesel's Brother; some hope that Page Keith, at the right moment, can be gained: the Lieutenant at Wesel is kept duly advised. To Lieutenant Katte at Berlin Friedrich now writes, I should judge from Donauwörth or Augsburg, "That he has had a scene at "Feuchtwang; that he can stand it no longer. That "Canstatt being given up, as Katte cannot be there to "go across the Kniebiss with us, we will endure, till

"we are near enough the Rhine. Once in the Rhine-
"land, in some quiet Town there, handy for Speyer,
"for French Landau," — say Sinzheim, last stage hitherward of Heidelberg, but this we do not write, — "there "might it not be? Be, somewhere, it shall and must!
"You, Katte, the instant you hear that we are off, speed
"you towards the Hague; ask for 'M. le Comte d'Alber-
"ville;' you will know that gentleman when you see "him: Keith, our Wesel friend, will have taken the pre"liminary soundings; — and I tell you, Count d'Alber-"ville, or news of him, will be there. Bring the great-
"coat with you, and the other things, especially the "1,000 gold ducats. Count d'Alberville at the Hague,
"if all have gone right: — nay if anything go wrong,
"cannot he, once across the Rhine, take refuge in the "convents in those Catholic regions? Nobody, under "the scapulary, will suspect such a heretic as him.
"Speed, silence, vigilance! And so adieu." A letter of such purport Friedrich did write; which Letter, moreover, the Lieutenant Katte received; it was not this, it was another, that stuck upon the road, and fell into the Rittmeister's hand. This is the young Prince's ultimate fixed project, brought to birth by that slight accident of dropping the knife at Feuchtwang;* and hanging

* Ranke, i. 304.

15th-31st July 1730.

heavy on his mind during this Augsburg drive. At Augsburg, furthermore, "he bought, in all privacy, red "cloth, of quantity to make a top-coat;" red, the gray being unattainable in Katte's hands: in all privacy; though the watchful Rochow had full knowledge of it, all the same.

CHAPTER VI.

JOURNEY HOMEWARDS FROM THE REICH; CATASTROPHE ON JOURNEY HOMEWARDS.

THE travelling Majesty of Prussia was diligently up and down, investigating ancient Augsburg; saw, I doubt not, the Fuggerei, or ancient Hospice of the Fuggers — who were once Weavers in those parts, and are now Princes, and were known to entertain Charles V. with fires of cinnamon, nay with transient flames of Bank-bills on one old occasion. Saw all the Fuggeries, I doubt not; the ancient Luther-and-Melanchthon relics, Diet-Halls and notabilities of this renowned Free Town; — perhaps remembered Margraf George, and loud-voiced Kurfürst Joachim with the Bottle-nose (our direct Ancestor, though mistaken in opinion on some points!), who were once so audible there.

One passing phenomenon we expressly know he saw; a human, not a historically important one. Driving through the streets from place to place, his Majesty came athwart some questionable quaint procession, ribbony, perhaps musical; Majesty questioned it: “A wedding procession, your Majesty!” — “Will the Bride step out, then, and let us see how she is dressed!” “Vom Herzen gern; will have the honour.” Bride stepped out, with blushes, — handsome we will hope: Majesty surveyed her, on the streets of Augsburg, having a human heart in him; and (says Fassmann, as if with insidious insinuation) "is said to have made her a present." She went her way; fulfilled her destiny in an anonymous manner: Friedrich Wilhelm, loudly named in the world, did the like; and their two orbits never intersected again. — Some forty-five miles south of Augsburg, up the Wertach River, more properly up the Mindel River, lies Mindelheim, once a name known in England and in Prussia; once the Duke of Marlborough's "Principality:" given him by a grateful Kaiser Joseph; taken from him by a necessitous Kaiser Karl, Joseph's Brother, that now is. I know not if his Majesty remembers that transaction, now while in these localities: but know well, if he does, he must think it a shabby one.

On the same day, 1st August 1730, we quit Augsburg; set out fairly homewards again. The route bends westward this time; towards Frankfurt-on-the-Mayn; there yachts are to be ready; and mere sailing thenceforth, gallantly down the Rhine-stream, — such a yacht-voyage, in the summer weather, with no Tourists yet infesting it, — to end, happily we will hope, at Wesel, in the review of regiments, and other business. First stage, first pause, is to be at Ludwigsburg, and the wicked old Duke of Würtemberg's; thither first from Augsburg. We cross the Donau at Dillingen, at Günzberg, or I know not where; and by tomorrow's sunset, being rapid travellers, find ourselves at Ludwigsburg, — clear through Canstatt, Stuttgard, and certainly no Katte waiting there! Safe across the intermediate uplands, here are we fairly in the Neckar Country, in the Basin of the Rhine again; and old Duke Eberhard Ludwig of Würtemberg bidding us kindly welcome, poor old bewildered creature, who has become the talk of Germany in those times. Will English readers consent to a momentary glance into his affairs and him? Strange things are going on at Ludwigsburg; nay the origin of Ludwigsburg, and that the Duke should be there and not at Stuttgart, is itself strange. Let us take this Excerpt, headed Ludwigsburg in 1730, and then hasten on:

Ludwigsburg in 1730.

“Duke Eberhard Ludwig, now an elderly gentleman of “fifty-four, has distinguished himself in his long reign, not by “political obliquities and obstinacies, though those also were “not wanting, but by matrimonial and amatory; which have “rendered him conspicuous to his fellow-creatures, and still “keep him mentionable in History, briefly and for a sad “reason. Duke Eberhard Ludwig was duly wedded to an ir-“reproachable Princess of Baden-Durlach (Johanna Eliza“beth) upwards of thirty years ago; and he duly produced
“one Son in consequence, with other good results to himself
“and her. But in course of time Duke Eberhard Ludwig “took to consorting with bad creatures; took, in fact, to wash“ing about at random in the pool of amatory iniquity, as if “there had been no law known, or of the least validity, in that “matter.

“Perceiving which, a certain young fellow, Grävenitz by “name, who had come to him from the Mecklenburg regions, “by way of pushing fortune, and had got some pageship or
“the like here in Würtemberg, recollected that he had a “young Sister at home; pretty and artful, who perhaps might “do a stroke of work here. He sends for the young Sister;

“very pretty indeed, and a gentlewoman by birth, though “penniless. He borrows clothes for her (by onerous contract “with the haberdashers, it is said, being poor to a degree);
“he easily gets her introduced to the Ducal Soirees; bids her “— She knows what to do? Right well she knows what;
“catches, with her piquant face, the dull eye of Eberhard “Ludwig, kindles Eberhard Ludwig, and will not for some“thing quench him. Not she at all: How can she; your “Serene Highness, ask her not! A virtuous young lady, she,
“and come of a stainless Family! — In brief, she hooks, she
“of all the fishes in the pool, this lumber of a Duke; enchants “him, keeps him hooked; and has made such a pennyworth of “him, for the last twenty years and more, as Germany cannot “match.* Her Brother Grävenitz the page has become “Count Grävenitz the prime minister, or chief of the Govern“ing Cabal; she Countess Grävenitz and Autocrat of Würtem“berg. Loaded with wealth, with so-called honours, she and “hers, there go they, flaunting sky-high; none else admitted “to more than the liberty of breathing in silence in this “Duchy; — the poor Duke Eberhard Ludwig making no com“plaint; obedient as a child to the bidding of his Grävenitz.
“He is become a mere enchanted simulacrum of a Duke; be“witched under worse than Thessalian spells; without faculty “of willing, except as she wills; his People and he the play“thing of this Circe or Hecate, that has got hold of him. So “it has lasted for above twenty years. Grävenitz has become “the wonder of Germany; and requires, on these bad grounds,
“a slight mention in Human History for some time to come.
“Certainly it is by the Grävenitz alone that Eberhard Ludwig is

* Michaelis, iii. 440.

“remembered: and yet, down since Ulrich with the ‘Thumb,’*
“which of those serene abstruse Beutelsbachers, always an “abstruse obstinate set, has so fixed himself in your memo“ry? — .

“Most persons in Würtemberg, for quiet’s sake, have com“plied with the Grävenitz; though not without protest, and “sometimes spoken protest. Thus the Right Reverend “Osiander (let us name Osiander, Head of the Church in “Würtemberg) flatly refused to have her name inserted in the “Public Prayers: ‘Is not she already prayed for?’ said “Osiander: ‘Do we not say, Deliver us from evil?’ said the in“dignant Protestant man. And there is one other person that “never will comply with her: the lawful Wife of Eberhard “Ludwig. Serene Lady, she has had a sad existence of it;
“the voice of her wrongs audible, to little purpose, this long “while in Heaven and in Earth. But it is not in the power of “reward or punishment to bend her female will in the essential “point: ‘Divorce, your Highness? When I am found guilty, “yes. Till then, never, your Highness, never, never,’ in “steady crescendo tone: — so that his Highness is glad to “escape again, and drop the subject. On which the Serene “Lady again falls silent. Grävenitz, in fact, hopes always to “be wedded with the right, nay were it only with the left “hand: and this Serene Lady stands like a fateful monument “irremovably in the way. The Serene Lady steadily inhabits “her own wing of the Ducal House, would not exchange it for “the Palace of Aladdin; looks out there upon the grand “equipages, high doings, impure splendours of her Duke and “his Grävenitz with a clear-eyed silence, which seems to say “more eloquently than words, ‘Mene, mene, You are weighed!’
“In the Land of Würtemberg, or under the Sun, is no reward,

* Ulricus Pollex (right thumb bigger than left); died, A.D. 1265 (Michaelis, iii. 262).

“or punishment that can abate this silence. Speak of divorce,
“the answer is as above: leave divorce lying, there is silence “looking forth clear-eyed from that particular wing of the “Palace, on things which the gods permit for a time.

“Clear-eyed silence, which, as there was no abating of it, “grew at last intolerable to the two sinners. ‘Let us remove,’
“said the Grävenitz, ‘since her Serene Highness will not:
“build a new charming Palace, — say at our Hunting Seat, “among those pleasant Hills in the Waiblingen region, —
“and take the Court out thither.” And they have done so,
“in these late bad years; taking out with them by degrees all
“the Courtier Gentry, all the Raths, Government Boards, “public businesses; and building new houses for them, there.*
“Founding, in fact, a second Capital for Würtemberg, with “what distress, sulky misery and disarrangement to Stuttgart
“and the old Capital, readers can fancy. There it stands, “that Ludwigsburg, the second Capital of Würtemberg, some “ten or twenty miles from Stuttgart the first; a lasting me“morial of Circe Grävenitz and her Ludwig. Has not she,
“by her incantations, made the stone houses dance out hither?
“It remains to this day a pleasant town, and occasional resi“dence of sovereignty. Waiblingen, within an hour’s ride, has “got memorability on other grounds; — what reader has not “heard of Ghibbelines, meaning Waiblingens? And in another “hour up the River, you will come to Beutelsbach itself, “where Ulrich with the Thumb had his abode (better luck to “him), and generated this Lover of the Grävenitz, and much
“other nonsense loud now and then for the last four centuries
“in the world! —

* “From 1727 to 1730” was this latter removal. A hunting-lodge, of Eberhard Ludwig’s building, and named by him Ludwigsburg, stood here since 1705; nucleus of the subsequent palace, with its “Pheasantries,” its “Favoritas,” &c. &c. The place had originally been monastic (Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, vi. 1519).

“There is something of abstruse in all these Beutels-“bachers, from Ulrich with the Thumb downwards: a mute “ennui, an inexorable obstinacy; a certain streak of natural “gloom which no illumination can abolish. Veracity of all “kinds is great in them; sullen passive courage plenty of it;
“active courage rarer; articulate intellect defective: hence a “strange stiff perversity of conduct visible among them, often “marring what wisdom they have; — it is the royal stamp of “Fate put upon these men. What are called fateful or fated “men; such as are often seen on the top-places of the world, “making an indifferent figure there. Something of this, I “doubt not, is concerned in Eberhard Ludwig’s fascina“tion: and we shall see other instances farther down in this “History.

“But so, for twenty years, the absurd Duke, transformed “into a mere Porcus by his Circe in that scandalous miraculous “manner, has lived; and so he still lives. And his serene “Wife, equally obstinate, is living at Stuttgard, happily out “of his sight now. One Son, a weakly man, who had one “heir, but has now none, is her only comfort. His Wife is a “Prussian Margravine (Friedrich Wilhelm’s Half-Aunt), and “cultivates Calvinism in the Lutheran Country: this Husband “of hers, he too has an abstruse life, not likely to last. We “need not doubt ‘the Fates’ are busy, and the evil demons, “with those poor fellow-beings! Nay it is said the Circe is “becoming much of a Hecate now; if the bewitched Duke “could see it. She is getting haggard beyond the power of “rouge; her mind, any mind she has, more and more filled
“with spleen, malice, and the dregs of pride run sour. A dis“gusting creature, testifies one Ex-Official gentleman, once
“a Hofrath under her, but obliged to run for life, and invoke “free press in his defence:* no end to the foul things she will

* Apologie de Monsieur Forstner de Breitembourg, &c. (Paris, 1716; or “say, of an unspeakable nature, about the very Duke her “victim, testifies this Ex-Official: malicious as a witch, says “he, and as ugly as one in spite of paint, — ‘toujours un lave-

“ment à ses troussees.’ Good Heavens!”

But here is the august Prussian Travelling Party:
shove aside your bewitchments and bewilderments;
hang a decent screen over many things! Poor Eberhard Ludwig, who is infinitely the gentleman, bestirs himself a good deal to welcome old royal friends; nor do we hear that the least thing went awry during this transit of the royalties. “Field of Blenheim, says your Majesty? Ah me!” — For Eberhard Ludwig knows that ground; stood the World-Battle there, and so much has come and gone since then: Ah me, indeed!

Friedrich Wilhelm and he have met before this, and have much to tell one another; Treaty of Seville by no means their only topic. Nay the flood of cordiality went at length so far, that at last Friedrich Wilhelm, the conscientious King, came upon the most intimate topics: Grävenitz; the Word of God; scandal to the Protestant Religion: no likely heir to your Dukedom; clear peril to your own soul. Is not her Serene Highness an unexceptionable Lady, heroic under sore woes; and your wedded Wife above all? —
'M-na, and might bring Heirs too: only forty come “à Londres, aux dépens de la Compagnie, 1745”): in Spittler, Geschichte Württemberg (Spittlers Werke, Stuttgart und Tübingen, 1828; vol. v.), 497-539. Michaelis, iii. 428-439, gives (in abstruse Chancery German) a Sequel to this fine affair of Forstner's.

October: — Ah Duke, ah Friend! Avissez la fin, Eberhard Ludwig; consider the end of it all; we are growing old fellows now! The Duke, I conceive, who was rather a fat little man, blushed blue, then red, and various colours; at length settling into steady pale, as it were, indicating anthracitic white-heat: it is certain he said, at length, with emphasis, "I will!" And he did so by and by. Friedrich Wilhelm sent a messenger to Stuttgard to do his reverence to the high injured Lady there, perhaps to show her afar off some ray of hope if she could endure. Eberhard Ludwig, raised to a white-heat, perceives that in fact he is heartily tired of this Circe-Hecate; that in fact she has long been an intolerable nightmare to him, could he but have known it.

And his Royal Highness the Crown-Prince all this while? Well, yes; his Royal Highness has got a Court Tailor at Ludwigsburg; and, in all privacy (seen well by Rochow), has had the Augsburg red cloth cut into a fine upper wrappage, overcoat or roquelaure for himself; intending to use the same before long. Thus they severally, the Father and the son; these are their known acts at Ludwigsburg, That the Father persuaded Eberhard Ludwig of the Grävenitz enormity, and that the Son got his red topcoat ready. On Thursday, 3d of August (late in the afternoon, as I perceive), they, well entertained, depart toward Mannheim, Kur-Pfalz (Elector Palatine) old Karl Philip of the Pfalz's place; hope to be there on the morrow some time, if all go well. Gloomy much enlightened Eberhard takes leave of them, with abstruse but grateful feelings; will stand by the Kaiser, and dismiss that Grävenitz nightmare by the first opportunity.

As accordingly he did. Next summer, going on a visit northward, specially to Berlin,* he left order that the Grävenitz was to be got out of his sight, safe stowed away, before his return. Which by the proper officers, military certain of them, was accomplished, — by fixed bayonets at last, and not without futile demur on the part of the Grävenitz. Poor Eberhard Ludwig, "he published in the pulpits, That he was now minded to lead a better life," — had time now been left him. Same year, 1731, November being come, gloomy Eberhard Ludwig lost, not unexpectedly, his one Son, — the one Grandson was gone long since. The serene steadfast Duchess now had her Duke again, what was left of him: but he was fallen into the sere and yellow leaf; in two years more, he died childless; and his younger Brother, Karl Alexander, an Austrian Feldmarschall of repute, succeeded in Würtemberg. With whom we may transiently meet, in time coming; with whom, and perhaps less pleasantly with certain of his children; for they continue to this day, — with the old abstruse element still too traceable in them.

Old Karl Philip, Kurfürst of the Pfalz, towards whom Friedrich Wilhelm is now driving, with intent to be there tomorrow evening, is not quite a stranger to readers here; and to Friedrich Wilhelm he is much the reverse, perhaps too much. This is he who ran away with poor Prince Sobieski's Bride from Berlin, at starting in life, who fell upon his own poor Protestant Heidelbergers and their Church of the Holy Ghost (being himself Papist, ever since that slap on the face to his ancestor); and who has been in many quarrels with Friedrich Wilhelm and others. A high expensive sovereign gentleman, this old Karl Philip; not, I should suppose, the pleasantest of men to lodge with. One apprehends, he cannot be peculiarly well disposed to Friedrich Wilhelm, after that sad Heidelberg passage of fence, twelve or eleven years ago. Not to mention the inextricable Jülich-and-Berg business, which is a standing controversy between them.

* There for some three weeks, "till 9th June 1731, with a suite of above fifty persons" (Fassmann, pp. 421, 422).

 31st October 1733, Michaelis, iii. 441.

Poor old Kurfürst, he is now within a year of seventy. He has had crosses and losses; terrible campaignings against the Turk, in old times; and always such a stock of quarrels, at home, as must have been still worse to bear. A life of perpetual arguing, squabbling and battling, — one's neighbours being such an unreasonable set! Brabbles about Heidelberg Catechism, and Church of the Holy Ghost, so that foreign Kings interfered, shaking their whips upon us. Then brabbles about boundaries; about inheritances, and detached properties very many, — clearly mine, were the neighbours reasonable! In fact this sovereign gentleman has been in the Kaiser's courts, or even the edge of fight, oftener than most other men; and it is as if that first adventure, of the Sobieski wedding turned topsyturvy, had been symbolical of much that followed in his life.

We remember that unpleasant Heidelberg affair; how hopeful it once looked; fact done, Church of the Holy Ghost fairly ours; your Corpus Evangelicorum fallen quasi-dead; and nothing now for it but protocolling by diplomatists, pleading in the Diets by men in bombazeen, never like ending at all; — when Friedrich Wilhelm did suddenly end it; suddenly locked-up his own Catholic establishments and revenues, and quietly inexorable put the key in his pocket; as it were, drew his own whip, with a “Will you whip my Jew?” — and we had to cower out of the affair, Kaiser himself ordering us, in a most humiliated manner! Readers can judge whether Kur-Pfalz was likely to have a kindly note of Friedrich Wilhelm in that corner of his memory. The poor man felt so disgusted with Heidelberg, he quitted it soon after. He would not go to Düsseldorf (in the Berg-and-Jülich quarter), as his Forefathers used to do; but set up his abode at Mannheim, where he still is. Friedrich Wilhelm, who was far from meaning harm or insolence in that Heidelberg affair, hopes there is no grudge remaining. But so stand the facts: it is towards Mannheim, not towards Heidelberg that we are now travelling! — For the rest, this scheme of reprisals, or whipping your Jew if you whip mine, answered so well, Friedrich Wilhelm has used it, or threatened to use, as the real method, ever since, where needful; and has saved thereby much bombazeen eloquence, and confusion to mankind, on several occasions.

But the worst between these two High Gentlemen is that Jülich-and-Berg controversy; which is a sore still running, and beyond reach of probable surgery. Old Karl Philip has no male Heir; and is like to be (what he indeed proved) the last of the Neuburg Electors Palatine. What trouble there rose with the first of them, about that sad business; and how the then Brandenburger, much wrought upon, smote the then Neuburger across the very face and drove him into Catholicism, we have not forgotten; how can we ever? — It is one Hundred and sixteen years since that after-dinner scene; and, O Heavens, what bickering and brabbling and confused negotiation there has been; lawyers' pens going almost continually ever since, shadowing out the mutual darkness of sovereignties; and from time to time the military implements brandishing themselves, though loth generally to draw blood! For a Hundred and sixteen years: — but the Final Bargain, lying in parchment in the archives of both parties, and always acknowledged as final, was to this effect: "You, serene Neuburg, keep what you have got; we serene Brandenburg the like: Cleve with detached pertinents ours; Jülich and Berg mainly yours. And let us live in perpetual amity on that footing. And, note only furthermore, when our Line fails, the whole of these fine Duchies shall be yours: if your Line fail, ours." That was the plain bargain, done solemnly in 1624, and again more solemnly and brought to parchment with signature in 1666, as Friedrich Wilhelm knows too well. And now the very case is about to occur; this old man, childless at seventy, is the last of the Neuburgs. May not one reasonably pretend that a bargain should be kept?

"Tush," answers old Karl Philip always: "Bargain?" And will not hear reason against himself on the subject; not even when the Kaiser asks him, — as the Kaiser really did, after that Wusterhausen Treaty, but could get only negatives. Karl Philip has no romantic ideas of justice, or of old parchments tying up a man. Karl Philip had one Daughter by that dear Radzivil Princess, Sobieski's stolen Bride; and he never, by the dear Radzivil or her dear successor,* had any son, or other daughter that lived to wed. One daughter, we say; a first-born, extremely precious to him. Her he married to the young fortunate Sulzbach Cousin, Karl Joseph Heir-Apparent of Sulzbach, who by all laws, was to succeed in the Pfalz as well, — Karl Philip thinking furthermore, "He and she, please Heaven, shall hold fast by Düsseldorf too, and that fine Jülich-and-Berg Territory; which is mine. Bargains?" Such was, and is, the old man's inflexible notion. Alas, this one Daughter died lately and her Husband lately; again leaving only Daughters: will not this change the notion? Not a whit, — though Friedrich Wilhelm may have fondly hoped it by

* See Buchholz, i. 61 n.

 She in 1728; he, 1729: their eldest Daughter was born, 1721 (Lübner, t. 140; Michaelis, ii. 101, 123).

possibility might. Not a whit: Karl Philip cherishes his little Granddaughter, now a child of nine, as he did her Mother and her Mother's Mother; hopes one day to see her wedded (as he did) to a new Heir-Apparent of the Pfalz and Sulzbach; and, for her behoof, will hold fast by Berg and Jülich, and part with no square inch of it for any parchment.

What is Friedrich Wilhelm to do? Seek justice for himself by his 80,000 men and the iron ramrods? Apparently he will not get it otherwise. He is loth to begin that terrible game. If indeed Europe do take fire, as is likely at Seville or elsewhere — But in the mean while how happy if negotiation would but serve! Alas, and if the Kaiser, England, Holland, and the others, could be brought to guarantee me, — as indeed they should (to avoid a casus belli), and some of them have said they will! Friedrich Wilhelm tried this Jülich-and-Berg Problem by the pacific method, all his life; strenuously, and without effect. Result perhaps was coming, nevertheless; at the distance of another hundred years! One thing I know: whatever rectitude and patience, whatever courage, perseverance, or other human virtue he has put into this or another matter, is not lost; not it nor any fraction of it, to Friedrich Wilhelm and his sons' sons; but will well avail him and them, if not soon, then later, if not in Berg and Jülich, then in some other quarter of the Universe, which is a wide Entity and a long-lived! Courage, your Majesty!

So stand matters as Friedrich Wilhelm journeys towards Mannheim: human politeness will have to cloak well, and keep well down, a good many prickly points in the visit ahead. Alas, poor Friedrich Wilhelm has got other matter to think of, by the time we arrive in Mannheim.

Catastrophe on Journey Homewards.

The Royal Party, quitting Ludwigsburg, — on Thursday 3d August 1730, some hours after dinner, as I calculate it, — had but a rather short journey before them: journey to a place called Sinzheim, some fifty or sixty miles; a long way short of Heidelberg; the King's purpose being to lodge in that dilapidated silent Town of Sinzheim, and leave both Heidelberg and Mannheim, with their civic noises, for the next day's work. Sinzheim, such was the program, as the Prince and others understood it; but by some accident, or on better calculation, it was otherwise decided in the royal mind: not at Sinzheim, intricate decayed old Town, shall we lodge tonight, but five or six miles short of it, in the naturally silent Village of Steinfurth, where good clean empty Barns are to be found. Which latter is a favourite method of his Majesty, fond always of free air and the absence of fuss. Shake-downs, a temporary cooking apparatus, plenty of tobacco, and a tub to wash in: this is what man requires, and this without difficulty can be got. His Majesty's tastes are simple; simple, and yet good and human. Here is a small Royal Order which I read once, and ever since remember, — though the reference is now blown away, and lost in those unindexed Sibylline Farragos, the terror of human nature; — let us copy it from memory, till some deliverer arise with finger on page.* “At “Magdeburg, on this Review-Journey, have dinner for “me, under a certain Tree you know of, outside the “ramparts.” Dinner of one sound portion solid, one ditto liquid, of the due quality; readied honestly, — and to be eaten under a shady Tree; on the Review-ground itself, with the summer sky over one’s head. Could Jupiter Tonans, had he been travelling on business in those parts, have done better with his dinner? —

“At Sinzheim?” thinks his Royal Highness; and has spoken privily to the Page Keith. To glide out of their quarters there, in that waste negligent old Town (where post-horses can be had), in the gray of the summer’s dawn? Across the Rhine to Speyer is but three-hours riding; thence to Landau, into France, into —? Enough, Page Keith has undertaken to get horses, and the flight shall at last be. Husht, husht. Tomorrow morning, before the sparrow wake, it is our determination to be upon the road!

Ruins of the Tower of Stauffen, Hohen or High Stauffen, where Kaiser Barbarossa lived once, young and ruddy, and was not yet a Myth “winking and

* Probably in Rödenbeck’s Beyträge, — but long sad searching there, and elsewhere, proves unavailing at present. Historical Farragos without Index; a hundred, or several hundred, blind sacks of Historical clippings, generally authentic too if useless, and not the least scrap of label on them: — are not these a handy article!

nodding under the Hill at Salzburg," — yes, it is but a few miles to the left there, were this a deliberate touring party. But this is a rapid driving one; knows nothing about Stauffen, cares nothing. — We cannot fancy Friedrich remembered Barbarossa at all; or much regarded Heilbronn itself, the principal and only famous Town they pass this day. The St. Kilian's Church, your Highness, and big stone giant at the top of the steeple yonder, — adventurous masons and slater people get upon the crown of his head, sometimes, and stand waving flags.* The Townhouse too (Rathhaus), with its amazing old Clock? And Götz von Berlichingen, the Town-Councillors once had him in prison for one night, in the "Götz's Tower" here; your Highness has heard of "Götz with the Iron Hand"? Berlichingens still live at Jaxthausen, farther down the Neckar-Valley, in these parts; and show the old Hand, considerably rusted now. Heilbronn, the most famous City on the Neckar; and its old miraculous Holy Well —? What cares his Highness! Weinsberg again, which is but a few miles to the right of us, — there it was that the Besieged Wives did that astonishing feat, 600 years ago: coming out, as the capitulation bore, "with their most valuable property," each brought her Husband on her back (were not the fact a little uncertain!) — whereby the old Castle has, to this day, the name "Weibertreue, Faithfulness of Women." Welf's Duchess, Husband on back, was at the head of those women; a Hohenzollern ancestor of yours, I think I have heard, was of the besieging party.* Alas, thinks his Royal Highness, is there not a flower of Welfdom now in England; and I, unluckiest of Hohenzollerns, still far away from her here! It is at Windsor, not in Weinsberg, or among the ruins of Weibertreue there, that his Highness wishes to be.

* Buddäns, Lexicon, II. § Heilbronn.

At Heilbronn our road branches off to the left; and we roll diligently towards Sinzheim, calculating to be there before nightfall. Whew! Something has gone awry at Sinzheim: no right lodging in the waste Inns there; or good clean Barns, of a promising character, are to be had nearer than there: we absolutely do not go to Sinzheim tonight; we are to stop at Steinfurth, a small quiet Hamlet with Barns, four or five miles short of that! This was a great disappointment to the Prince, — and some say, a highly momentous circumstance in his History: — however, he rallies in the course of the evening; speaks again to Page Keith. “Steinfurth” (Stony-ford, over the Brook here); “be it at Steinfurth, all the same!” Page Keith will manage to get horses for us here, no less. And Speyer and the Ferry of the Rhine are within three hours. Favour us, Silence and all ye good genii! —

* Siege is notorious enough; A.D. 1140: Köhler, Reichshistorie, p. 167, who does not mention the story of the women; Menzel (Wolfgang), Geschichte der Deutschen, p. 287, who takes no notice that it is a highly mythical story, — supported only by the testimony of one poor Monk in Köln, vaguely chronicling fifty years after date, and at that good distance.

 “Might perhaps have succeeded at Sinzheim” (Seckendorf’s Relation of the Crown-Prince’s Meditated Flight, p. 2; — addressed to Prince Eugene few days afterwards; given in Förster, iii. 1-18).

On Friday morning, 4th August 1730, "usual hour of starting, 3 A.M." not being yet come, the Royal Party lies asleep in two clean airy Barns, facing one another, in the Village of Steinfurth; Barns facing one another, with the Heidelberg Highway and Village Green asleep in front between them;* for it is little after two in the morning, the dawn hardly beginning to break. Prince Friedrich, with his Trio of Vigilance, Buddenbrock, Waldau, Rochow, lies in one Barn; Majesty, with his Seckendorf and party, is in the other: apparently all still locked in sleep? Not all: Prince Friedrich, for example, is awake; — the Trio is indeed audibly asleep; unless others watch for them, their six eyes are closed. Friedrich cautiously rises; dresses; takes his money, his new red roquelaure, unbolts the Barn-door, and walks out. Trio of Vigilance is sound asleep, and knows nothing; alas, Trio of Vigilance, while its own six eyes are closed, has appointed another pair to watch.

Gummersbach the Valet comes to Rochow's bolster: 'Hst, Herr Oberst-Lieutenant, please awaken! Prince-Royal is up, has on his topcoat, and is gone out of doors!' Rochow starts to his habiliments, or perhaps has them ready on; in a minute or two, Rochow also is forth into the gray of the morning; — finds the young Prince actually on the Green there; in his red roquelaure, leaning pensively on one of the travelling carriages. "Guten Morgen, Ihro Königliche Hoheit!"* — Fancy such a salutation, to the young man! Page Keith, at this moment, comes with a pair of horses, too: "Whither with the nags, Sirrah?" Rochow asked with some sharpness. Keith seeing how it was, answered without visible embarrassment, "Herr, they are mine and Kunz the Page's horses" (which, I suppose, is true); — "ready at the usual hour!" Keith might add. — "His Majesty does not go till five this morning; — back to the stables!" beckoned Rochow; and according to the best accounts, did not suspect anything, or affected not to do so.

* Compare Wilhelmina, i. 259 (her Account of the Flight: "Heard it from my Brother," — and report it loosely after a dozen years!).

Page Keith returned, trembling in his saddle. Friedrich strolled towards the other Barn, — at least to be out of Rochow's company. Seckendorf emerges from the other Barn; awake at the common hour: "How do you like his Royal Highness in the red roquelaure?" asks Rochow, as if nothing had happened. Was there ever such a baffled Royal Highness; or young bright spirit chained in the Bear's Den in this manner? Our Steinfurth project has gone to water; and it is not to-day we shall get across the Rhine! — Not today; nor any other day, on that errand, strong as our resolutions are! For new light, in a few hours afterwards, pours in upon the project; and human finesse, or ulterior schemes, avail nothing henceforth. "The Crown-Prince's meditated Flight" has tried itself, and failed. Here and so that long meditation ends; this at Steinfurth was all the overt-act it could ever come to. In few hours more it will melt into air; and only the terrible consequences will remain! —

* Ranke, i. 305.

By last night's arrangement, the Prince with his Trio was to set out an hour before his Father; which circumstance had helped Page Keith in his excuses. Naturally the Prince had now no wish to linger on the Green of Steinfurth, in such a posture of affairs: "Towards Heidelberg, then; let us see the big Tun there: allons!" How the young Prince and his Trio did this day's journey; where he loitered, what he saw, said or thought, we have no account: it is certain only that his Father, who set out from Steinfurth an hour after him, arrived in Mannheim several hours before him: and, in spite of Kurfürst Karl Philip's welcome, testified the liveliest inquietude on that unaccountable circumstance. Beautiful Rhine-stream, thrice-beautiful trim Mannheim; — yes, all is beautiful indeed, your Serenity! But where can the Prince be? he kept ejaculating. And Karl Philip had to answer what he could. Of course the Prince may be lingering about Heidelberg, looking at the big Tun and other miracles: — "I had the pleasure to repair that world-famous Tub or Tun, as your Majesty knows; which had lain half-burnt, ever since Louis XIV. with his firebrand robberies lay upon us, and burnt the Pfalz in whole, small honour to him! I repaired the 'Tun:* it is probably the successfulest feat I did hitherto; and well worth looking at, had your Majesty had time!" — "Ja wohl; — but he came away an hour before me!" — The polite Karl Philip, at length, sent off one of his own Equerries to ride towards Heidelberg, or even to Steinfurth if needful, and see what was become of the Prince. This Official person met the Prince, all in order, at no great distance; and brought him safe to Papa's presence again.

* Köhler, Münzbelustigungen (viii. 418-424; 145-152), who gives a view of the world's wonder, lying horizontal with stairs running up to it. Big Tuns of that kind were not uncommon in Germany; and had uses, &c.

Why Papa was in such a fuss about this little circumstance? Truly there has something come to Papa's knowledge since he started, perhaps since he arrived at Mannheim. Page Keith, who rides always behind the King's coach, has ridden this day in an agony of remorse and terror; and at length (probably in Mannheim, once his Majesty is got to his Apartments, or now that he finds his Majesty so anxious there), has fallen on his knees, and with tears and obtestations, — made a clean breast. Page Keith has confessed that the Crown-Prince and he were to have been in Speyer, or farther, at this time of the day; flying rapidly into France. "God's Providence alone prevented it! Pardon, pardon: slay me, your Majesty; but there is the naked truth, and the whole of it, and I have nothing more to say!" Hereupon ensues despatch of the Equerry; and hereupon, as we may conjecture, the Equerry's return with Fritz and the Trio is an unspeakable relief to Friedrich Wilhelm.

tiplex dues of wine were to be paid in natura: the Heidelberg, the biggest of them, is small to the Whitbread-and-Company, for porter's ale, in our time.

Friedrich Wilhelm now summons Buddenbrock and Company straightway; shows, in a suppressed-volcanic manner, with questions and statements, — obliged to suppress oneself in foreign hospitable Serene Houses, — what atrocity of scandal and terror has been on the edge of happening: "And you three, Rochow, Waldan, Buddenbrock, mark it, you three are responsible; and shall answer, I now tell you, with your heads. Death the penalty, unless you bring him to our own Country again, — 'living or dead,'" added the Suppressed-Volcano, in low metallic tone; and the sparkling eyes of him, the red tint, and rustling gestures, make the words too credible to us.*

What Friedrich Wilhelm got to speak about with the old Kur-Pfalz, during their serene passages of hospitality at Mannheim, is not very clear to me; his Prussian Majesty is privately in such a desperate humour, and the old Kur-Pfalz privately so discrepant on all manner of points, especially on the Jülich-and-Berg point. They could talk freely about the old Turk Campaigns, Battle of Zentha, and Prince Eugene; very freely about the Heidelberg Tun. But it is known old Karl Philip had his agents at the Congress of Soissons, to secure that Berg-and-Jülich interest for the Salzbachs and him; directly in the teeth of Friedrich

* Ranke, i. 307.

 11th September 1697; Eugene's crowning feat; — breaking of the Grand Turk's back in this world; who has staggered about, less and less of a terror and outrage, more and more of a nuisance growing unbearable, ever since that day. See Hormayr (iii. 97-101) for some description of this useful bit of Heroism.

Wilhelm. How that may have gone, since the Treaty of Seville broke out to astonish mankind, — will be unsafe to talk about. For the rest, old Karl Philip has frankly adopted the Pragmatic Sanction; but then he has, likewise, privately made league with France to secure him in that Jülich-and-Berg matter, should the Kaiser break promise; — league which may much obstruct said Sanction. Nay privately he is casting glances on his Bavarian Cousin, elegant ambitious Karl Albert Kurfürst of Baiern, — are not we all from the same Wittelsbach stock, Cousins from of old? — and will undertake, for the same Jülich-and-Berg object, to secure Bavaria in its claims on the Austrian Heritages in defect of Heirs Male in Austria.* Which runs directly into the throat of said Pragmatic Sanction; and engages to make it mere waste sheepskin, so to speak! Truly old Karl Philip has his abstruse outlooks, this way, that way; most abstruse politics altogether: — and in fact we had better speak of the Battle of Zentha and the Heidelberg Tun, while this Visit lasts.

On the morrow, Saturday August 5th, certain Frenchmen from the Garrison of Landau come across to pay their court and dine. Which race of men Friedrich Wilhelm does not love; and now less than ever, gloomily suspicious they may be come on parricide Fritz's score, — you Rochow and Company keep an eye! By night and by day an eye upon him! Friedrich Wilhelm was no doubt glad to get away on the morrow afternoon; fairly out into the Berg-Strasse, into the summer breezes and umbrageous woods, with all his pertinents still safe about him; rushing towards Darmstadt through the Sunday stillness, where he will arrive in the evening, time enough.*

* Michaelis. ii. 99-101.

The old Prince of Darmstadt, Ernst Ludwig, Landgraf of Hessen-Darmstadt, age now sixty-three, has a hoary venerable appearance, according to Pöllnitz, "but sits a horse well, walks well, and seems to enjoy perfect health," — which we are glad to hear of. What more concerns us, "he lives usually, quite retired, "in a small house upon the Square," in this extremely small Metropolis of his, "and leaves his Heir-Apparent "to manage all business in the Palace and elsewhere." Poor old Gentleman, he has the biggest Palace almost in the world; only he could not finish it for want of funds; and it lies there, one of the biggest futilities, vexatious to look upon. No doubt the old Gentleman has had vexations, plenty of them, first and last. He is now got disgusted with the affairs of public life, and addicts himself very much to "turning ivory," as the more eligible employment. He lives in that small house of his, among his turning-lathes and ivory shavings; dines in said small house, "at a table for four persons:" only on Sunday, and above all on this Sunday, puts off his apron; goes across to the Palace; dines there, in state, with his Heir and the Gr^{and} 1

* "Sunday Evening arrive at Darmstadt," says Seckendorf
iii. 3), but by mistake calls it the "7th" instead of "6th."

 Pöllnitz, Memoirs and Letters, ii. 66.

He has a kinship by affinity to Friedrich Wilhelm; his Wife (dead long years since), Mother of this Heir-Apparent, was an Anspach Princess, Aunt to the now Queen Caroline of England. Poor old fellow, these insignificancies, and that he descends direct from Philip the Magnanimous of Hessen (Luther's Philip, who insisted on the supplementary Wife), are all I know of him; and he is somewhat tragic to me there, turning ivory in this extremely anarchic world. What the passages between him and Friedrich Wilhelm were, on this occasion, shall remain conjectural to all creatures. Friedrich Wilhelm said, this Sunday evening at Darmstadt, to his own Prince: "Still here, then? I thought "you would have been in Paris by this time!" — To which the Prince, with artificial firmness, answered, He could certainly, if he had wished;* and being familiar with reproaches, perhaps hoped it was nothing.

From Darmstadt to Frankfurt-on-the-Mayn is not quite forty miles, an easy morning drive; through the old Country called of Katzenellenbogen; Cat's-Elbow, a name ridiculous to hear. Berg-Strasse and the Odenwald (Forest of the Otte) are gone; but blue on the northeast yonder, if your Royal Highness will please to look, may be seen summits of the Spessart, a much grander Forest, — tall branchy timbers yonder, one day to be masts of admirals, when floated down as far as Rotterdam, whitherward one still meets them going. Spessart; — and nearer, well hidden on the right, is an obscure village called Dettingen, not yet become famous in the Newspapers of an idle world; of an England surely very idle to go thither seeking quarrels! All which is, naturally, in the highest degree indifferent to a Crown-Prince so preoccupied. — They reach Frankfurt, Monday, still in good time.

* Seckendorf (in Förster, iii.), p. 3.

 Cattimelibocum, that is, Cattûm-Melibocum (Catti a famed Nation, Melibocum the chief Hill or Fortress of their Country), is said to be the original; — which has got changed; like Aballaba into "Appleby," or God ~~encompass~~ us into "The Goat and Compasses," among ourselves.

Behold, at Frankfurt, the Trio of Vigilance, Buddenbrock and Company (horrible to think of!) signify, "That we have the King's express orders Not to enter the Town at all with your Royal Highness. We, for our part, are to go direct into one of the Royal Yachts, which swing at anchor here, and to wait in the same till his Majesty have done seeing Frankfurt, and return to us." Here is a message for the poor young Prince: Detected, prisoner, and a volcanic Majesty now likely to be in full play when he returns! — Gilt weathercock on the Mayn Bridge (which one Goethe used to look at, in the next generation) — this, and the steeple-tops of Frankfurt, especially that steeple-top with the grinning scull of the mutinous malefactor on it, warning to mankind what mutiny leads to: this, then, is what we are to see of Frankfurt; and with such a symphony as our thoughts are playing in the background. Unhappy Son, unhappy Father, once more!

Nay Friedrich Wilhelm got new lights in Frankfurt: Rittmeister Katte had an estafette waiting for him there. Estafette with a certain Letter, which the Ritt-meister had picked up in Erlangen, and has shot across by estafette to wait his Majesty here. Majesty has read with open eyes and throat: Letter from the Crown-Prince to Lieutenant Katte in Berlin: treasonous Flight-project now indisputable as the sun at noon! — His Majesty stept on board the Yacht in such humour as was never seen before: “Detestable rebel and deserter, scandal of scandals — !” — it is confidently written everywhere (though Seckendorf diplomatically keeps silence), his Majesty hustled and tussled the unfortunate Crown-Prince, poked the handle of his cane into his face and made the nose bleed, — “Never did a Brandenburg face suffer the like of this!” cried the poor Prince, driven to the edge of mad ignition and one knows not what: when the Buddenbrocks, at whatever peril, interfered; got the Prince brought on board a different Yacht; and the conflagration moderated for the moment. The Yachts get under way towards Maintz and down the Rhine-stream. The Yachts glide swiftly on the favouring current, taking advantage of what wind there may be: were we once ashore at Wesel in our own country, — wait till then, thinks his Majesty!

And so it was on these terms that Friedrich made his first acquaintance with the beauties of the Rhine; — readers can judge whether he was in a temper very open to the picturesque. I know not that they paused at Maintz, or recollected Barbarossa’s World-Tournament or the Hochheim vineyards at all: I see the young man's Yacht dashing in swift gallop, not without danger, through the Gap of Bingen; dancing wildly on the boiling whirlpools of St. Goar, well threading the cliffs; — the young man gloomily insensible to danger of life, and charm of the picturesque. Coblenz (Confluentia), the Moselle and Ehrenbreitstein: Majesty, smoking on deck if he like, can look at these through grimly pacifying tobacco; but to the Crown-Prince life itself is fallen haggard and bankrupt.

Over against Coblenz, nestled-in between the Rhine and the foot of Ehrenbreitstein,* there, perhaps even now, in his Hunting-Lodge of Kerlich yonder, is his Serene Highness the fat little Kurfürst of Trier, one of those Austrian Schönborns (Brother to him of Bamberg); upon whom why should we make a call? We are due at Bonn; the fortunate young Kurfürst of Köln, richest Pluralist in the Church, expects us at his Residence there. Friedrich Wilhelm views the fine Fortress of Ehrenbreitstein: — what would your Majesty think if this were to be yours in a hundred years; this and much else, by way of compound-interest for the Berg-and-Jülich and other out-standing debts? Courage, your Majesty! — On the fat little Kurfürst, at Kerlich here, we do not call: probably out hunting; "hunts every day," as if it were his trade, poor little soul.

At Bonn, where we do step ashore to lodge with a lean Kurfürst, Friedrich Wilhelm strictly charges, in my (Seckendorf's) hearing, the Trio of Vigilance to have an eye; to see that they bring the Prince on board again, "living or dead." — No fear, your Majesty. Prince listened with silent, almost defiant patience, "mit grosser Geduld."* At Bonn the Prince contrived to confide to Seckendorf, "That he had in very truth "meant to run away: he could not, at the age he was "come to, stand such indignities, actual strokes as in "the Camp of Radewitz; — and he would have gone "long since, had it not been for the Queen and the "Princess his Sister's sake. He could not repent what "he had done: and if the King did not cease beating "him in that manner, &c., he would still do it. For "loss of his own life, such a life as his had grown, he "cared little; his chief misery was, that those Officers "who had known of the thing should come to misfortune by his means. If the King would pardon these "poor gentlemen, he would tell him everything. For "the rest, begged Seckendorf to help him in this labyrinth; — nothing could ever so oblige him as help "now;" and more of the like sort. These things he said, at Bonn, to Seckendorf, the fountain of all his woes. What Seckendorf's reflections on this his sad handiwork now were, we do not know. Probably he made none, being a strong-minded case-hardened old stager; but resolved to do what he could for the poor youth. Somewhere on this route, at Bonn more likely than elsewhere, Friedrich wrote in pencil three words to Lieutenant Keith at Wesel, and got it to the Post-

* Pöllnitz, Memoirs and Letters, iii. 180.

 Büsching, Beyträge, iv. 201.

* Seckendorf (in Förster, iii. 4).

 Ib. iii. 4.

Office: "Sauvez-vous, tout est découvert (All is found out; — away)!"*

Clement August, expensive Kurfürst of Köln (Elector of Cologne, as we call it), who does the hospitalities here at Bonn, in a grand way, with "above a hundred and fifty chamberlains" for one item,—glance at him, reader; perhaps we shall meet the man again. He is younger Brother of the elegant ambitious Karl Albert, Kurfürst of Bavaria, whom we have transiently heard of: sons both of them are of that "Elector of Bavaria" who haunts us in the Marlborough Histories, — who joined Louis XIV. in the Succession War, and got hunted about at such a rate, after Blenheim especially. His Boys, prisoners of the Kaiser, were bred up in a confiscated state, as sons of a mere private gentleman; nothing visibly ahead of them, at one time, but an obscure and extremely limited destiny of that kind; — though now again, on French favour, and the turn of Fortune's inconstant wheel, they are mounting very high. Bavaria came all back to the old Elector of Bavaria; even Marlborough's "Principality of Mindelheim" came. And the present Kurfürst, who will not do the Pragmatic Sanction at all, — Kurfürst Karl Albert of Baiern, our old Karl Philip of Mannheim's genealogical "Cousin;" — we heard of abstruse colleaguings there,

* Wilhelmina (i. 265) says it was a Page of the Old Dessauer's, a comrade of Keith's, who, having known in time, gave him warning.

 At the Peace of Baden (corollary to Utrecht), 1714. Elector had been "banned" (gedächt, solemnly drummed out), 1706; nothing but French pay to live upon, till he got back: died, 26th February 1726, when Karl Albert succeeded (Michaelis, ii. 255).

tendencies to break the Pragmatic Sanction altogether, and reduce it to waste sheepskin! Not impossible Karl Albert will go high enough. And this Clement August the cadet, he is Kurfürst of Köln; by good election-tactics, and favour of the French, he has managed to succeed an Uncle here: has succeeded at Osnabrück in like fashion; — poor old Ernst August of Osnabrück (to whom we once saw George I. galloping to die, and who himself soon after died), his successor is this same Clement August, the turn for a Catholic Bishop being come at Osnabrück, and the French being kind. Kurfürst of Köln, Bishop of Osnabrück, ditto of Paderborn and Münster, ditto now of Hildesheim; richest Pluralist of the Church. Goes about here in a languid expensive manner; “in green coat trimmed with narrow “silver-lace, small bagwig done with French garniture “(Schleife) in front; and has red heels to his shoes.” A lanky indolent figure, age now thirty; “tall and slouching of person, long lean face, hook nose, black beard, “mouth somewhat open.”* Has above one hundred and fifty chamberlains; — and, I doubt not, is inexpressibly wearisome to Friedrich Wilhelm in his Majesty’s present mood. Patience for the moment, and politeness above all things! — The Trio of Vigilance had no difficulty with Friedrich; brought him on board safe again next day, and all proceeded on their voyage;

* Büsching (Beyträge, iv. 201-204: from a certain Travelling Tutor’s Ms. Diary of 1731; where also is detail of the Kurfürst’s mode of Dining, — elaborate but dreary, both mode and detail). His Schloss is now the Bonn University.

the Kurfürst in person politely escorting as far as Köln.

Köln, famed old City of the Three Kings, with its famed Cathedral where those three gentlemen are buried, here the Kurfürst ceases escorting; and the flat old City is left, exciting what reflections it can. The architectural Dilettanti of the world gather here; St. Ursula and her Eleven Thousand Virgins were once massacred here, your Majesty; an English Princess she, it is said. "Narrenpossen (Pack of nonsense)!" grumbles Majesty. — Pleasant Düsseldorf is much more interesting to his Majesty; the pleasant Capital of Berg, which ought to be ours, if right could be done; if old Pfalz would give up his crotchets; and the bowls, in the big game playing at Seville and elsewhere, would roll fair! Düsseldorf and that fine Palace of the Pfaltzers, which ought to be mine; — and here next is Kaiserswerth, a place of sieges, cannonadings, known to those I knew. 'M-na, from father to son and grandson, it goes on, and there is no end to trouble and war! —

His Majesty's next lodging is at Mörs; old gaunt Castle in the Town of Mörs, which (thanks to Leopold of Anhalt-Dessau and the Iron Ramrods) is now his Majesty's, in spite of the Dutch. There the lodging is, at an hour's drive westward from the Rhine-shore: — where his Majesty quitted the River, I do not know; nor whether the Crown-Prince went to Mörs with him, or waited in his Yacht; but guess the latter. His Majesty intends for Geldern on the morrow, on matters of business thither, for the Town is his: but what would the Prince, in the present state of things, do there? —

At Mörs, Seckendorf found means to address his Majesty privately, and snuffled into him suggestions of mercy to the repentant Prince, and to the poor Officers whom he was so anxious about. "Well, if he will confess everything, and leave off his quirks and concealments: but I know he won't!" answered Majesty.

In that dilapidated Castle of Mörs, — look at it, reader, though in the dark; we may see it again, or the shadow of it, perhaps by moonlight. A very gaunt old Castle; next to nothing living in it, since the Old Dessauer (by stratagem, and without shot fired) flung out the Dutch, in the 'Treaty-of-Utrecht time; Mörs Castle and Territory being indisputably ours, though always withheld from us on pretexts.*

At Geldern, in the pressure of business next day, his Majesty got word from Wesel, that Lieutenant Keith was not now to be found in Wesel. "Was last seen there (that we can hear of) certain hours before your Majesty's All-gracious Order arrived. Had saddled his own horse; came ambling through the Brünen Gate, "going out to have a ride," he said; "and did not return." — "Keith gone, scandalous Keith, whom I

* Narrative of the march thither (Night of 7th November 1712), and dextrous surprisal of the place, in Leopoldi von Anhalt-Dessau Leben und Thaten (Anonymous, by Ranfft), pp. 85-90; — where the Despatch of the astonished Dutch Commandant himself, to their High Mightinesses, is given. Part of the Orange Heritage, this Mörs, — came by the Great Elector's first Wife; — but had hung sub lite (though the Parchments were plain enough) ever since our King William's death, and earlier. Neuchâtel, accepted instead of Orange, and not even of the value of Mörs, was another item of the same lot. Besides which, we shall hear of old Palaces at Loo and other dilapidated objects, incidentally in time coming.

pardoned only few weeks ago; he too is in the Plot! Will the very Army break its oath, then?" His Majesty bursts into fire and flame, at these new tidings; orders that Colonel Dumoulin (our expertest rogue-tracer) go instantly on the scent of Keith, and follow him till found and caught. Also, on the other hand, that the Crown-Prince be constituted prisoner; sail down to Wesel, prisoner in his Yacht, and await upon the Rhine there his Majesty's arrival. Formidable omens, it is thought.

His Majesty, all business done in Geldern, drives across to Wesel; can see Fritz's Yacht waiting duly in the River, and black Care hovering over her. It is on the evening of the 12th of August 1730. And so his Majesty ends this memorable Tour into the Reich; but has not yet ended the gloomy miseries, for himself and others, which plentifully sprung out of that.

CHAPTER VII.

CATASTROPHE, AND MAJESTY, ARRIVE IN BERLIN.

AT Berlin dark rumours of this intended Flight, and actual Arrest of the Crown-Prince, are agitating all the world; especially Lieutenant Katte, and the Queen and Wilhelmina, as we may suppose. The first news of it came tragically on the young Princess.*

“Mamma had given a ball in honour of Papa’s Birthday,” — Tuesday 15th August 1730; — and we were all dancing in the fine saloons of Monbijou, with pretty intervals in the cool boscs and orangeries of the place: all of us as happy as could be; Wilhelmina, in particular, dancing at an unusual rate. “We recommenced the ball after supper. For six years “I had not danced before: it was new fruit, and I took my fill “of it, without heeding much what was passing. Madam “Bülow, who with others of them had worn long faces all “night, pleading ‘illness’ when one noticed it, said to me “several times: ‘It is late, I wish you had done.’ — ‘Eh, mon ““Dieu!’ I answered, ‘let me have enough of dancing this one ““new time; it may be long before it comes again.’ — ‘That ““may well be!’ said she. I paid no regard, but continued to “divert myself. She returned to the charge half an hour “after: ‘Will you end, then!’ said she with a vexed air:

* Apparently some rumour from Frankfurt, which she confuses in her after-memory with the specific news from Wesel; for her dates here, as usual, are all awry (Wilhelmina, i. 246; Preuss, i. 42, iv. 473; Seckendorf, in Förster, iii. 6).

“‘you are so engaged, you have eyes for nothing.’ — ‘You are “‘in such a humour,’ I replied, ‘that I know not what to make “‘of it.’ — ‘Look at the Queen, then, Madam; and you will “‘cease to reproach me!’ A glance which I gave that way “‘filled me with terror. There sat the Queen, paler than death,
“‘in a corner of the room, in low conference with Sonsfeld “‘and Countess Finckenstein. As my Brother was most in my “‘anxieties, I asked, If it concerned him? Bülow shrugged
“‘her shoulders, answering, ‘I don’t know at all!’ A moment
“‘after, the Queen gave Good-night; and got into her carriage
“‘with me, — speaking no word, all the way to the Schloss; so “‘that I thought my Brother must be dead, and I myself took “‘violent palpitations, and Sonsfeld, contrary to orders, had at “‘last to tell me in the course of the night.” Poor Wilhelmina, and poor Mother of Wilhelmina!

The fact, of Arrest, and unknown mischief to the Prince, is taken for certain; but what may be the issues of it; who besides the Prince have been involved in it, especially who will be found to have been involved, is matter of dire guess to the three who are most interested here. Lieutenant Katte finds he ought to dispose of the Prince’s effects which were intrusted to him; of the Thousand gold Thalers in particular, and, beyond and before all, of the locked Writing-desk, in which lies the Prince’s Correspondence, the very Queen and Princess likely to be concerned in it! Katte despatches these two objects, the Money and the little Desk, in all secrecy, to Madam Finckenstein, as to the surest hand, with a short Note shadowing out what he thinks they are: Countess Finckenstein, old

General von Finckenstein's Wife, and a second mother to the Prince, she, like her Husband, a sworn partisan of the Prince and his Mother, shall do with these precious and terrible objects what, to her own wise judgment, seems best.

Madam Finckenstein carries them at once, in deep silence, to the Queen. Huge dismay on the part of the Queen and Princess. They know too well what Letters may be there; and there is a seal on the Desk, and no key to it; neither must it, in time coming, seem to have been opened, even if we could now open it. A desperate pinch, and it must be solved. Female wit and Wilhelmina did solve it, by some preëminently acute device of their despair;* and contrived to get the Letters out: hundreds of Letters, enough to be our death if read, says Wilhelmina. These Letters they burnt; and set to writing, fast as the pen would go, other letters in their stead. Fancy the mood of these two Royal Women, and the black whirlwind they were in. Wilhelmina's despatch was incredible; pen went at the gallop night and day: new letters, of old dates and of no meaning, are got into the Desk again; the Desk closed, without mark of injury, and shoved aside while it is yet time. — Time presses; his Majesty too, and the events, go at gallop. Here is a Letter from his Majesty, to a trusty Mistress of the Robes, or whatever she is; which, let it arrive through what softening media it likes, will complete the poor Queen's despair:

* Wilhelmina, i. 253-257.

“My dear Frau von Kamecke, — Fritz has attempted to “desert. I have been under the necessity to have him arrested.
“I request you to tell my Wife of it in some good way, that
“the news may not terrify her. And pity an unhappy Father.

“FRIEDRICH WILHELM.”*

The same post brought an order to the Colonel of the Gens-d’Armes to put that Lieutenant Katte of his under close confinement: — we hope the thoughtless young fellow has already got out of the way? He is getting his saddle altered; fettling about this and that; does not consider what danger he is in. This ~~same~~ Sunday, his Major met him on the Street of Berlin; said, in a significant tone, “You still here, Katte!” — “I go this night,” answered Katte; but he again put it off, did not go this night; and the order for his arrest did come in. On the morrow morning, Colonel Pannewitz, hoping now he was not there, went with the rhadamanthine order; and finding the unlucky fellow, was obliged to execute it. Katte lies in ward, awaiting what may be prepared for him.

Friedrich Wilhelm at Wesel has had rough passages with the Prince and others. On the Saturday evening, 12th August 1730, his Majesty had the Culprit brought on shore, to the Commandant’s House, for an interview. Culprit proving less remorseful than was expected, and evidently not confessing everything, a loud terrible scene ensued; which Friedrich Wilhelm,

* No date: “arrived” (from Wesel, we conclude), Sunday “20th August,” at the Palace of Berlin (Preuss, i. 42).

 Preuss, iv. 473; Seckendorf (Förster, iii. 6) says 13th, but wrong.

the unhappy Father, winded up by drawing his sword to run the unnatural Son through the body. Old General Mosel, Commandant of Wesel, sprang between them, "Sire, cut me to death, but spare your Son!" and the sword was got back to its scabbard; and the Prince lodged in a separate room, two sentries with fixed bayonets keeping watch over him. Friedrich Wilhelm did not see his face again for twelve months to come, — 'twelve months and three days.'

Military gentlemen of due grimness interrogated the Prince next evening,* from a Paper drawn up by his Majesty in the interim. Prince confesses little: Did design to get across the Rhine to Landau; thence to Strasburg, Paris, in the strictest incognito; intended to volunteer there, thought he might take French service, profoundly incognito, and signalise himself in the Italian War (just expected to break out), which might have recovered him some favour from his Majesty: does not tell clearly where his money came from; shy extremely of elucidating Katte and Keith; — in fact, as we perceive, struggles against mendacity, but will not tell the whole truth. "Let him lie in ward, then; and take what doom the Laws have appointed for the like of him!" Divine Laws, are they not? Well, yes, your Majesty; divine and human; — or are there perhaps no laws but the human sort, completely explicit in this case? "He is my Colonel at least," thinks Friedrich Wilhelm, "and tried to desert and make others desert. If a rebellious Crown-Prince, breaking his Father's heart, find the laws still inarticulate; a deserting Colonel of the Potsdam Regiment finds them speak plain enough! Let him take the answer they give him." —

* Seckendorf (in Förster, iii. 5).

12th-27th Aug. 1730.

Dumoulin, in the mean while, can make nothing of Keith, the runaway Lieutenant. Dumoulin, with his sagacious organ, soon came upon the scent of Keith; and has discovered these things about him. One evening, a week before his Majesty arrived, Sunday evening 6th August 1730,* Lieutenant Keith, doubtless smelling something, saddled his horse as above mentioned, decided to have a ride in the country ~~this~~ fine evening, and issued out at the Brünen Gate of Wesel. He is on the right bank of the Rhine; pleasant yellow fields on this hand and that. He ambles slowly, for a space; then gradually awakens into speed, into full speed; arrives, within a couple of hours, at Dingden, a Village in the Münster Territory, safe over the Prussian border, by the shortest line: and from Dingden rides at more leisure, but without losing time, into the Dutch Overijssel region, straight towards the Hague. He must be in the Hague? said Dumoulin to the Official persons, on arriving there, — to Mardenfeld the Prussian Ambassador there, and to Keppel, Dutch Official gentleman who was once Ambassador at Berlin. Prussian Ambassador applies, and again applies, in the highest quarters; but we fear they are slack. Dumoulin discovers that the man was certainly here; Keppel readily admits, He had Keith to dinner a few days ago; but where Keith now is, Keppel cannot form the least guess.

* Preuss, iv. 473.

 Seckendorf (Förster, iii. 7).

Dumoulin suspects he is with Lord Chesterfield, the English Ambassador here. A light was seen, for a night or two, in one of the garret-rooms of Lord Chesterfield's house, — probably Keith reading? — but Keith is not to be heard of, on inquiry there; and the very light has now gone out. The distinguished English Lord is gone to England in these days; but his German Secretary is not gone: the House is inviolable, impregnable to Prussia. Who knows, in spite of the light going out, but Keith is still there, merely with a window-shutter to screen him? One morning, it becomes apparent Keith is not there. One morning, a gentleman at the seaside is admiring Dutch fishing-skiffs, and how they do sail. "Pooh, Sir, that is nothing!" answers a man in multiplex breeches: "the other night I went across to England in one, with an Excellency's Messenger who could not wait!" — Truth is, the Chesterfield Secretary, who forbade lights, took the first good night for conveying Keith to Scheveningen and the seaside; where a Fisher-boat was provided for him; which carried him, frail craft as it was, safe across to England. Once there, the Authorities took pity on the poor fellow; — furnished the modicum of cash and help; sent him with Admiral Norris to assist the Portuguese, menaced with Spanish war at this time; among whom he gradually rose to be Major of Horse. Friedrich Wilhelm cited him by tap of drum three times in Wesel, and also in the Gazettes, native and Dutch; then, as he did not come, nailed an Effigy of him (cut in four, if I remember) on the gallows there; and confiscated any property he had. Keith had more pedigree than property; was of Poberow in Pommern; son of poor gentlefolks there. He sent no word of himself to Prussia, for the next ten years: so that he had become a kind of myth to many people; to his poor Mother among the rest, who has her tragical surmises about him. He will appear again; but not to much purpose. His Brother, the Page Keith, is packed into the Fusileer Regiment, at Wesel here; and there walks sentry, unheard of for the rest of his life. So much for the Keiths.*

Other difficulty there is as to the prison of the Prince. Wesel is a strong Town; but for obvious reasons one nearer Berlin, farther from the frontier, would be preferable. Towards Berlin, however, there is no route all on Prussian ground: from these divided Cleve Countries we have to cross a bit of Hanover, a bit of Hessen-Cassel: suppose these Serene Highnesses were to interfere? Not likely they will interfere, answer ancient military men, of due grimness; at any rate, we can go a roundabout road, and they need not know! That is the method settled on; neighbourhood of Berlin, clearly somewhere there, must be the place? Old Castle of Mittenwalde, in the Wusterhausen en-

* Preuss: Friedrich mit seinen Verwandten und Freunden, pp. 380, 392.
— See, on this and the other points, Pöllnitz, Memoiren, ii. 352-374 (and correct his many blunders).

virens, let that be the first resting-point, then; Rochow, Waldau, and the Wesel Fusileer-Colonel here, sure men, with a trooper or two for escort, shall conduct the Prisoner. By Treuenbrietzen, by circuitous roads: swift, silent, steady, — and with vigilance, as you shall answer! — These preliminaries settled, Friedrich Wilhelm drives off homewards, black Care riding behind him. He reaches Berlin, Sunday 27th August; finds a world gone all to a kind of doomsday with him there, poor gentleman.

Scene at Berlin on Majesty's Arrival.

On Sunday evening, 27th August 1730, his Majesty, who had rested overnight at Potsdam from his rapid journey, drove into Berlin between four and five in the afternoon. Deserter Fritz is following, under escort of his three military gentlemen, at a slower rate and by circuitous routes, so as to avoid the territories of Hanover and Hessen, — towards Mittenwalde in the Wusterhausen neighbourhood. The military gentlemen are vigilant as Argus, and, though pitying the poor Prince, must be rigorous as Rhadamanthus. His attempts at escape, of which Tradition mentions more than one, they will not report to Papa, nor even notice to the Prince himself; but will take care to render futile, one and all: his Majesty may be secure on that score.

The scenes that follow are unusual in royal history; and having been reported in the world with infinite noise and censure, made up of laughter and horror, it will behove us to be the more exact in relating them as they actually befel. Very difficult to pull, out of that ravelled cartload of chaotic thrums, here a thread and there a thread, capable of being brought to the straight state, and woven into legible narrative! But perhaps, by that method, the mingled laughter and horror will modify itself a little. What we can well say is, that pity also ought not to be wanting. The next six months were undoubtedly by far the wretchedest of Friedrich Wilhelm's life. The poor King, except that he was not conscious of intending wrong, but much the reverse, walked in the hollow night of Gehenna, all that while, and was often like to be driven mad by the turn things had taken.

Here is scene first: Wilhelmina reports his Majesty's arrival that Sunday afternoon, to the following effect; she was present in the adventure, and not a spectatress only:

“The Queen was alone in his Majesty's Apartment, waiting “for him as he approached. At sight of her, in the distance, “he called out: ‘Your losel of a Son (votre indigne fils) has “ended at last; you have done with him,’ or words to that “effect. ‘What,’ cried the Queen, ‘you have had the barbarity
“to kill him?’ — ‘Yes, I tell you, — but where is the sealed “Desk?’ The Queen went to her own Apartment to fetch
“it; I ran in to her there for a moment: she was out of herself, “wringing her hands, crying incessantly, and said without “ceasing: ‘Mon Dieu, mon fils (O God, my Son)!’ Breath “failed me; I fell fainting into the arms of Madam de Sosa-

“feld.” — The Queen took away the Writing-case; King tore out the letters, and went off; upon which the Queen came down again to us.

“We learned from some attendant that, at least, my “Brother was not dead. The King now came back. We all “ran to kiss his hands; but he no sooner noticed than rage “and fury took possession of him. He became black in the “face, his eyes sparkling fire, his mouth foaming. ‘Infamous “canaille,’ said he: ‘darest thou show thyself before me? Go, ““keep thy scoundrel of a Brother company!’ And so saying, “he seized me with one hand, slapping me on the face with the “other,” — clenched as a fist (poing), — “several blows; one of “which struck me on the temple, so that I fell back, and “should have split my head against a corner of the wainscot, “had not Madam de Sonsfeld caught me by the headdress and “broken the fall. I lay on the ground without consciousness. “The King, in a frenzy, was for striking me with his feet; had “not the Queen, my Sisters and the rest, run between, and “those who were present prevented him. They all ranked “themselves round me, which gave Mesdames de Kamecke “and Sonsfeld time to pick me up. They put me in a chair in “the embrasure of a window; threw water on my face to bring “me to life: which care I lamentably reproached them with, “death being a thousand times better, in the pass things had “come to. The Queen kept shrieking, her firmness had quite “left her: she wrung her hands, and ran in despair up and “down the room. The King’s face was so disfigured with “rage, it was frightful to look upon. The little ones were on “their knees, begging for me,”* —

— poor little beings, what a group: Amelia, the youngest girl, about six; Henri, in his bits of trousers, hardly over four! — For the rest, I perceive, this room was on the first or a lower floor, and such noises were very audible. The Guard had turned out at the noise; and a crowd was collecting to see and hear: “Move on! Move on!” —

* Wilhelmina, i. 265-267.

“The King had now changed his tune: he admitted that “my Brother was still alive; but vowed horribly he would put “him to death, and lay me fast, within four walls, for the rest “of my life. He accused me of being the Prince’s accomplice, “whose crime was high treason; — also of having an intrigue “of love with Katte, to whom, he said, I had borne several “children.” The timid Governante flamed up at this unheard-of insult: ‘That is not true,’ said she fiercely, ‘whoever has told your Majesty such a thing has told a lie!’ ‘O, spare my ““Brother, and I will marry the Duke of Weissenfels,’ “whimpered I; but in the great noise he did not hear; and “while I strove to repeat it louder, Sonsfeld clapt her hand- “kerchief on my face.

“Hustling aside to get rid of the handkerchief, I saw Katte “crossing the Square. Four soldiers were conducting him to “the King; trunks, my Brother’s and his own, sealed, were “coming on in the rear. Pale and downcast, he took off his “hat to salute me,” — poor Katte, to me always so prostrate in silent respect, and now so unhappy! “A moment after, the “King hearing he was come, went out, exclaiming, ‘Now I “shall have proof about the scoundrel Fritz and the off- “scouring (canaille) Wilhelmina; clear proofs to cut the “heads off them.’” — The two Hofdames again interfered; and one of them, Kamecke it was, rebuked him; told him, in the tone of a prophetess, To take care what he was doing. Whom his Majesty gazed into with astonishment, but rather with respect than with anger, saying, “Your intentions are good!”

And so his Majesty flung out, seeking Katte; and vanished: Wilhelmina saw no more of him for about a year after; being ordered to her room, and kept prisoner there on low diet, with sentries guarding her doors, and no outlook but the worst horror her imagination pleased to paint.

This is the celebrated assault of paternal Majesty on Wilhelmina; the rumour of which has gone into all lands, exciting wonder and horror, but could not be so exact as this account at first-hand. Naturally the crowd of street passengers, once dispersed by the Guard, carried the matter abroad, and there was no end of sympathetic exaggerations. Report ran in Berlin, for example, that the poor Princess was killed, beaten or trampled to death; which we clearly see she was not. Voltaire, in that mass of angry calumnies, very mendacious indeed, which he calls Vie Privée du Roi de Prusse, mentions the matter with emphasis; and says farther, The Princess once did him (Voltaire) the "honour to show him a black mark she carried on her breast ever after;" — which is likelier to be false than true. Captain Guy Dickens, the Legationary Captain, who seems a clear, ingenuous and ingenious man, and of course had access to the highest circles of refined rumour, reports the matter about ten days after, with several errors, in this manner:

"Berlin, 5th September 1730. Four or five days ago" (by the Almanac nine, and directly on his Majesty's return, which Dickens had announced a week ago without that fact attached), "the King dreadfully ill-treated Wilhelmina in "bed" (not in bed at all); "whole Castle (Schloss or Palace) "was alarmed; Guard turned out," — to clear away the crowd, as we perceive. Not properly a crowd, such was not permissible there: but a stagnation of the passers-by would naturally ensue on that esplanade; till the Guard turned out, and indicated with emphasis, "Move on!" Dickens hears farther that "the Queen fares no better;" — such is the state of rumour in Berlin at present.

Poor Katte had a hard audience of it too. He fell at Friedrich Wilhelm's feet; and was spurned and caned; — for the rest, beyond what was already evident, had little or nothing to confess: Intention of flight and of accompanying in flight, very undeniable; although preliminaries and ulterior conditions of said flight not perfectly known to Katte; known only that the thought of raising trouble in foreign Courts, or the least vestige of treason against his Majesty, had not entered even into their dreams. A name or two of persons who had known, or guessed, of these operations, is wrung from Katte; — name of a Lieutenant Spaen, for one; who, being on guard, had admitted Katte into Potsdam once or twice in disguise: — for him and for the like of him, of whatever rank or whichever sex, let arrests be made out, and the scent as with sleuth-hounds be diligently followed on all sides; and Katte, stript of his uniform, be locked up in the grimmest manner. Berlin, with the rumour of these things, is a much agitated city.

CHAPTER VIII.

SEQUEL TO CROWN-PRINCE AND FRIENDS.

As for the Crown-Prince, prosecuting his circuitous route, he arrives safe at Mittenwalde; is lodged in the old Castle there, I think, for two nights (but the date, in these indexless Books, is blown away again), in a room bare of all things, with sentries at the door; and looks out, expecting Grumkow and the Officials to make assault on him. One of these Officials, a certain "Gerber, Fiscal General," who, as head of Prussian Fiscals (kind of Public Prosecutor, or supreme Essence of Bailiffs, Catchpoles and Grand-Juries all in one), wears a red cloak, — gave the Prince a dreadful start. Red cloak is the Berlin Hangman's or Headsman's dress; and poor Friedrich had the idea his end had summarily come in this manner. Soon seeing it was otherwise, his spirits recovered, perhaps rose by the shock.

He fronted Grumkow and the Officials, with a high, almost contemptuous look; answered promptly, — if possible, without lying, and yet without telling anything; — showed self-possession, pride; retorted sometimes, "Have you nothing more to ask?" Grumkow finding there was no way made into anything, not even into the secret of the Writing-case and the Royal Women's operations there, began at last, as Wilhelmina says, to hint, That in his Majesty's service there were means of bringing out the truth in spite of refractory humours; that there was a thing called the rack, not yet abolished in his Prussian Majesty's dominions! Friedrich owned afterwards, his blood ran cold. However, he put on a high look: "A Hangman, such as you, naturally takes "pleasure in talking of his tools and his trade; but on "me they will not produce any effect. I have owned "everything; — and almost regret to have done so. For "it is not my part to stand questionings and bandy re- "sponses with a coquin comme vous, scoundrel like you," reports Wilhelmina,* though we hope the actual term was slightly less candid! — Grumkow gathered his Notes together; and went his ways, with the man in red cloak and the rest; thus finishing the scene in Mittenwalde. Mittenwalde, which we used to know long since, in our Wusterhausen rides with poor Duhan; little thinking what awaited us there one day!

Mittenwalde being finished, Friedrich, on Monday, 5th September 1730, is sent forward to Cüstrin, a strong little Town in a quiet Country, some sixty or seventy miles eastward of Berlin. On the evening of the 5th he finds himself lodged in a strong room of the Fortress there, — room consisting of bare walls lighted from far up; no furniture, not even the needfullest; everything indicating that the proud spirit and the iron laws shall here have their duel out at leisure, and see which is stronger.

His sword was taken from him at Wesel; sword, uniform, every mark of dignity, all are now gone: he is clad in brown prison dress of the plainest cut and cloth; his diet is fixed at tenpence a-day ("to be got from the cook's shop, six groschen for dinner, four for supper");* food to be cut for him, no knife allowed. Room is to be opened, morning, noon and evening, "on the average not above four minutes each time;" lights, or single tallow light, to be extinguished at seven p.m. Absolute solitude; no flute allowed, far from it; no Books allowed, except the Bible and a Prayer-Book, — or perhaps Noltenius's Manual, if he took a hankering for it. There, shut out from the babble of fools, and conversing only with the dumb Veracities, with the huge inarticulate moanings of Destiny, Necessity and Eternity, let the fool of a Fritz bethink himself, if there is any thought in him! There, among the Bogs of the Oder, the very sedges getting brown all round him, and the very curlews flying off for happier climes, let him wait, till the question of his doom, rather an abstruse question, ripen in the royal breast.

As for Wilhelmina, she is close prisoner in her apartments in the Berlin Palace, sentries pacing at every outlet, for many months to come. Wilhelmina almost rather likes it, such a dog of an existence has she had hitherto, for want of being well let alone. She plays, reads; composes music; smuggles letters to and from Mamma, — one in pencil, from my Brother even, O Heavens! Wilhelmina weeps, now and then, with her good Sonsfeld; hopes nevertheless there will be some dawn to this ragnarök, or general "twilight of the gods." Friedrich Wilhelm, convinced that England has had a hand in this treason, signifies officially to his Excellency Captain Dickens, That the English negotiations are concluded; that neither in the way of Single-Marriage nor of Double-Marriage will he have anything more to do with England. "Well," answers England, "who can help it? Negotiation was not quite of our seeking. Let it so end!"* — Nay at dinner one day (Seckendorf reports, while Fritz was on the road to Cüstrin) he proposes the toast, "Downfall of England!" and would have had the Queen drink it; who naturally wept, but I conjecture could not be made to drink. Her Majesty is a weeping, almost broken-hearted woman; his Majesty a raging, almost broken-hearted man. Seckendorf and Grumkow are, as it were, too victorious; and now have their apprehensions on that latter score. But they look on with countenances well veiled, and touch the helm judiciously in Tobacco-Parliament, intent on the nearest harbour of refuge.

* Order, 14th September 1730 (in Förster, i. 372).

Her Majesty nevertheless steadily persists; merely sinks deeper out of sight with her English schemes; ducking till the wave go by. Messages, desperate appeals still go, through Mamsell Bülow, Wilhelmina's Hofdame, and other channels; nay Wilhelmina thinks there were still intentions on the part of England, and that the nonfulfilment of them at the last moment

* Dickens's Despatch, 25th September 1780; and Harrington's Answer to it, of 6th October: Seckendorf (in Förster, iii. 9), 28d September.

 Seckendorf (in Förster, iii. 11).

turned on accident; English "Courier arrived some hours too late," thinks Wilhelmina.* But that is a mistake. The negotiation, in spite of her Majesty's endeavours, was essentially out; England, after such a message, could not, nor did, stir farther in the matter.

In that Writing-case his Majesty found what we know; nothing but mysterious effects of female art, and no light whatever. It is a great source of wrath and of sorrow to him, that neither in the Writing-case, nor in Katte's or the Prince's so called "Confessions," can the thing be seen into. A deeper bottom it must have, thinks his Majesty, but knows not what or where. To overturn the Country, belike; and fling the Kaiser, and European Balance of Power, bottom uppermost? Me they presumably meant to poison! he tells Seckendorf one day. Was ever Father more careful for his children, soul and body? Anxious, to excess, to bring them up in orthodox nurture and admonition: and this is how they reward me, Herr Feldzeugmeister! "Had he honestly confessed, and told me the whole truth, "at Wesel, I would have made it up with him quietly "there. But now it must go its lengths; and the whole "world shall be judge between us."

His Majesty is in a flaming height. He arrests, punishes and banishes, where there is trace of coöperation or connexion with Deserter Fritz and his schemes.

* Wilhelmina (l. 369, 384), and Preuss and others after her.

 Dickens, Despatch, 16th September 1730.

 Seckendorf (Förster, ubi suprà), 23d September.

The Bülow's, brother and sister, brother in the King's service, sister in Wilhelmina's, respectable goldstick people, originally of Hanover, are hurled out to Lithuania and the world's end: let them live in Memel, and repent as they can. Minister Knyphausen, always of English tendencies, he, with his Wife, — to whom it is specially hard, while General Schwerin, gallant witty Kurt, once of Mecklenburg, stays behind, — is ordered to disappear, and follow his private rural business far off; no minister, ever more. The Lieutenant Spaen of the Giant Regiment, who kept false watch, and did not tell of Katte, gets cashiering and a year in Spandau. He wandered elsewhither, and came to something afterwards, poor Spaen.* Bookseller Hanau with this bad Fritz's Books: To Memel with him also; let him deal in more orthodox kinds of Literature there.

It is dangerous to have lent the Crown-Prince money, contrary to the Royal Edict: lucky if loss of your money will settle the account. Witness French Montholieu, for one; Count, or whatever he styled himself: nailed to the gallows (in effigy) after he had fled. It is dangerous to have spoken kindly to the Crown-Prince, or almost to have been spoken to by him. Doris Ritter, a comely enough good girl, nothing of a beauty, but given to music, Potsdam Cantor's (Precentor's) daughter, has chanced to be standing in the door, perhaps to be singing within doors, once or twice, when the Prince passed that way: Prince inquired about her music, gave her music, spoke a civility, as young men will, — nothing more, upon my honour; though his Majesty believes there was much more; and condemns poor Doris to be whipt by the Beadle, and beat hemp for three years. Rhadamanthus is a strict judge, your Majesty; and might be a trifle better informed! — Poor Doris got out of this sad pickle, on her own strength; and wedded, and did well enough, — Prince and King happily leaving her alone thenceforth. Voltaire, twenty years after, had the pleasure of seeing her at Berlin: “Wife of one Shommers, Clerk “of the Hackney-Coach Office,” — read, Schomer, Farmer of the Berlin Hackney-Coach Enterprise in general; decidedly a poor man. Wife, by this time, was grown hard enough of feature: “tall, lean; looked “like a Sibyl; not the least appearance how she could “ever have deserved to be whipt for a Prince.”*

* Preuss, i. 63, 66.

The excellent Tutor of the Crown-Prince, good Duhan de Jandun, for what fault or complicity we know not, is hurled off to Memel; ordered to live there, — on what resources is equally unknown. Apparently his fault was the general one, of having mis-educated the Prince, and introduced these French Literatures, foreign poisonous elements of thought and practice into the mind of his Pupil, which have ruined the young man. For his Majesty perceives that there lies the source of it; that only total perversion of the heart and judgment, first of all, can have brought about these dreadful issues of conduct. And indeed his Majesty understands, on credible information, that Deserter Fritz entertains very heterodox opinions; opinion on Predestination, for one; — which is itself calculated to be the very mother of mischief, in a young mind inclined to evil. The heresy about Predestination, or the “Freie Gnadenwahl (Election by Free Grace),” as his Majesty terms it, according to which a man is pre-appointed from all Eternity either to salvation or the opposite (which is Fritz’s notion, and indeed is Calvin’s, and that of many benighted creatures, this Editor among them), appears to his Majesty an altogether shocking one; nor would the whole Synod of Dort, or Calvin, or St. Augustine in person, aided by a Thirty-Editor power, reconcile his Majesty’s practical judgment to such a tenet. What! May not Deserter Fritz say to himself, even now, or in whatever other deeps of sin he may fall into, “I was foredoomed to it: how could I, or how can I, help it?” The mind of his Majesty shudders, as if looking over the edge of an abyss. He is meditating much whether nothing can be done to save the lost Fritz, at least the soul of him, from this horrible delusion; — hurls forth your fine Duhan, with his metaphysics, to remote Memel, as the first step. And signifies withal, though as yet only historically and in a speculative way, to Finckenstein and Kalkstein themselves, That their method of training up a young soul, to do God’s will, and accomplish useful work in this world, does by no means appear to the royal mind an admirable one!* Finckenstein and Kalkstein were always covertly rather of the Queen's party, and now stand reprimanded and in marked disfavour.

* Voltaire, Œuvres (calumnious Vie Privée du Roi de Prusse), II. 51, 52. Preuss, I. 64, 66.

That the treasonous mystery of this Crown-Prince (parricidal, it is likely, and tending to upset the Universe) must be investigated to the very bottom, and be condignly punished, probably with death, his Majesty perceives too well; and also what terrible difficulties, formal and essential, there will be. But whatever become of his perishable life, ought not, if possible, the soul of him to be saved from the claws of Satan? "Claws of Satan;" "brand from the burning;" "for Christ our Saviour's sake;" "in the name of the most merciful God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Amen:" — so Friedrich Wilhelm phrases it, in those confused old documents and Cabinet-Letters of his; which awaken a strange feeling in the attentive reader; and show us the ruggedest of human creatures melted into blubbering tenderness, and growling huskily something which we perceive is real prayer. Here has a business fallen out, such as seldom occurred before! —

* His Letter to them (3d December 1730), in Förster, II. 382.

 Förster, I. 374, 379, &c.

CHAPTER IX.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CROWN-PRINCE AND CONSORTS.

THE rumour of these things naturally fills all minds, and occupies all human tongues, in Berlin and Prussia, though an Edict threatens, That the tongues shall be cut out which speak of them in any way;* and sounds far and wide into foreign Courts and Countries, where there is no such Edict. Friedrich Wilhelm's conduct, looked at from without, appears that of a hideous royal ogre, or blind anthropophagous Polyphemus fallen mad. Looked at from within, where the Polyphemus has his reasons, and a kind of inner rushlight to enlighten his path; and is not bent on man-eating, but on discipline in spite of difficulties, — it is a wild enough piece of humanity, not so much ludicrous as tragical. Never was a royal bear so led about before by a pair of conjuring pipers in the market, or brought to such a pass in his dancing for them!

“General Ginkel, the Dutch Ambassador here,” writes “Dickens, “told me of an interview he had with the King;” being ordered, by their High Mightinesses, to solicit his Majesty in this matter. King “harbours ‘most monstrous “wicked designs, not fit to be spoken of in words,’ reports Ginkel. “‘It is certain,’ added he, ‘if the King of Prussia

* Dickens, of 7th November, 1730.

“continue in the mind he is in at present, we shall see scenes “here as wicked and bloody as any that were ever heard of “since the creation of the world.’ ‘Will sacrifice his whole “family,’ not the Crown-Prince alone; ‘everybody except “Grumkow being, as he fancies, in conspiracy against him.’
Poor enchanted King! — “‘And all these things he said with “such imprecations and disordered looks, foaming at the “mouth all the while, as it was terrible either to see or hear.”
That is Ginkel’s report, as Dickens conveys it.* Another time, on new order, a month later, when Ginkel went again to speak a word for the poor Prisoner, he found his Majesty clothed not in delirious thunder, but in sorrowful thick fog;
Ginkel “was the less able to judge what the King of Prussia “meant to do with his Son, as it was evident the King himself “did not know.”

Poor Friedrich Wilhelm, through these months, wanders about, shifting from room to room, in the night-time, like a man possessed by evil fiends; “orders his carriage for Wusterhausen at two in the morning,” but finds he is no better there, and returns; drinks a great deal, “has not gone to bed sober for a month past.” One night he comes gliding like a perturbed ghost, about midnight, with his candle in his hand, into the Queen’s apartment; says, wildly staring, “He thinks there is something haunting him:” — O Feekin, erring disobedient Wife, wilt not thou protect me, after all? Whither can I fly when haunted, except to thee?
Feekin, like a prudent woman, makes no criticism;

* Despatch, 7th September 1730.

 Ib. 10th October.

 Ib. 19th December 1730.

orders that his Majesty's bed be made up in her apartment till these phenomena cease.* A much-agitated royal Father.

The question what is to be done with this unhappy Crown-Prince, a Deserter from the Army, a rebel against the paternal Majesty, and a believer in the doctrine of Election by Free Grace, or that a man's good or ill conduct is foredoomed upon him by decree of God, — becomes more intricate the longer one thinks of it. Seckendorf and Grumkow, alarmed at being too victorious, are set against violent high methods; and suggest this and that consideration: "Who is it that can legally try, condemn, or summon to his bar, a Crown-Prince? He is Prince of the Empire, as well as your Majesty's Son!" — "Well, he is Heir of the Sovereign Majesty in Prussia, too; and Colonel in the Potsdam Guards!" answers Friedrich Wilhelm.

At length, after six or seven weeks of abstruse meditation, it is settled in Tobacco-Parliament and the royal breast, That Katte and the Crown-Prince, as Deserters from the Prussian Army, can and shall be tried by Court-Martial: to that no power, on the Earth or out of it, can have any objection worth attending to. Let a fair Court-Martial of our highest military characters be selected and got ready. Let that, as a voice of Rhadamanthus, speak upon the two culprits; and tell us what is to be done. By the middle of October, things on Friedrich Wilhelm's side have got so far.

* Dickens, despatch, 27th Feb. 1731.

Crown-Prince in Cüstrin.

Poor Friedrich meanwhile has had a grim time of it, these two months back; left alone, in coarse brown prison dress, within his four bare walls at Cüstrin; in uninterrupted, unfathomable colloquy with the Destinies and the Necessities there. The King's stern orders must be fulfilled to the letter; the Crown-Prince is immured in that manner. At Berlin, there are the wildest rumours as to the state he has fallen into; "covered with rags and vermin, unshaven, no comb allowed him, lights his own fire," says one testimony, which Captain Dickens thinks worth reporting. For the truth is, no unofficial eye can see the Crown-Prince, or know what state he is in. And we find, in spite of the Edict, "tongues," not "cut out," kept wagging at a high rate. "People of all ranks are unspeakably indignant" at certain heights of the business: "Margravine Albert said publicly, 'A tyrant as bad as Nero!'"*

How long the Crown-Prince's defiant humour held out, we are not told. By the middle of October there comes proposal of "entire confession" from the Prince; and though, when Papa sends deputies accordingly, there is next to nothing new confessed, and Papa's anger blazes out again, probably we may take this as the turning-point on his Son's part. With him, of course, that mood of mind could not last. There is no wildest lion, but finding his bars are made of iron, ceases to bite them. The Crown-Prince there, in his horror, indignation and despair, had a lucid human judgment in him too; loyal to facts, and well knowing their inexorable nature. Just sentiments are in this young man, not capable of permanent distortion into spasm by any form of injustice laid on them. It is not long till he begins to discern, athwart this terrible, quasi-infernal element, that so the facts are; and that nothing but destruction, and no honour that were not dishonour, will be got by not conforming to the facts. My Father may be a tyrant, and driven mad against me: well, well, let not me at least go mad!

* Dickens, 7th November, 2d December 1730.

Grumkow is busy on the mild side of the business; of course Grumkow and all official men. Grumkow cannot but ask himself this question among others: How if the King should suddenly die upon us! Grumkow is out at Cüstrin, and again out; explaining to the Prince, what the enormous situation is; how inflexible, inexorable, and of peril and horror incalculable to Mother and Sister and self and royal House; and that there is one possibility of good issue, and only one: that of loyally yielding, where one cannot resist. By degrees, some lurid troublous but perceptible light-gleam breaks athwart the black whirl-wind of our indignation and despair; and saner thoughts begin to insinuate themselves. "Obey, thou art not the strongest, there are stronger than thou! All men, the highest among them, are called to learn obedience."

Moreover, the first sweep of royal fury being past, his Majesty's stern regulations at Cüstrin began to relax in fulfilment; to be obeyed only by those immediately responsible, and in letter rather than in spirit even by those. President von Münchow, who is Head of the Domain-Kammer, chief representative of Government at Cüstrin, and resides in the Fortress there, ventures after a little, the Prince's doors being closed as we saw, to have an orifice bored through the floor above, and thereby to communicate with the Prince, and sympathetically ask, What he can do for him? Many things, books among others, are, under cunning contrivance, smuggled in by the judicious Münchow, willing to risk himself in such a service. For example, Münchow has a son, a clever boy of seven years old; who, to the wonder of neighbours, goes into child's-petticoats again; and testifies the liveliest desire to be admitted to the Prince, and bear him company a little! Surely the law of No-company does not extend to that of an innocent child? The innocent child has a row of pockets all round the inside of his long gown; and goes laden, miscellaneously, like a ship of the desert, or cockboat not forbidden to cross the line. Then there are stools, one stool at least indispensable to human nature; and the inside of this, once you open it, is a chest-of-drawers, containing paper, ink, new literature and much else. No end to Münchow's goodwill, and his ingenuity is great.*

A Captain Fouqué also, furthered I think by the Old Dessauer, whose man he is, comes to Cüstrin Garrison, on duty or as volunteer, by and by. He is an old friend of the Prince's; — ran off, being the Dessauer's little page, to the Siege of Stralsund, long ago, to be the Dessauer's little soldier there: — a ready-witted, hot-tempered, highly estimable man; and his real duty here is to do the Prince what service may be possible. He is often with the Prince; their light is extinguished precisely at seven o'clock: "Very well, Lieutenant," he would say, "you have done your orders "to the Crown-Prince's light. But his Majesty has no "concern with Captain Fouqué's candles!" and there-upon would light a pair. Nay, I have heard of Lieutenants who punctually blew out the Prince's light, as a matter of duty and command; and then kindled it again, as a civility left free to human nature. In short, his Majesty's orders can only be fulfilled to the letter; Commandant Lepel and all Officers are willing not to see, where they can help seeing. Even in the letter his Majesty's orders are severe enough.

* Preuss, i. 46.

Sentence of Court-Martial.

Meanwhile the Court-Martial, selected with intense study, instals itself at Cöpenick; and on the 25th of October commences work. This Deserter Crown-Prince and his accomplices, especially Katte his chief accomplice, what is to be done with them? Cöpenick lies on the road to Cüstrin, within a morning's drive of Berlin; there is an ancient Palace here, and room for a Court-Martial. "Que faire? ils ont des canons!" said the old Prussian Raths, wandering about in these woods, when Gustavus and his Swedes were at the door. "Que faire?" may the new military gentlemen think to themselves, here again, while the brown leaves rustle down upon them, after a hundred years!

The Court consists of a President, Lieutenant-General Schulenburg, an elderly Malplaquet gentleman of good experience; one of the many Schulenburgs conspicuous for soldiering, and otherwise, in those times. He is nephew of George I.'s lean Mistress; who also was a Schulenburg originally, and conspicuous not for soldiering. Lean mistress we say; not the Fat one, or cataract of tallow, with eyebrows like a cartwheel, and dim coaly disks for eyes, who was George I.'s half-sister, probably not his mistress at all; and who now, as Countess of Darlington so-called, sits at Isleworth with good fat pensions, and a tame raven come-of-will, — probably the soul of George I. in some form.* Not this one, we say: — but the threadpaper Duchess of Kendal, actual Ex-mistress; who tore her hair on the road when apoplexy overtook poor George, and who now attends chapel diligently, poor old anatomy or lean human nailrod. For the sake of the English reader searching into what is called "History," I, with indignation, endeavour to discriminate these two beings once again; that each may be each, till both are happily forgotten to all eternity. It was the latter, lean maypole or nailrod one, that was Aunt of Schulenburg, the elderly Malplaquet gentleman who now presides at Cöpenick. And let the reader remember him; for he will turn up repeatedly again.

* See Walpole, Reminiscences.

The Court consisted farther of three Major-Generals, among whom I name only Grumkow (Major-General by rank, though more of a diplomatist and black-artist than a soldier), and Schwerin, Kurt von Schwerin of Mecklenburg (whom Madam Knyphausen regrets, in her now exile to the Country); three Colonels, Derschau one of them; three Lieutenant-Colonels, three Majors and three Captains, all of whom shall be nameless here. Lastly come three of the "Auditor" or the Judge-Advocate sort: Mylius, the Compiler of sad Prussian Quartos, known to some; Gerber, whose red cloak has frightened us once already; and the Auditor of Katte's regiment. A complete Court-Martial, and of symmetrical structure, by the rule of three;— of whose proceedings we know mainly the result, nor seek much to know more. This Court met on Wednesday, 25th October 1730, in the little Town of Cöpenick; and in six days had ended, signed, sealed and despatched to his Majesty; and got back to Berlin on the Tuesday next. His Majesty, who is now at Wusterhausen, in hunting time, finds conclusions to the following effect:

Accomplices of the Crown-Prince are two: First, Lieutenant Keith, actual deserter (who cannot be caught): To be hanged in effigy, cut in four quarters, and nailed to the gallows at Wesel: — Good, says his Majesty. Secondly, Lieutenant Katte of the Gens-d'Armes, intended deserter, not actually deserting, and much tempted thereto: All things considered, Two years of Fortress Arrest to Lieutenant Katte: — Not Good this; Bad this, thinks Majesty; this provokes from his Majesty an angry rebuke to the too lax Court-Martial. Rebuke which can still be read, in growling, unluclid phraseology; but with a rhadamanthine idea clear enough in it, and with a practical purport only too clear: That Katte was a sworn soldier, of the Gens-d'Armes even, or Bodyguard of the Prussian Majesty; and did nevertheless, in the teeth of his oath, 'worship the Rising Sun' when minded to desert; did plot and colleague with foreign Courts in aid of said Rising Sun, and of an intended high crime against the Prussian Majesty itself on Rising Sun's part; far from at once revealing the same, as duty ordered Lieutenant Katte to do. That Katte's crime amounts to high-treason (crimen læsæ majestatis); that the rule is, Fiat justitia, et pereat mundus; — and that, in brief, Katte's doom is, and is hereby declared to be, Death. Death by the gallows and hot pincers is the usual doom of Traitors; but his Majesty will say in this case, Death by the sword and headsman simply; certain circumstances moving the royal clemency to go so far, no farther. And the Court-Martial has straightway to apprise Katte of this same; and so doing, "shall say, That his Majesty is sorry for Katte; but "that it is better he die than that justice depart out of the "world" (Wusterhausen, 1st November 1730.)

"FRIEDRICH WILHELM."*

This is the iron doom of Katte; which no prayer or influence of mortal will avail to alter, — lest justice depart out of the world. Katte's Father is a General of rank, Commandant of Königsberg at this moment; Katte's Grandfather by the Mother's side, old Field-marshal Wartensleben, is a man in good favour with Friedrich Wilhelm, and of high esteem and mark in his country for half a century past. But all this can effect nothing. Old Wartensleben thinks of the Daughter he lost; for happily Katte's Mother is dead long since. Old Wartensleben writes to Friedrich Wilhelm; his mournful Letter, and Friedrich Wilhelm's mournful but inexorable answer, can be read in the Histories; but show only what we already know.

* Preuss, i. 44.

Katte's Mother, Fieldmarshal Wartensleben's Daughter, died in 1706; leaving Katte only two years old. He is now twenty-six; very young for such grave issues; and his fate is certainly very hard. Poor young soul, he did not resist farther, or quarrel with the inevitable and inexorable. He listened to Chaplain Müller of the Gens-d'Armes; admitted profoundly, after his fashion, that the great God was just, and the poor Katte sinful, foolish, only to be saved by miracle of mercy; and piously prepared himself to die on these terms. There are three Letters of his to his Grandfather, which can still be read, one of them in Wilhelmina's Book,* the sound of it like that of dirges borne on the wind. Wilhelmina evidently pities Katte very tenderly; in her heart she has a fine royal-maiden kind of feeling to the poor youth. He did heartily repent and submit; left with Chaplain Müller a Paper of pious considerations, admonishing the Prince to submit. These are Katte's last employments in his prison at Berlin, after sentence had gone forth.

* Wilhelmina, i. 302.

Katte's End, 6th November 1730.

On Sunday evening, 5th November, it is intimated to him, unexpectedly at the moment, that he has to go to Cüstrin, and there die; — carriage now waiting at the gate. Katte masters the sudden flurry; signifies that all is ready, then; and so, under charge of his old Major and two brother Officers, who, and Chaplain Müller, are in the carriage with him, a troop of his own old Cavalry Regiment escorting, he leaves Berlin (rather on sudden summons); drives all night, towards Cüstrin and immediate death. Words of sympathy were not wanting, to which Katte answered cheerily; grim faces wore a cloud of sorrow for the poor youth, that night. Chaplain Müller's exhortations were fervent and continual; and, from time to time, there were heard, hoarsely melodious through the damp darkness and the noise of wheels, snatches of "devotional singing," led by Müller.

It was in the gray of the winter morning, 6th November 1730, that Katte arrived in Cüstrin Garrison. He took kind leave of Major and men: Adieu, my brothers; good be with you evermore! — And, about nine o'clock, he is on the road towards the Rampart of the Castle, where a scaffold stands. Katte wore, by order, a brown dress exactly like the Prince's; the Prince is already brought down into a lower room, to see Katte as he passes (to "see Katte die," had been the royal order; but they smuggled that into abeyance); and Katte knows he shall see him. Faithful Müller was in the death-car along with Katte; and he had adjoined to himself one Besserer, the Chaplain of the Garrison, in this sad function, since arriving. Here is a glimpse from Besserer, which we may take as better than nothing:

“His (Katte’s) eyes were mostly directed to God; and we “(Müller and I), on our part, strove to hold his heart up “heavenwards, by presenting the examples of those who had “died in the Lord, — as of God’s Son himself, and Stephen, “and the Thief on the Cross, — till, under such discoursing, “we approached the Castle. Here, after long wistful looking “about, he did get sight of his beloved Jonathan,” Royal Highness the Crown-Prince, “at a window in the Castle; “from whom he, with the politest and most tender expres- “sion, spoken in French, took leave, with no little emotion “of sorrow.” *

President Münchow and the Commandant were with the Prince; whose emotions one may fancy, but not describe. Seldom did any Prince or man stand in such a predicament. Vain to say, and again say: “In the “name of God, I ask you, stop the execution till I “write to the King!” Impossible that; as easily stop the course of the stars. And so here Katte comes; cheerful loyalty still beaming on his face, death now nigh. “Pardonnez-moi, mon cher Katte!” cried Friedrich in a tone: Pardon me, dear Katte; O, that this should be what I have done for you! — “Death is sweet for a Prince I love so well," said Katte, "La mort est douce pour un si aimable Prince;"* and fared on, — round some angle of the Fortress, it appears; not in sight of Friedrich; who sank into a faint, and had seen his last glimpse of Katte in this world.

* Letter to Katte’s Father (Extract, in Preuss: Friedrich mit Freunden und Verwandten, p. 7).

The body lay all day upon the scaffold, by royal order; and was buried at night obscurely in the common churchyard; friends, in silence, took mark of the place against better times, — and Katte's dust now lies elsewhere, among that of his own kindred.

"Never was such a transaction before or since, in Modern History," cries the angry reader: "cruel, like the grinding of human hearts under millstones, like —" Or indeed like the doings of the gods, which are cruel, though not that alone? This is what, after much sorting and sifting, I could get to know about the definite facts of it. Commentary, not likely to be very final at this epoch, the reader himself shall supply at discretion.

* Wilhelmina, i. 307; Preuss, i. 45.

BOOK VIII.

CROWN-PRINCE RETRIEVED: LIFE AT CÜSTRIN.

November 1730 — February 1732.

6th-19th Nov. 1730.

CHAPTER I.

CHAPLAIN MÜLLER WAITS ON THE CROWN-PRINCE.

FRIEDRICH's feelings at this juncture are not made known to us by himself in the least; or credibly by others in any considerable degree. As indeed in these confused Prussian History-Books, opulent in nugatory pedantisms and learned marine-stores, all that is human remains distressingly obscure to us; so seldom, and then only as through endless clouds of ever-whirling idle dust, can we catch the smallest direct feature of the young man, and of his real demeanour or meaning, on the present or other occasions! But it is evident this last phenomenon fell upon him like an overwhelming cataract; crushed him down under the immensity of sorrow, confusion, and despair; his own death not a theory now, but probably a near fact, — a welcome one in wild moments, and then anon so unwelcome. Frustrate, bankrupt, chargeable with a friend's lost life, sure enough he, for one, is: what is to become of him? Whither is he to turn, thoroughly beaten, foiled in all his enterprises? Proud young soul as he was: the ruling Powers, be they just, be they unjust, have proved too hard for him! We hear of tragic vestiges still traceable of Friedrich, belonging to this time: texts of Scripture quoted by him, pencil-sketches of his drawing; expressive of a mind dwelling in Golgothas, and pathetically, not defiantly, contemplating the very worst.

Chaplain Müller of the Gens-d'Armes, being found a pious and intelligent man, has his orders not to return at once from Cüstrin; but to stay there, and deal with the Prince, on that horrible Predestination topic and his other unexampled backslidings, which have ended so. Müller staid accordingly, for a couple of weeks; intensely busy on the Predestination topic, and generally in assuaging, and mutually mollifying, paternal Majesty and afflicted Son. In all which he had good success; and especially on the Predestination point, was triumphantly successful. Müller left a little Book in record of his procedures there; which, had it not been bound-over to the official tone, might have told us something. His Correspondence with the King, during those two weeks, has likewise been mostly printed;* and is of course still more official, — teaching us next to nothing, except poor Friedrich Wilhelm's profoundly devotional mood, anxieties about "the claws of Satan" and the like, which we were glad to hear of above. In Müller otherwise is small help for us.

But, fifty years afterwards, there was alive a Son of this Müller's; an innocent Country Parson, not wanting in sense, and with much simplicity and veracity; who was fished-out by Nicolai, and set to recalling what his Father used to say of this adventure, much

* Förster, i. 376-379.

the grandest of his life. In Müller Junior's Letter of Reminiscences to Nicolai we find some details, got from his Father, which are worth gleaning:

“When my Father first attempted, by royal order, to bring “the Crown-Prince to acknowledgment and repentance of the “fault committed, Crown-Prince gave this excuse or explanation: ‘As his Father could not endure the sight of him, he “had meant to get out of the way of his displeasure, and go to “a Court with which his Father was in friendship and relationship,’” — clearly indicating England, think the Müllers Junior and Senior.

“For proof that the intention was towards England this “other circumstance serves, That the one confidant — Herr “von Keith, if I mistake not” (no, you don't mistake), “had “already bespoken a ship for passage out.” — Here is something still more unexpected:

“My Father used to say, he found an excellent knowledge
“and conviction of the truths of religion in the Crown-Prince.
“By the Prince's arrangement, my Father, who at first lodged “with the Commandant, had to take up his quarters in the “room right above the Prince; who daily, often as early as “six in the morning, rapped on the ceiling for him to come “down; and then they would dispute and discuss, sometimes “half-days long, about the different tenets of the Christian “Sects; — and my Father said, the Prince was perfectly at “home in the Polemic Doctrines of the Reformed (Calvinistic) “Church, even to the minutest points. As my Father brought “him proofs from Scripture, the Prince asked him one time, “How he could keep chapter and verse so exactly in his memory? Father drew from his pocket a little Hand-Concordance, and showed it him, as one help. This he had to “leave with the Prince for some days. On getting it back,

“he found inside on the fly-leaf, sketched in pencil,” — what is rather notable to History, — “the figure of a man “on his knees, with two swords hanging cross-wise over his “head; and at the bottom these words of Psalm Seventy-third (verses 25, 26), Whom have I in Heaven but thee? And “there is none upon Earth that I desire besides thee. My flesh “and my heart fainteth and faileth; but God is the strength of my “heart and my portion forever.” — Poor Friedrich, this is a very unexpected pencil-sketch on his part; but an undeniable one; betokening abstruse night-thoughts and forebodings, in the present juncture! —

“Whoever considers this fine knowledge of religion, and “reflects on the peculiar character and genius of the young “Herr, which was ever struggling towards light and clearness “(for at that time he had not become indifferent to religion, “he often prayed with my Father on his knees), — will find “that it was morally impossible this young Prince could have “thought” (as some foolish persons have asserted) “of throw- “ing himself into the arms of Papal Superstition,” (seeking help at Vienna, marrying an Austrian Archduchess, and I know not what,) “or allow the intrigues of Catholic Priests “to” — Oh no, Herr Müller, nobody but very foolish persons could imagine such a thing of this young Herr.

“When my Father, Herr von Katte’s execution being “ended, hastened to the Crown-Prince; he finds him miser- “ably ill (sehr alterirt); advises him to take a cooling-powder “in water, both which materials were ready on the table. “This he presses on him: but the Prince always shakes his “head.” Suspects poison, you think? “Hereupon my Father “takes from his pocket a paper, in which he carried cooling- “powder for his own use; shakes out a portion of it into his “hand, and so into his mouth; and now the Crown-Prince “grips at my Father’s powder, and takes that.” Privately to be made away with; death resolved upon in some way! thinks the desperate young man?*

That scene of Katte's execution, and of the Prince's and other people's position in regard to it, has never yet been humanly set forth, otherwise the response had been different. Not humanly set forth, — and so was only barked at, as by the infinitude of little dogs, in all countries; and could never yet be responded to in austere vox humana, deep as a De Profundis, terrible as a Chorus of Æschylus, — for in effect that is rather the character of it, had the barking once pleased to cease.

"King of Prussia cannot sleep," writes Dickens: "the officers sit up with him every night, and in his slumbers he raves and talks of spirits and apparitions." We saw him, ghost-like, in the night time, gliding about, seeking shelter with Feekin against ghosts; Ginkel by daylight saw him, now clad in thunderous tornado, and anon in sorrowful fog. Here, farther on, is a new item, — and, joined to it and the others, a remarkable old one:

"In regard to Wilhelmina's marriage, and whether a Father cannot give his Daughter in wedlock to whom he pleases, there have been eight Divines consulted, four Lutheran, four Reformed (Calvinist); who, all but one" (he of the Garrison Church, a rhadamanthine fellow in serge), have answered, 'No, your Majesty!’ “It is remarkable that his Majesty has not “gone to bed sober, for this month past.”*

* Nicolai: Anekdoten, vi. 183-189.

 Despatch, 3d October 1730.

What Seckendorf and Grumkow thought of all these phenomena? They have done their job too well. They are all for mercy; lean with their whole weight that way, — in black qualms, one of them withal, thinking tremulously to himself, “What if his now Majesty were to die upon us, in the interim!”

* Dickens, 9th and 19th December 1730.

CHAPTER II.

CROWN-PRINCE TO REPENT AND NOT PERISH.

IN regard to Friedrich, the Court-Martial needs no amendment from the King; the sentence on Friedrich, a Lieutenant-Colonel guilty of desertion, is, from President and all members except two, Death as by law. The two who dissented, invoking royal clemency and pardon, were Major-Generals by rank, — Schwerin, as some write, one of them, or if not Schwerin, then Linger; and for certain, Dönhof, — two worthy gentlemen not known to any of my readers, nor to me, except as names. The rest are all coldly of opinion that the military code says Death. Other codes and considerations may say this and that, which it is not in their province to touch upon; this is what the military code says: and they leave it there.

The Junius Brutus of a Royal Majesty had answered in his own heart grimly, Well then! But his Councillors, Old Dessauer, Grumkow, Seckendorf, one and all interpose vehemently. "Prince of the Empire, your Majesty, not a Lieutenant-Colonel only! Must not, cannot;" — nay good old Buddenbrock, in the fire of still unsuccessful pleading, tore open his waistcoat: "If "your Majesty requires blood, take mine; that other "you shall never get, so long as I can speak!" Foreign Courts interpose; Sweden, the Dutch; the English in a circuitous way, round by Vienna to wit; finally the Kaiser himself sends an Autograph;* for poor Queen Sophie has applied even to Seckendorf, will be friends with Grumkow himself, and in her despair is knocking at every door. Junius Brutus is said to have had paternal affections withal. Friedrich Wilhelm, alone against the whispers of his own heart and the voices of all men, yields at last in this cause. To Seckendorf, who has chalked out a milder didactic plan of treatment, still rigorous enough, he at last admits that such plan is perhaps good; that the Kaiser's Letter has turned the scale with him; and the didactic method, not the beheading one, shall be tried. That Dönhof and Schwerin, with their talk of mercy, with "their eyes upon the Rising Sun," as is evident, have done themselves no good, and shall perhaps find it so one day. But that, at any rate, Friedrich's life is spared; Katte's execution shall suffice in that kind. Repentance, prostrate submission and amendment, — these may do yet more for the prodigal. if he will in heart return. These points, sometime before the 8th of November, we find to be as good as settled.

The unhappy prodigal is in no condition to resist farther. Chaplain Müller had introduced himself with Katte's dying admonition to the Crown-Prince to repent and submit. Chaplain Müller, with his wholesome cooling-powders, with his ghostly counsels, and considerations of temporal and eternal nature, — we saw how he prospered almost beyond hope. Even on Predestination, and the real nature of Election by Free Grace, all is coming right, or come, reports Müller. The Chaplain's Reports, Friedrich Wilhelm's grimly mollified Responses on the same: they are written, and in confused form have been printed; but shall be spared the English reader.

* Date, 11th October 1790 (Förster, I. 882).

 His Letter to the King, 1st November 1790 (in Förster, I. 373, 376).

And Grumkow has been out at Cüstrin, preaching to the same purport from other texts: Grumkow, with the thought ever present to him, "What if Friedrich Wilhelm should die?" is naturally an eloquent preacher. Enough, it has been settled (perhaps before the day of Katte's death, or at the latest three days after it, as we can see), That if the Prince will, and can with free conscience, take an Oath ("no mental reservation," mark you!) of contrite repentance, of perfect prostrate submission, and purpose of future entire obedience and conformity to the paternal mind in all things, "Gnadenwahl" included, — the paternal mind may possibly relax his durance a little, and put him gradually on proof again.*

Towards which issue, as Chaplain Müller reports, the Crown-Prince is visibly gravitating, with all his weight and will. The very Gnadenwahl is settled; the young soul (truly a lover of Truth, your Majesty) taps on his ceiling, my floor being overhead, before the winter sun rises, as a signal that I must come down to him; — so eager to have error and darkness purged away. Believes himself, as I believe him, ready to undertake that Oath; desires, however, to see it first, that he may maturely study every clause of it. — Say you verily so? answers Majesty. And may my ursine heart flow out again, and blubber gratefully over a sinner saved, a poor Son plucked as brand from the burning? “God, the Most High, give his blessing on “it, then!” concludes the paternal Majesty: “And as “He often, by wondrous guidances, strange paths and “thorny steps, will bring men into the Kingdom of “Christ, so may our Divine Redeemer help that this “prodigal son be brought into His communion. That “his godless heart be beaten till it is softened and “changed; and so he be snatched from the claws of “Satan. This grant us the Almighty God and Father, “for our Lord Jesus Christ and His passion and death’s “sake! Amen! — I am, for the rest, your well-affec- “tioned King, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (Wusterhausen, 8th “November 1730).” *

* King's Letter to Müller, 8th November (Förster, i. 379).

Crown-Prince begins a new Course.

It was Monday 6th November when poor Katte died. Within a fortnight, on the second Sunday after, there has a Select Commission, Grumkow, Borek, Buddenbrock, with three other Soldiers, and the Privy Councillor Thulmeyer, come out to Cüstrin: there and then, Sunday, November 19th, these Seven, with due

* Förster, i. 379.

 Nicolai, exactest of men, only that Documents were occasionally solemnity administer the Oath (terms of Oath conceivable by readers); Friedrich being found ready. He signs the Oath, as well as audibly swears it: whereupon his sword is restored to him, and his prison-door opened. He steps forth to the Town Church with his Commissioners; takes the sacrament; listens, with all Cüstrin, to an allusive Sermon on the subject; "text happily chosen, preacher handling it well." Text was Psalm Seventy-seventh, verse eleventh (tenth of our English version), And I said, This is my infirmity; but I will remember the years of the right hand of the Most High; or, as Luther's version more intelligibly gives it, This I have to suffer; the right hand of the Most High can change all. Preacher (not Müller but another) rose gradually into didactic pathos; Prince, and all Cüstrin, were weeping, or near weeping, at the close of the business.*

Straight from Church the Prince is conducted, not to the Fortress, but to a certain Town Mansion, which he is to call his own henceforth, under conditions: an erring Prince half-liberated, and mercifully put on proof again. His first act here is to write, of his own composition, or helped by some official hand, this Letter to his All-serenest Papa; which must be introduced, though, except to readers of German who know the "Dero" (Theiro), "Allerdurchlauchtigster," and strange less accessible in his time, gives (Anekdoten, vi. 187) "Saturday, November 25th," as the day of the Oath; but, no doubt, the later inquirers, Preuss (i. 56) and others, have found him wrong in this small instance.

* Preuss, i. 56.

pipeclay solemnity of the Court-style, it is like to be in great part lost in any translation:

“Cüstrin, 19th November 1730.

“All-serenest and All-graciouslyest Father, — To your “Royal Majesty, my All-graciouslyest Father, have,” — i. e. “I have,” if one durst write the “I,” — “by my disobedience “as Theiro” (Youro) “subject and soldier, not less than by “my undutifulness as Theiro Son, given occasion to a just “wrath and aversion against me. With the All-obedientest “respect I submit myself wholly to the grace of my most All- “gracious Father; and beg him, Most All-graciously to pardon “me; as it is not so much the withdrawal of my liberty in a “sad arrest (malheureusen Arrest), as my own thoughts of “the fault I have committed, that have brought me to reason: “Who, with all obedientest respect and submission, continue “till my end,

“My All-graciouslyest King’s and Father’s faithfully obedientest “Servant and Son,

“FRIEDRICH.” *

This new House of Friedrich’s, in the little Town of Cüstrin, he finds arranged for him on rigorously thrifty principles, yet as a real Household of his own; and even in the form of a Court, with Hofmarschall, Kammerjunkers, and the other adjuncts; — Court reduced to its simplest expression, as the French say, and probably the cheapest that was ever set up. Hofmarschall (Court-Marshal) is one Wolden, a civilian Official here. The Kammerjunkers are Rohwedel and

* Preuss, i. 56, 57; and Anonymous, Friedrichs des Grossen Briefe an seinen Vater (Berlin, Posen und Bromberg, 1838), p. 3.

Natzmer; Natzmer Junior, son of a distinguished Feldmarschall: "a good-hearted, but foolish forward young fellow," says Wilhelmina; "the failure of a coxcomb (petit-maitre manqué)."^{} For example, once, strolling about in a solemn Kaiser's Soiree in Vienna, he found in some quiet corner the young Duke of Lorraine, Franz, who it is thought will be the divine Maria Theresa's husband, and Kaiser himself one day. Foolish Natzmer found this noble young gentleman in a remote corner of the Soiree; went up, nothing loth, to speak graciousities and insipidities to him: the noble young gentleman yawned, as was too natural, a wide long yawn; and in an insipid familiar manner, foolish Natzmer (Wilhelmina and the Berlin circles know it) put his finger into the noble young gentleman's mouth, and insipidly wagged it there. "Sir, you seem to forget where you are!" said the noble young gentleman; and closing his mouth with emphasis, turned away; but happily took no farther notice. This is all we yet know of the history of Natzmer, whose heedless ways and slapdash speculations, tinted with natural ingenuity and goodhumour, are not unattractive to the Prince.

Hofmarschall and these two Kammerjunkers are of the lawyer species; men intended for Official Business, in which the Prince himself is now to be occupied. The Prince has four lackeys, two pages, one valet. He "wears his sword, but has no sword-tash (porte-épée)," much less an officer's uniform: a mere Prince put upon his good behaviour again; not yet a soldier of the Prussian Army, only hoping to become so again. He wears a light-gray dress, "hecht-grauer (pike-gray) frock with narrow silver cordings;" and must recover his uniform, by proving himself gradually a new man.

* Wilhelmina, i. 310.

For there is, along with the new household, a new employment laid out for him in Cüstrin; and it shall be seen what figure he makes in that, first of all. He is to sit in the Domänen-Kammer or Government Board here, as youngest Rath; no other career permitted. Let him learn Economics and the way of managing Domain Lands (a very principal item of the royal revenues in this Country): humble work, but useful; which he had better see well how he will do. Two elder Raths are appointed to instruct him in the Economic Sciences and Practices, if he show faculty and diligence; — which in fact he turns out to do, in a superior degree, having every motive to try.

This kind of life lasted with him for the next fifteen months, all through the year 1731 and farther; and must have been a very singular, and was probably a highly instructive year to him, not in the Domain Sciences alone. He is left wholly to himself. All his fellow-creatures, as it were, are watching him. Hundred-eyed Argus, or the Ear of Dionysius, that is to say, Tobacco-Parliament with its spies and reporters, — no stirring of his finger can escape it here. He has much suspicion to encounter; Papa looking always sadly askance, sadly incredulous, upon him. He is in correspondence with Grumkow; takes much advice from Grumkow (our prompter-general, president in the Dionysius'-Ear, and not an ill-wisher farther); — professes much thankfulness to Grumkow, now and henceforth. Thank you for flinging me out of the six-story window, and catching me by the coatskirts! — Left altogether to himself, as we said; has in the whole Universe nothing that will save him but his own good sense, his own power of discovering what is what, and of doing what will be behoveful therein.

He is to quit his French literatures and pernicious practices, one and all. His very flute, most innocent "Princess," as he used to call his flute in old days, is denied him ever since he came to Cüstrin; — but by degrees he privately gets her back, and consorts much with her; wails forth, in beautiful adagios, emotions for which there is no other utterance at present. He has liberty of Cüstrin and the neighbourhood; out of Cüstrin he is not to lodge, any night, without leave had of the Commandant. Let him walk warily; and in good earnest study to become a new creature, useful for something in the Domain Sciences and otherwise.

CHAPTER III.

WILHELMINA IS TO WED THE PRINCE OF BAIREUTH.

CROWN-PRINCE FRIEDRICH being settled so far, his Majesty takes up the case of Wilhelmina, the other ravelled skein lying on hand. Wilhelmina has been prisoner in her Apartment at Berlin all this while: it is proper Wilhelmina be disposed of; either in wedlock, filially obedient to the royal mind; or in some much sterner way, "within four walls," it is whispered, if disobedient.

Poor Wilhelmina never thought of disobeying her parents: only, which of them to obey? King looks towards the Prince of Baireuth again, agreed on before those hurly-burlies now past; Queen looks far otherwards. Queen Sophie still desperately believes in the English match for Wilhelmina; and has subterranean correspondences with that Court; refusing to see that the negotiation is extinct there. Grumkow himself, so over-victorious in his late task, is now heeling towards England; "sincere in his wish to be well with us," thinks Dickens: Grumkow solaces her Majesty with delusive hopes in the English quarter. "Be firm, child; trust in my management; only swear to me, on your eternal salvation, that never, on any compulsion, will you marry another than the Prince of “Wales; — give me that oath!” * Such was Queen Sophie’s last proposal to Wilhelmina, — night of the 27th of January 1731, as is computable, — her Majesty to leave for Potsdam on the morrow. They wept much together, that night, but Wilhelmina dextrously evaded the oath, on a religious ground. Prince of Baireuth, whom Papa may like or may not like, has never yet personally made appearance: who or what will make appearance, or how things can or will turn, except a bad road, is terribly a mystery to Wilhelmina.

What with chagrin and confinement, what with bad diet (for the very diet is bad, quality and quantity alike unspeakable), Wilhelmina sees herself “reduced to a skeleton;” no company but her faithful Sonsfeld, no employment but her Books and Music; — struggles, however, still to keep heart. One day, it is in February 1731, as I compute, they are sitting, her Sonsfeld and she, at their sad mess of so-called dinner, in their remote upper story of the Berlin Schloss, tramp of sentries the one thing audible; and were “looking mournfully at one another, with nothing to “eat but a soup of salt-and-water, and a ragout of old “bones full of hairs and slopperies,” — nothing else; that was its real quality, whatever fine name they might give it, says the vehement Princess, — “we “heard a sharp tapping at the window; and started up “in surprise, to see what it could be. It was a raven,

* Wilhelmina, i. 314.

“carrying in its beak a bit of bread, which it left on the window-sill, and flew away.”*

“Tears came into our eyes at this adventure.” Are we become as Hebrew Elijahs, then; so that the wild ravens have to bring us food? Truth is, there was nothing miraculous, as Wilhelmina found by and by. It was a tame raven, — not the soul of old George I., which lives at Isleworth on good pensions; but the pet raven of a certain Margravine, which lost its way among the intricate roofs here. But the incident was touching. “Well,” exclaimed Wilhelmina, “in the Roman Histories I am now reading, it is often said “those creatures betoken good luck.” All Berlin, such the appetite for gossip, and such the famine of it in Berlin at present, talked of this minute event: and the French Colony, — old Protestant Colony, practical considerate people, — were so struck by it, they brought baskets of comfortable things to us, and left them daily, as if by accident, on some neutral ground, where the maid could pick them up, sentries refusing to see unless compelled. Which fine procedure has attached Wilhelmina to the French Nation ever since, as a dextrous useful people, and has given her a disposition to help them where she could.

The omen of the raven did not at once bring good luck: however, it did chance to be the turning-point, solstice of this long Greenland winter; after which, amid storms and alarms, daylight came steadily nearer.

* Wilhelmina, i. 316.

Storms and alarms: for there came rumours of quarrels out at Potsdam, quarrels on the old score between the Royal Spouses there: and frightful messages, through one Eversmann, an insolent royal lackey, about wedding Weissenfels, about imprisonment for life and other hard things; through all which Wilhelmina studied to keep her poor head steady, and answer with dignity yet discreetly. On the other hand, her Sisters are permitted to visit her, and perceptible assuagements come. At length, on the 11th of May, there came solemn Deputation, Borck, Grumkow, Thulmeyer in it, old real friends and pretended new; which set poor Wilhelmina wringing her hands (having had a Letter from Mamma overnight); but did bring about a solution. It was Friday 11th of May; a day of crisis in Wilhelmina's history; Queen commanding one thing, King another, and the hour of decision come.

Entering, announcing themselves, with dreadful solemnity, these gentlemen, Grumkow the spokesman, in soft phrase, but with strict clearness, made it apparent to her, That marry she must, — the Hereditary Prince of Baireuth, — and without the consent of both her Parents, which was unattainable at present, but peremptorily under the command of one of them, whose vote was the supreme. Do this (or even say that you will do it, whisper some of the well-affected), his Majesty's paternal favour will return upon you like pent waters; — and the Queen will surely reconcile herself (or perhaps turn it all her own way yet! whisper the well affected). Refuse to do it, her Majesty, your Royal Brother, you yourself Royal Highness, God only knows what the unheard-of issue will be for you all! Do it, let us advise you: you must, you must! — Wilhelmina wrung her hands; ran distractedly to and fro; the well-affected whispering to her, the others “conversing at a window.” At length she did it. Will marry whom her all-gracious Papa appoints; never wished or meant the least disobedience; hopes, beyond all things, his paternal love will now return, and make everybody blessed; — and O, reconcile Mamma to me, ye well-affected! adds she. — Bravissimo! answer they: her Majesty, for certain, will reconcile herself; Crown-Prince get back from Cüstrin, and all will be well.*

Friedrich Wilhelm was overjoyed; Queen Sophie Dorothee was in despair. With his Majesty, who “wept” like a paternal bear, on reëmbreing Wilhelmina the obedient some days hence, it became a settled point, and was indicated to Wilhelmina as such, That the Crown-Prince would, on her actual wedding, probably get back from Cüstrin. But her Majesty’s reconciliation, — this was very slow to follow. Her Majesty was still in flames of ire at their next interview; and poor Wilhelmina fainted, on approaching to kiss her hand. “Disgraced, vanquished, and my “enemies triumphing” said her Majesty; and vented her wrath on Wilhelmina; and fell ill (so soon as there was leisure), ill, like to die, and said, “Why pretend “to weep, when it is you that have killed me!” — and indeed was altogether hard, bitter, upon the poor

* Wilhelmina, i. 327-333.

Princess; a chief sorrow to her in these trying months. Can there be such wrath in celestial minds, venting itself so unreasonably? —

At present there is no leisure for illness; grand visitors in quantity have come and are coming; and the Court is brilliant exceedingly; — his Majesty blazing out into the due magnificence, which was very great on this occasion, domestic matter looking up with him again. The Serenities of Brunswick are here, young and old; much liked by Friedrich Wilhelm; and almost reckoned family people, — ever since their Eldest Son was affianced to the Princess Charlotte here, last visit they made. To Princess Charlotte, Wilhelmina's second junior, — mischievous, coquettish creature she, though very pretty and insinuating, who seems to think her Intended rather a phlegmatic young gentleman, as Wilhelmina gradually discovers. Then there is old Duke Eberhard Ludwig, of Würtemberg, whom we saw at Ludwigsburg last year, in an intricate condition with his female world and otherwise, he too announces himself, — according to promise then given. Old Duke Eberhard Ludwig comes, stays three weeks in great splendour of welcome; — poor old gentleman, his one son is now dead; and things are getting earnest with him. On his return home, this time, he finds, according to order, the foul witch Grävenitz duly cleared away; reinstates his injured Duchess, with the due feelings, better late than never; and dies in a year or two, still childless. —

These are among the high guests at Berlin; and there are plenty of others whom we do not name. Magnificent dining; with "six-and-twenty blackamoors," high-coloured creatures, marching up the grand staircase, round the table, round it, and then down again, melodious, doing "janizary music," if you happen to prefer that kind; — trained creatures these blackamoors, all got when boys, and set to cymballing and fifeing betimes, adds my authority.* Dining, boar-hunting (if the boar be huntable), especially reviewing, fail not in those fine summer days.

One evening, it is Sunday 27th of May, latish, while the high guests, with Queen and Wilhelmina, are just passing in to supper (King's Majesty having "gone to bed at seven," to be well astir for the review to-morrow), a sound of wheels is heard in the court. Modest travelling-equipage rolls up into the inner court; to the foot of the grand staircase there, whither only Princes come: — who can it be? The Queen sends to inquire. Heavens, it is the Hereditary Prince of Baireuth! "Medusa's Head never produced such effect "as did this bit of news: Queen sat petrified; and I," by reflex, was petrified too! Wilhelmina passed the miserablest night, no wink of sleep; and felt quite ill in the morning; — in dread, too, of Papa's rough jests, — and wretched enough. She had begged much, last night, to be excused from the review. But that could not be: "I must go," said the Queen after reflection, "and you with me." Which they did; — and diversified the pomp and circumstance of mock-war, by a small unexpected scene.

* Fassmann, p. 726, &c.

Queen, Princess and the proper Dames had, by his Majesty's order, to pass before the line: Princess in much trouble, "with three caps huddled on me, to conceal myself," poor soul. Margraf of Schwedt, at the head of his regiment, "looked swollen with rage," high hopes gone in this manner; — and saluted us with eyes turned away. As for his Mother, the Dessau Margravine in high colours, she was "blue in the face" all day. Lines passed, and salutations done, her Majesty and Dames withdrew to the safe distance, to look on: — Such a show, for pomp and circumstance, Wilhelmina owns, as could not be equalled in the world. Such wheeling, rhythmic coalescing and unfolding; accurate as clockwork, far and wide; swift big column here, hitting swift big column there, at the appointed place and moment; with their volleyings and trumpetings, bright uniforms and streamers and field-music, — in equipment and manoeuvre perfect all, to the meanest drummer or black kettledrummer: — supreme drill-sergeant playing on the thing, as on his huge piano, several square miles in area! Comes of the Old Dessauer, all this; of the "equal step;" of the abstruse meditations upon tactics, in that rough head of his. Very pretty indeed. — But in the mean while an Official steps up; cap in hand, approaches the Queen's carriage; says, He is ordered to introduce his Highness the Prince of Baireuth. Prince comes up accordingly; a personable young fellow; intelligent-looking, self-possessed; makes obeisance to her Majesty, who answers in frosty politeness; and — and Wilhelmina, faint, fasting, sleepless all night, fairly falls asworn. Could not be helped: and the whole world saw it; and Guy Dickens and the Diplomatsists wrote home about it, and there rose rumour and gossip enough!* But that was the naked truth of it: hot weather, agitation, want of sleep, want of food; not aversion to the Hereditary Prince, nothing of that.

Rather the contrary, indeed; and, on better acquaintance, much the contrary. For he proved a very rational, honourable and eligible young Prince: modest, honest, with abundance of sense and spirit; kind too and good, hot temper well kept, temper hot not harsh; quietly holds his own in all circles; good discourse in him too, and sharp repartee if requisite, — though he stammered somewhat in speaking. Submissive Wilhelmina feels that one might easily have had a worse husband. What glories for you in England! the Queen used to say to her in old times: “He is a Prince, that “Frederick, who has a good heart, and whose genius “is very small. Rather ugly than handsome; slightly “out of shape even (un peu contrefait). But provided “you have the complaisance to suffer his debaucheries, “you will quite govern him; and you will be more “King than he, when once his Father is dead. Only “see what a part you will play! It will be you that

* Dickens, of 2d June 1731 (in pathetic terms); Wilhelmina, i. 241 (without pathos).

“decide on the weal or woe of Europe, and give law
“to the Nation,”* — in a manner! Which Wilhelmina did not think a celestial prospect even then. Who knows but, of all the offers she had, “four” or three “crowned heads” among them, this final modest honest one may be intrinsically the best? Take your portion, if inevitable, and be thankful! —

The Betrothal follows in about a week; Sunday, 3d June 1731; with great magnificence, in presence of the high guests and all the world: and Wilhelmina is the affianced Bride of Friedrich of Baireuth: — and that enormous Double-Marriage Tragicomedy, of Much Ado about Nothing, is at last ended. Courage, friends; all things do end! —

The high guests hereupon go their ways again; and the Court of Berlin, one cannot but suppose, collapses, as after a great effort finished. Do not Friedrich Wilhelm and innumerable persons, — the readers and the writer of this History included, — feel a stone rolled off their hearts? — It is now, and not till now, that Queen Sophie falls sick, and like to die; and reproaches Wilhelmina with killing her. Friedrich Wilhelm hopes confidently, not; waits out at Potsdam, for a few days, till this killing danger pass; then departs, with double impetuosity, for Preussen, and despatch of Public Business; such a mountain of Domestic Business being victoriously got under.

Poor King, his life, this long while, has been a series of earthquakes and titanic convulsions. Narrow miss he has had, of pulling down his house about his ears, and burying self, son, wife, family and fortunes, under the ruin-heap, — a monument to remote posterity. Never was such an enchanted dance, of well-intentioned Royal Bear with poetic temperament, piped to by two black-artists, for the Kaiser's and Pragmatic Sanction's sake! Let Tobacco-Parliament also rejoice; for truly the play was growing dangerous, of late. King and Parliament, we may suppose, return to Public Business with double vigour.

CHAPTER IV.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE, IN PREUSSEN AND ELSEWHERE.

NOT that his Majesty, while at the deepest in domestic intricacies, ever neglects Public Business. This very summer, he is raising Hussar Squadrons; bent to introduce the Hussar kind of soldiery into his Army; — a good deal of horse-breaking and new sabre-exercise, needed for that object.* The affairs of the Reich have at no moment been out of his eye; — glad to see the Kaiser edging round to the Sea-Powers again, and things coming into their old posture, in spite of that sad Treaty of Seville.

Nay, for the last two years, while the domestic volcanoes were at their worst, his Majesty has been extensively dealing with a new question which has risen, that of the Salzburg Protestants; concerning which we shall hear more anon. Far and wide, in the Diets and elsewhere, he has been diligently, piously and with solid judgment, handling this question of the poor Salzburgers; and has even stored up moneys in intended solace of them (for he foresees what the end will be); — moneys which, it appears about this time, a certain Official over in Preussen has been peculating! In the end of June, his Majesty sets off to Preussen on the usual Inspection Tour; which we should not mention, were it not in regard to that same Official, and to something very rhadamanthine and particular which befel him; significant of what his Majesty can do in the way of prompt justice.

* Fassmann, pp. 417-418.

Case of Schlubhut.

The Königsberg Domain-Board (Kriegs- und Domänen-Kammer) had fallen awry, in various points, of late; several things known to be out at elbows in that Country; the Kammer Raths evidently lax at their post; for which reason they have been sharply questioned, and shaken by the collar, so to speak. Nay there is one Rath, a so-called Nobleman of those parts, by name Schlubhut, who has been found actually defaulting; peculating from that pious hoard intended for the Salzburger: — he is proved, and confesses, to have put into his own scandalous purse no less than 11,000 thalers, some say 30,000 (almost 5,000*l.*), which belonged to the Public Treasury and the Salzburg Protestants! These things, especially this latter unheard-of Schlubhut thing, the Supreme Court at Berlin (Criminal-Collegium) have been sitting on, for some time; and, in regard to Schlubhut, they have brought out a result, which Friedrich Wilhelm not a little admires at. Schlubhut clearly guilty of the defalcation, say they; but he has moneys, landed properties: let him refund, principal and interest; and have, say, three or four years' imprisonment, by way of memento. "Years' imprisonment? Refund? Is theft in the highest quarters a thing to be let off for refunding?" growls his Majesty; and will not confirm this sentence of his Criminal-Collegium; but leaves it till he get to the spot, and see with his own eyes. Schlubhut, in arrest or mild confinement all this while, ought to be bethinking himself more than he is!

Once on the spot, judge if the Königsberg Domain-Kammer had not a stiff muster to pass; especially if Schlubhut's drill-exercise was gentle! Schlubhut, summoned to private interview with his Majesty, carries his head higher than could be looked for: Is very sorry; knows not how it happened; meant always to refund; will refund, to the last penny, and make all good. — "Refund? Does He (Er) know what stealing means, then? How the commonest convicted private thief finds the gallows his portion; much more a public magistrate convicted of theft? Is He aware that He, in a very especial manner, deserves hanging, then?" — Schlubhut looks offended dignity; conscious of rank, if also of quasi-theft: "Es ist nicht Manier (it is not the "polite thing) to hang a Prussian Nobleman on those "light terms!" answers Schlubhut, high-mannered at the wrong time: "I can and will pay the money back!" — Noble-man? Money back? "I will none of His scoundrelly money." To strait Prison with this Schurke! — And thither he goes accordingly: unhappiest of mortals; to be conscious of rank, not at the right place, when about to steal the money, but at the wrong, when answering to Rhadamanthus on it!

And there, sure enough, Schlubhut lies, in his prison on the Schlossplatz, or Castle Square, of Königsberg, all night; and hears, close by the Domänen-Kammer, which is in the same Square, Domänen-Kammer where his Office used to be, a terrible sound of carpentering go on; — unhappiest of Prussian Noblemen. And in the morning, see, a high gallows built; close in upon the Domain-Kammer, looking into the very windows of it; — and there, sure enough, the unfortunate Schlubhut dies the thief's death, few hours hence; speaking or thinking what, no man reports to me. Death was certain for him; inevitable as fate. And so he vibrates there, admonitory to the other Rathes, for days, — some say for weeks, — till by humble petition they got the gallows removed. The stumps of it, sawed close by the stones, were long after visible in that Schlossplatz of Königsberg. Here is prompt justice with a witness! Did readers ever hear of such a thing? There is no doubt about the fact,* — though in all Prussian Books it is loosely smeared over, without the least precision of detail; and it was not till after long searching that I could so much as get it dated: July 1731, while Friedrich Crown-Prince is still in eclipse at Cüstrin, and some six weeks after Wilhelmina's betrothal. And here furthermore, direct from the then Schlubhut precincts, is a stray Note, meteorological chiefly; but worth picking up, since it is authentic. "Wehlau," we observe, is on the road homewards again, — on our return from uttermost Memel, — a day's journey hitherwards of that place, half a day's thitherwards of Königsberg:

* Benekendorf (Anonymous): Karakterzüge aus dem Leben König Friedrich Wilhelm I. (Berlin, 1788), vii. 15-20. Förster (il. 268), &c. &c.

"Tuesday 10th July 1731. King dining with General "Dockum at Wehlau," — where he had been again reviewing, for about forty hours, all manner of regiments brought to rendezvous there for the purpose, poor "General Katte with "his regiment" among them; — King at dinner with General Dockum after all that, "took the resolution to be off to "Königsberg; and arrived here at the stroke of midnight, in "a deluge of rain." This brings us within a day, or two days, of Schlubhut's death. Terrible "combat of Bisons "(Uri, or Auerochsen, with such manes, such heads), of two "wild Bisons against six wild Bears," then ensued; and the Schlubhut human tragedy; I know not in what sequence, — rather conjecture the Schlubhut had gone first. Pillau, road to Dantzic, on the narrow strip between the Frische Haf and Baltic, is the next stage homewards; at Pillau, General Finckenstein (excellent old Tutor of the Crown-Prince) is Commandant; and expects his rapid Majesty, day and hour given, to me not known. Majesty goes in three carriages; Old Dessauer, Grumkow, Seckendorf, Ginkel are among his suite; weather still very electric:

"At Fischhausen, half way to Pillau, Majesty had a bout "of elk-hunting; killed sixty elks" (Melton-Mowbray may consider it), — "creatures of the deer sort, nimble as roes, "but strong as bulls, and four palms higher than the biggest "horse, — to the astonishment of Seckendorf, Ginkel and the "strangers there. Half-an-hour short of Pillau, furious electri- "city again; thunderbolt shivered an oak-tree fifteen yards "from Majesty's carriage. And at Pillau itself, the Battalion "in Garrison there, drawn out in arms, by Count Finckenstein, "to receive his Majesty" (rain over by this time, we can hope),

“had suddenly to rush forward and take new ground; Frische “Haf, on some pressure from the elements, having suddenly “gushed out, two hundred paces beyond its old watermark “in that place.”*

Pillau, Fischhausen, — this is where the excellent old Adalbert stamped the earth with his life “in the shape of a cross” eight hundred years ago: and these are the new phenomena there! — The General Dockum, Colonel of Dragoons, whom his Majesty dined with at Wehlau, got his death not many months after. One of Dockum’s Dragoon Lieutenants felt insulted at something, and demanded his discharge: discharge given, he challenged Dockum, duel of pistols, and shot him dead. Nothing more to be said of Dockum, nor of that Lieutenant, in military annals.

Case of the Criminal-Collegium itself.

And thus was the error of the Criminal-Collegium rectified in re Schlubhut. For it is not in name only, but in fact, that this Sovereign is Supreme Judge, and bears the sword in God’s stead, — interfering now and then, when need is, in this terrible manner. In the same dim authentic Benekendorf (himself a member of the Criminal-Collegium in later times), and from him in all the Books, is recorded another interference somewhat in the comic vein; which also we may give. Undisputed fact, again totally without precision or details;

* See Mauvillon, ii. 298-297; — correcting by Fassmann, p. 422.

 7th April 1732 (Militair-Lexikon, i. 365).

not even dateable, except that, on study, we perceive it may have been before this Schlubhut's execution, and after the Criminal-Collegium had committed their error about him, — must have been while this of Schlubhut was still vividly in mind. Here is the unprecise but indubitable fact, as the Prussian Dryasdust has left us his smear of it:

“One morning early” (might be before Schlubhut was hanged, and while only sentence of imprisonment and restitution lay on him), General Graf von Dönhof, Colonel of a Musketeer regiment, favourite old soldier, — who did vote on the mild side in that Court-Martial on the Crown-Prince lately; but I hope has been forgiven by his Majesty, being much esteemed by him these long years past; — this Dönhof, early one morning, calls upon the King, with a grimly lamenting air. “What is wrong, Herr General?” — “Your Majesty, my best musketeer, an excellent soldier and of good inches, fell into a mistake lately, — bad company getting round the poor fellow; they, he among them, slipt into a House and stole something; trifle and without violence: pay is but three half-pence, your Majesty, and the Devil tempts men! Well, the Criminal-Collegium have condemned him to be hanged; an excellent soldier and of good inches, for that one fault. Nobleman Schlubhut was ‘to make restitution,’ they decreed: that was their decree on Schlubhut, one of their own set; and this poor soldier, six feet three, your Majesty, is to dance on the top of nothing for a three-halfpenny matter!” — So would Dönhof represent the thing, —

"fact being," says my Dryasdust, "it was a case of "housebreaking with theft to the value of 6,000 thalers, "and this musketeer the ringleader!" — Well; but was Schlubhut sentenced to hanging? Do you keep two weights and two measures, in that Criminal-Collegium of yours, then?

Friedrich Wilhelm feels this sad contrast very much; the more, as the soldier is his own chattel withal, and of superlative inches: Friedrich Wilhelm flames up into wrath; sends off swift messengers to bring these Judges, one and all, instantly into his presence. The Judges are still in their dressing-gowns, shaving, breakfasting; they make what haste they can. So soon as the first three or four are reported to be in the anteroom, Friedrich Wilhelm, in extreme impatience, has them called in; starts discoursing with them upon the two weights and two measures. Apologies, subterfuges do but provoke him farther; it is not long till he starts up, growling terribly: "Ihr Schurken (Ye Scoundrels), how could "you?" and smites down upon the crowns of them with the Royal Cudgel itself. Fancy the hurry-scurry, the unforensic attitudes and pleadings! Royal Cudgel rains blows, right and left: blood is drawn, crowns cracked, crowns nearly broken; and "several Judges lost a few teeth, and had their noses battered," before they could get out. The second relay meeting them in this dilapidated state, on the staircases, dashed home again without the honour of a royal interview.* Let them learn to keep one balance, and one set of weights, in their Law-Court henceforth. — This is an actual scene, of date Berlin 1731 or thereby; unusual in the annals of Themis. Of which no constitutional country can hope to see the fellow, were the need never so pressing. — I wish his Majesty had been a thought more equal, when he was so rhadamanthine! Schlubhut he hanged, Schlubhut being only Schlubhut's chattel; this musketeer, his Majesty's own chattel, he did not hang, but set him shouldering arms again, after some preliminary dusting! —

* Benekendorf, vii. 83. Förster, ii. 270.

His Majesty was always excessively severe on defalcations; any Chancellor with his Exchequer-bills gone wrong, would have fared ill in that Country. One Treasury dignitary, named Wilke (who had "dealt in tall recruits," as a kind of bye-trade, and played foul in some slight measure), the King was clear for hanging: his poor Wife galloped to Potsdam, shrieking mercy; upon which Friedrich Wilhelm had him whipt by the hangman, and stuck for life into Spandau. Still more tragical was poor Hesse's case. Hesse, some Domain Rath out at Königsberg, concerned with moneys, was found with account-books in a state of confusion, and several thousands short, when the outcome was cleared up. What has become of these thousands, Sir? Poor old Hesse could not tell: "God is my witness, no penny of them ever stuck to me," asseverated poor old Hesse; "but where they are —? My account-books are in such a state; — alas, and my poor old memory is not what it was!" They brought him to Berlin; in the end they actually hanged the poor old soul; — and then afterwards in his dusty lumber-rooms, hidden in pots, stuffed into this nook and that, most or all of the money was found!* Date and document exist for all these cases, though my Dryasdust gives none; and the cases are indubitable; very rhadamanthine indeed. The soft quality of mercy, — ah yes, it is beautiful and blessed, when permissible (though thrice-accursed, when not): but it is on the hard quality of justice, first of all, that Empires are built up, and beneficent and lasting things become achievable to mankind, in this world! —

Skipper Jenkins in the Gulf of Florida.

A couple of weeks before Schlubhut's death, the English Newspapers are somewhat astir, — in the way of narrative merely, as yet. Ship Rebecca, Captain Robert Jenkins Master, had arrived in the Port of London, with a strange story in her logbook. Of which, after due sifting, this is accurately the substance:

“London, 23d-27th June 1731. Captain Jenkins left this “Port with the Rebecca, several months ago; sailed to Jamai“ca, for a cargo of sugar. He took in his cargo at Jamaica;
“put to sea again, 5th April 1731, and proceeded on the voy“age homewards; with indifferent winds, for the first fort“night. April 20th, with no wind or none that would suit, he “was hanging about in the entrance of the Gulf of Florida, “not far from the Havanna,” — almost too near it, I should think; but these baffling winds! — “not far from the Havar-

* Förster (ll. 269), &c. &c.

“na, when a Spanish Guarda-Costa hove in sight; came down
“on Jenkins, and furiously boarded him: ‘Scoundrel, what do “you want; contrabanding in these seas? Jamaica, say you?
“Sugar? Likely! Let us see your logwood, hides, Spanish “pieces of eight!’ And broke in upon Jenkins, ship and per“son, in a most extraordinary manner. Tore up his hatches; “plunged down, seeking logwood, hides, pieces of eight;
“found none, — not the least trace of contraband on board of “Jenkins. They brought up his quadrants, sextants, how“ever; likewise his stock of tallow candles: they shook and “rummaged him, and all things, for pieces of eight; furiously “advised him, cutlass in hand, to confess guilt. They slashed
“the head of Jenkins, his left ear almost off. Order had been “given, ‘Scalp him!’ — but as he had no hair, they omitted
“that; merely brought away the wig, and slashed: — still no “confession, nor any pieces of eight. They hung him up to “the yard-arm, — actual neck-halter, but it seems to have “been tarry, and did not run: — still no confession. They “hoisted him higher, tied his cabin-boy to his feet; neck“halter then became awfully stringent upon Jenkins; had “not the cabin-boy (without head to speak of) slipped through, “noose being tarry; which was a sensible relief to Jenkins.
“Before very death, they lowered Jenkins, ‘Confess, “scoundrel, then!’ Scoundrel could not confess; spoke of “‘British Majesty’s flag, peaceable English subject on the high “seas.’ — ‘British Majesty; high seas!’ answered they, and “again hoisted. Thrice over they tried Jenkins in this man“ner at the yard-arm, once with cabin-boy at his feet: never “had man such a day, outrageous whiskerando cutthroats “tossing him about, his poor Rebecca and him, at such rate!
“Sun getting low, and not the least trace of contraband “found, they made a last assault on Jenkins; clutched the “bloody slit ear of him; tore it mercilessly off; flung it in his “face, ‘Carry that to your King, and tell him of it!’ Then “went their way; taking Jenkins’s tallow candles, and the “best of his sextants with them; so that he could hardly “work his passage home again, for want of latitudes; — and “has lost in goods 112*l.*, not to speak of his ear. Strictly true

 “all this; ship’s company, if required, will testify on their “oath.”*

These surely are singular facts; calculated to awaken a maritime public careful of its honour. Which they did, — after about eight years, as the reader will see! For the present, there are growlings in the coffeehouses; and, “Thursday, 28th June,” say the Newspapers, “This “day Captain Jenkins with his Owners,” ear in his pocket, I hope, “went out to Hampton Court to lay
 “the matter before his Grace of Newcastle:” “Please your Grace, it is hardly three months since the illustrious Treaty of Vienna was signed; Dutch and we leading in the Termagant of Spain, and nothing but halcyon weather to be looked for on that side!” Grace of Newcastle, anxious to avoid trouble with Spain, answers I can only fancy what; and nothing was done upon Jenkins and his ear; — may “keep it in cotton,” if he like; shall have “a better ship” for some solacement. This is the first emergence of Jenkins and his ear upon negligent mankind. He and it will marvellously reëmerge, one day! —

* Daily Journal (and the other London Newspapers), 12th-17th June (o. s.) 1731. Coxe, Walpole, i. 579, 580 (indistinct, and needing correction).

 “The Spaniards own they did a witty thing,

Who cropt our ears, and sent them to the King.”

POPE (date not given me).

Baby Carlos gets his Apanage.

But in regard to that Treaty of Vienna, seventh and last of the travail-throes for Baby Carlos's Apanage, let the too oblivious reader accept the following Extract, to keep him on a level with Public "Events," as they are pleased to denominate themselves:

"By that dreadful Treaty of Seville, Cardinal Fleury and
"the Spaniards should have joined with England, and coerced
"the Kaiser vi et armis to admit Spanish Garrisons" (instead of neutral) "into Parma and Piacenza, and so secure Baby
"Carlos his heritage there, which all Nature was in travail
"till he got. 'War in Italy to a certainty!' said all the "Newspapers, after Seville: and Crown-Prince Friedrich, we "saw, was running off to have a stroke in said War; — in"evitable, as the Kaiser still obstinately refused. And the "English, and great George their King, were ready. Neverthe"less no War came. Old Fleury, not wanting war, wanting
"only to fish out something useful for himself, — Lorraine
"how welcome, and indeed the smallest contributions are wel"come! — old Fleury manœuvred, hung back; till the Spa"niards and Termagant Elizabeth lost all patience, and the "very English were weary, and getting suspicious. Where"upon the Kaiser edged round to the Sea-Powers again, or
"they to him; and comfortable As-you-were was got accom"plished: much to the joy of Friedrich Wilhelm and others.
"Here are some of the dates to these sublime phenomena:

"March 16th, 1731, Treaty of Vienna, England and the "Kaiser coalescing again into comfortable As-you-were.
"Treaty done by Robinson" (Sir Thomas, ultimately Earl of Grantham, whom we shall often hear of in time coming);
"was confirmed and enlarged by a kind of second edition.

“22d July 1731; Dutch joining, Spain itself acceding, and all “being now right. Which could hardly have been ex“pected.

“For before the first edition of that Treaty, and while “Robinson at Vienna was still labouring like Hercules in it, — the poor Duke of Parma died. Died; and no vestige of a “‘Spanish Garrison’ yet there, to induct Baby Carlos accord“ing to old bargain. On the contrary, the Kaiser himself “took possession, — ‘till once the Duke’s Widow, who de“clares herself in the family-way, be brought to bed! If of “‘a Son, of course he must have the Duchies; if of a Daughter
“‘only, then Carlos shall get them, let not Robinson fear.’
“The due months ran, but neither son nor daughter came;
“and the Treaty of Vienna, first edition and also second, was “signed; and,

“October 20th, 1731, Spanish Garrisons, no longer a hypo“thesis but a bodily fact, 6,000 strong, ‘convoyed by the Bri“tish Fleet,’ came into Leghorn, and proceeded to lodge “themselves in the long-litigated Parma and Piacenza; —
“and, in fine, the day after Christmas, blessed be Heaven, “December 26th, Baby Carlos in highest person came in:

“Baby Carlos (more power to him) got the Duchies, and we “hope there was an end. No young gentleman ever had such “a pothor to make among his fellow-creatures about a little “heritable property. If Baby Carlos’s performance in it be “anything in proportion, he will be a supereminent so“vereign!

“There is still some haggle about Tuscany, the Duke of “which is old and heirless; Last of the Medici, as he proved.
“Baby Carlos would much like to have Tuscany too; but that “is a Fief of the Empire, and might easily be better disposed “of, thinks the Kaiser. A more or less uncertain point, that “of Tuscany; as many points are! Last of the Medici com“plained, in a polite manner, that they were parting his “clothes before he had put them off: however, having no “strength, he did not attempt resistance, but politely com“posed himself, ‘Well, then!’* Do readers need to be in“formed that this same Baby Carlos came to be King of “Naples, and even ultimately to be Carlos III. of Spain, — “leaving a younger Son to be King of Naples, ancestor of the “now Majesty there?”

And thus, after such Diplomatic earthquakes and travail of Nature, there is at last birth; the Seventh Travail-throe has been successful, in some measure successful. Here actually is Baby Carlos’s Apanage; there probably, by favour of Heaven and of the Sea-Powers, will the Kaiser’s Pragmatic Sanction be, one day. Treaty of Seville, most imminent of all those dreadful Imminencies of War, has passed off as they all did; peaceably adjusts itself into Treaty of Vienna: A Termagant, as it were, sated; a Kaiser hopeful to be so, Pragmatic Sanction and all: for the Sea-Powers and everybody mere halcyon weather henceforth, — not extending to the Gulf of Florida and Captain Jenkins, as would seem! Robinson, who did the thing, — an expert man, bred to business as old Horace Walpole’s Secretary, at Soissons and elsewhere, and now come to act on his own score, — regards this Treaty of Vienna (which indeed had its multiform difficulties) as a thing to immortalise a man.

* Schöll, II. 219-221; Coxe’s Walpole, I. 346; Coxe’s House of Austria (London, 1854), III. 151.

Crown-Prince has, long since, by Papa's order, written to the Kaiser, to thank Imperial Majesty for that beneficent intercession, which has proved the saving of his life, as Papa inculcates. We must now see a little how the saved Crown-Prince is getting on, in his eclipsed state, among the Domain Sciences at Cüstrin.

CHAPTER V.

INTERVIEW OF MAJESTY AND CROWN-PRINCE AT CÜSTRIN.

EVER since the end of November last year, Crown-Prince Friedrich, in the eclipsed state, at Cüstrin, has been prosecuting his probationary course, in the Domain Sciences and otherwise, with all the patience, diligence and dexterity he could. It is false, what one reads in some foolish Books, that Friedrich neglected the functions assigned him as assessor in the Kriegs- und Domänen-Kammer. That would not have been the safe course for him! The truth still evident is, he set himself with diligence to learn the Friedrich-Wilhelm methods of administering Domains, and the art of Finance in general, especially of Prussian Finance, the best extant then or since; — Finance, Police, Administrative Business; — and profited well by the Raths appointed as tutors to him, in the respective branches. One Hille was his Finance-tutor; whose "Kompendium," drawn up and made use of on this occasion, has been printed in our time; and is said to be, in brief compass, a highly instructive Piece; throwing clear light on the exemplary Friedrich-Wilhelm methods.* These the Prince did actually learn; and also practise, all his life, — "essentially following his Father's methods," say the Authorities, — with great advantage to himself, when the time came.

* Preuss, i. 59 n.

Solid Nicolai hunted diligently after traces of him in the Assessor business here; and found some: — Order from Papa, to “make Report upon the Glass-works of the Neumark;” Autograph signatures to common Reports, one or two; and some traditions of his having had a hand in planning certain Farm Buildings still standing in those parts: — but as the Kammer Records of Cüstrin, and Cüstrin itself, were utterly burnt by the Russians in 1758, such traces had mostly vanished, thirty years before Nicolai’s time.* Enough have turned up since, in the form of Correspondence with the King and otherwise: and it is certain the Crown-Prince did plan Farm-Buildings; — “both Carzig and Himmelstädt (Carzig now called Friedrichs-felde in consequence),” dim mossy Steadings, which pious Antiquarianism can pilgrim to if it likes, were built or rebuilt by him: — and it is remarkable withal how thoroughly instructed Friedrich Wilhelm shows himself in such matters; and how paternally delighted to receive such proposals of improvement introducible at the said Carzig and Himmelstädt, and to find young Graceless so diligent, and his ideas even good. Perhaps a momentary glance into those affairs may be permitted farther on.

The Prince’s life, in this his eclipsed state, is one of constraint, anxiety, continual liability; but after the first months are well over, it begins to be more supportable than we should think. He is fixed to the little Town; cannot be absent any night, without leave from the Commandant; which, however, and the various similar restrictions, are more formal than real. An amiable Crown-Prince, no soul in Cüstrin but would run by night or by day to serve him. He drives and rides about, in that green peaty country, on Domain business, on visits, on permissible amusement, pretty much at his own modest discretion. A green flat region, made of peat and sand; human industry needing to be always busy on it: raised causeways with incessant bridges, black sedgy ditch on this hand and that; many meres, muddy pools, stagnant or flowing waters everywhere; big muddy Oder, of yellowish-drab colour, coming from the south, big black Warta (Warthe) from the Polish fens in the east, the black and yellow refusing to mingle for some miles. Nothing of the picturesque in this country; but a good deal of the useful, of the improvable by economic science; and more of fine productions in it, too, of the floral, and still more interesting sorts, than you would suspect at first sight. Friedrich's worst pinch was his dreadful straitness of income; checking one's noble tendencies on every hand: but the gentry of the district privately subscribed gifts for him (se cotisirent, says Wilhelmina); and one way and other he contrived to make ends meet. Münchow, his President in the Kammer, next to whom sits Friedrich, "King's place standing always ready but empty there," is heartily his friend; the Münchows are diligent in getting up balls, rural gaieties, for him; so the Hilles, — nay Hille, severe Finance tutor, has a Mam-sell Hille whom it is pleasant to dance with;* nor indeed is she the only fascinating specimen, or flower of loveliness, in those peaty regions, as we shall see. On the whole, his Royal Highness, after the first paroxysms of Royal suspicion are over, and forgiveness beginning to seem possible to the Royal mind, has a supportable time of it; and possesses his soul in patience, in activity and hope.

* Nicolai: Anekdoten, vi. 193.

 See Map at p. 165.

 Förster, ii. 390, 387, 391.

Unpermitted things, once for all, he must avoid to do: perhaps he will gradually discover that many of them were foolish things better not done. He walks warily; to this all things continually admonish. We trace in him some real desire to be wise, to do and learn what is useful if he can here. But the grand problem, which is reality itself to him, is always, To regain favour with Papa. And this, Papa being what he is, gives a twist to all other problems the young man may have, for they must all shape themselves by this; and introduces something of artificial, — not properly of hypocritical, for that too is fatal if found out, — but of calculated, reticent, of half-sincere, on the Son's part: an inevitable feature, plentifully visible in their Correspondence now and henceforth. Corresponding with Papa and his Grumkow, and watched, at every step, by such an Argus as the Tobacco-Parliament, real frankness of speech is not quite the recommendable thing; apparent frankness may be the safer! Besides mastery in the Domain Sciences, I perceive the Crown-Prince had to study here another art, useful to him in after life: the art of wearing among his fellow-creatures a polite cloak-of-darkness. Gradually he becomes master of it as few are: a man politely impregnable to the intrusion of human curiosity; able to look cheerily into the very eyes of men, and talk in a social way face to face, and yet continue intrinsically invisible to them. An art no less essential to Royalty than that of the Domain Sciences itself; and, — if at all consummately done, and with a scorn of mendacity for help, as in this case, — a difficult art. It is the chief feature in the Two or Three Thousand Letters we yet have of Friedrich's to all manner of correspondents: Letters written with the gracefulest flowing rapidity; polite, affable, — refusing to give you the least glimpse into his real inner man, or tell you any particular you might impertinently wish to know.

* Preuss, i. 59.

As the History of Friedrich, in this Cüstrin epoch, and indeed in all epochs and parts, is still little other than a whirlpool of simmering confusions, dust mainly, and sibylline paper-shreds, in the pages of poor Dryasdust, perhaps we cannot do better than snatch a shred or two (of the partly legible kind, or capable of being made legible) out of that hideous cauldron; pin them down at their proper dates; and try if the reader can, by such means, catch a glimpse of the thing with his own eyes. Here is shred first; a Piece in Grumkow's hand.

This treats of a very grand incident; which forms an era or turning-point in the Cüstrin life. Majesty has actually, after hopes long held out of such a thing, looked in upon the Prodigal at Cüstrin, in testimony of possible pardon in the distance; — sees him again, for the first time since that scene at Wesel with the drawn sword, after year and day. Grumkow, for behoof of Seckendorf and the Vienna people, has drawn a rough “Protocol” of it; and here it is, snatched from the Dust-whirlwinds, and faithfully presented to the English reader. His Majesty is travelling towards Sonnenburg, on some grand Knight-of-Malta Ceremony there; and halts at Cüstrin for a couple of hours as he passes:

Grumkow's “Protokoll” of the 15th August 1731; or Summary of what took place at Cüstrin that day.

“His Majesty arrived at Cüstrin yesterday” (gestern, Monday 15th, — hour not mentioned), “and proceeded at once to the Government House, with an attendance of several hundred persons. Major-General Lepel,” Commandant of Cüstrin, “Colonel Derschau and myself are immediately sent for to his Majesty’s apartment there. Privy-Councillor Wolden,” Prince’s Hofmarschall, a solid legal man, “is ordered by his Majesty to bring the Crown-Prince over from his house: who accordingly in few minutes, attended by Rohwedel and Natzmer,” the two Kammerjunckers, “entered the room where his Majesty and we were.

“So soon as his Majesty, turning round, had sight of him, the Crown-Prince fell at his feet. Having bidden him rise, his Majesty said with a severe mien:

“You will now bethink yourself what passed year and day ago; and how scandalously you saw fit to behave your“‘self, and what a godless enterprise you took in hand. As I “‘have had you about me from the beginning, and must know

“‘you well, I did all in the world that was in my power, by “‘kindness and by harshness, to make an honourable man of “‘you. As I rather suspected your evil purpose, I treated “‘you in the harshest and sharpest way in the Saxon Camp,” at Radewitz, in those gala days, “‘in hopes you would con“‘sider yourself, and take another line of conduct; would “‘confess your faults to me, and beg forgiveness. But all in “‘vain; you grew ever more stiffnecked. When a young man “‘gets into follies with women, one may try to overlook it as “‘the fault of his age: but to do with forethought basenesses “‘(lâchetéen) and ugly actions; that is unpardonable. You “‘thought to carry it through with your headstrong humour:
“‘but hark ye, my lad (höre, mein Kertl), if thou wert sixty or “‘seventy instead of eighteen, thou couldst not cross my reso“‘lutions.’” It would take a bigger man to do that, my lad!
“‘And as, up to this date (bis dato) I have managed to sustain “‘myself against any comer, there will be methods found of “‘bringing thee to reason too! —

“‘How have not I, on all occasions, meant honourably by “‘you! Last time I got wind of your debts, how did I, as a “‘Father, admonish you to tell me all; I would pay all, you “‘were only to tell me the truth. Whereupon you said, There “‘were still Two-thousand Thalers beyond the sum named.
“‘I paid these also at once; and fancied I had made peace
“‘with you. And then it was found, by and by, you owed “‘many thousands more; and as you now knew you could not “‘pay, it was as good as if the money had been stolen; — not “‘to reckon how the French vermin, Montholieu and partner, “‘cheated you with their new loans.’ Pfui! — — ‘Nothing “‘touched me so much’” (continues his Majesty, verging towards the pathetic), “as that you had not any trust in me.

All this that I was doing for aggrandisement of the House, the Army and Finances, could only be for you, if you made yourself worthy of it! I here declare I have done all things to gain your friendship; — and all has been in vain!’ At which words the Crown-Prince, with a very sorrowful gesture, threw himself at his Majesty’s feet,” — tears (presumably) in both their eyes by this time.

“‘Was it not your intention to go to England?’ asked his Majesty farther on. The Prince answered: ‘Ja!’ — ‘Then hear what the consequences would have been. Your Mother would have got into the greatest misery; I could not but have suspected she was the author of the business. Your Sister I would have cast, for life, into a place where she never would have seen sun and moon again. Then on with my Army into Hanover, and burn and ravage; yes, if it had cost me life, land and people. Your thoughtless and godless conduct, see what it was leading to. I intended to employ you in all manner of business, civil, military; but how, after such an action, could I show the face of you to my Officers (soldiers) and other servants? — The one way of repairing all this is, That you seek, regardless of your very life in comparison, to make the fault good again!’ At which words the Crown-Prince mournfully threw himself at his Royal Majesty’s feet; begging to be put upon the hardest proofs: He would endure all things, so as to recover his Majesty’s grace and esteem.

“Whereupon the King asked him: ‘Was it thou that temptedst Katte; or did Katte tempt thee?’ The Crown-Prince without hesitation answered, ‘I tempted him.’ — ‘I am glad to hear the truth from you, at any rate.’”

The Dialogue now branches out, into complex general form; out of which, intent upon abridging, we gather the following points. King loquitur:

“How do you like your Cüstrin life? Still as much aversion to Wusterhausen, and to wearing your shroud’ (Sterbekittel, name for the tight uniform you would now be so glad of, and think quite other than a shroud!) ‘as you called it?’ Prince’s answer wanting. — ‘Likely enough my company does not suit you: I have no French manners, and cannot bring out bon-mots in the petit-maitre way; and truly regard all that as a thing to be flung to the dogs. I am a German Prince; and mean to live and die in that character. But you can now say what you have got by your caprices and obstinate heart; hating everything that I liked; and if I distinguished any one, despising him! If an Officer was put in arrest, you took to lamenting about him. Your real friends, who intended your good, you hated and calumniated; those that flattered you, and encouraged your bad purpose, you caressed. You see what that has come to. In Berlin, in all Prussia for some time back, nobody asks after you, Whether you are in the world or not; and were it not one or the other coming from Cüstrin who reports you as playing tennis and wearing French hairbags, nobody would know whether you were alive or dead.”

Hard sayings; to which the Prince’s answers (if there were any beyond mournful gestures) are not given. We come now upon Predestination, or the Gnadenwahl; and learn (with real interest, not of the laughing sort alone) how his “Majesty, in the most conclusive way, set forth the horrible results of that Absolute-Decree notion; which makes out God to be the Author of Sin, and that Jesus Christ died only for some! Upon which the Crown-Prince vowed and declared (hoch und theuer), he was now wholly of his Majesty’s orthodox opinion.”

The King, now thoroughly moved, expresses satisfaction at the orthodoxy; and adds with enthusiasm, “When godless “fellows about you speak against your duties to God, the King

“and your Country, fall instantly on your knees, and pray
“with your whole soul to Jesus Christ to deliver you from such “wickedness and lead you on better ways. And if it come in “earnest from your heart, Jesus, who would have all men “saved, will not leave you unheard.” No! And so may God in his mercy aid you, poor son Fritz. And as for me, in hopes the time coming will show fruits, I forgive you what is past. —
To which the Crown-Prince answered with monosyllables, with many tears; “kissing his Majesty’s feet;” — and as the King’s eyes were not dry, he withdrew into another room; revolving many things in his altered soul.

“It being his Majesty’s birthday” (4th August by old style, 15th by new, forty-third birthday), “the Prince, all bewept
“and in emotion, followed his Father; and, again falling pro“strate, testified such heartfelt joy, gratitude and affection “over this blessed anniversary, as quite touched the heart of “Papa; who at last clasped him in his arms” (poor soul, after all!), “and hurried out to avoid blubbering quite “aloud. He stept into his carriage,” intending for Sonnenburg (chiefly by water) this evening, where a Serene Cousin, one of the Schwedt Margraves, Head Knight of Malta, has his establishment.

“The Crown-Prince followed his Majesty out; and, in the “presence of many hundred people, kissed his Majesty’s feet” again (linen gaiters, not Day-and-Martin shoes); “and was “again embraced by his Majesty, who said, ‘Behave well, as “‘I see you mean, and I will take care of you,’ which threw
“the Crown-Prince into such an ecstasy of joy as no pen can “express:” and so the carriages rolled away, — towards the Knights-of-Malta business and Palace of the Head Knight of Malta, in the first place.*

* Förster, iii. 50-54.

These are the main points, says Grumkow, reporting next day; and the reader must interpret them as he can. A Crown-Prince with excellent histrionic talents, thinks the reader. Well; a certain exaggeration, immensity of wish becoming itself enthusiasm; somewhat of that: but that is by no means the whole or even the main part of the phenomenon, O reader. This Crown-Prince has a real affection to his Father, as we shall in time convince ourselves. Say, at lowest, a Crown-Prince loyal to fact; able to recognise overwhelming fact, and aware that he must surrender thereto. Surrender once made, the element much clears itself; Papa's side of the question getting fairly stated for the first time. Sure enough, Papa is God's Vicegerent in several undeniable respects, most important some of them: better try if we can obey Papa.

Dim old Fassmann yields a spark or two, — as to his Majesty's errand at Sonnenburg. Majesty is going to preside to-morrow "at the Installation of young Margraf Karl, new Herrmeister (Grand-Master) of the "Knights of St. John" there; "the Office having suddenly fallen vacant lately." Office which is an heirloom; — usually held by one of the Margraves, half-uncles of the King, — some junior of them, not provided for at Schwedt or otherwise. Margraf Albert, the last occupant, an old gentleman of sixty, died lately, "by stroke of apoplexy while at dinner;"* — and his eldest Son, Margraf Karl, with whom his Majesty lodges to-night, is now Herrmeister. "Majesty

* 21st June 1731: Fassmann, p. 423; Pöllnitz, ii. 390.

"came at six p. m. to Sonnenburg" (must have left Cüstrin about five): "forty-two Ritters made at Sonnenburg next day," — a certain Colonel or Lieutenant-General von Wreech, whom we shall soon see again, is one of them; Seckendorf another. "Fresh Ritter-Schlag" ("Knight-stroke," Batch of Knights dubbed) "at Sonnenburg, 29th September next," which shall not the least concern us. Note Margraf Karl, however, the new Herrmeister; for he proves a soldier of some mark, and will turn up again in the Silesian Wars; — as will a poor Brother of his still more impressively, "shot dead beside the King," on one occasion there.

We add this of Dickens; for all the Diplomatsists, and a discerning public generally, are much struck with the Event at Cüstrin; and take to writing of it as news; — and "Mr. Ginkel," Dutch Ambassador here, an ingenious, honest and observant man, well enough known to us, has been out to sup with the Prince, next day; and thus reports of him to Dickens: "Mr. Ginkel, who "supped with the Prince on 'Thursday last," day after the Interview, "tells me that his Royal Highness is extremely improved since he had seen him; being grown much taller; and that his conversation is surprising for his age, abounding in good sense and the prettiest turns of expression." *

Here are other shreds, snatched from the Wi Cauldron, and pinned down, each at its place; we give us one or two subsequent glimpses:

* Despatch, 18th August 1731.

Potsdam, 21st August 1731 (King to Wolden the Hofmarschall). * * * "Crown-Prince shall travel over, and personally inspect, the following Domains: Quartschen, Himmelstädt, Carzig, Massin, Lebus, Gollow and Wollup," dingy moor-farms dear to Antiquarians; "travel over these and not any other. Permission always to be asked, of his Royal Majesty, in writing, and mention made to which of them the Crown-Prince means to go. Some one to be always in attendance, who can give him fit instruction about the husbandry; and as the Crown-Prince has yet only learned the theory, he must now be diligent to learn the same practically. For which end it must be minutely explained to him, How the husbandry is managed, — how ploughed, manured, sown, in every particular; and what the differences of good and bad husbandry are, so that he may be able of himself to know and judge the same. Of Cattle-husbandry, too, and the affairs of Brewing (Viehzeit und Brauwesen), the due understanding to be given him; and in the matter of Brewing, show him how things are handled, mixed, the beer drawn off, barrelled, and all how they do with it (wie überall dabei verfahren); also the malt, how it must be prepared, and what like, when good. Useful discourse to be kept up with him on these journeys; pointing out how and why this is and that, and whether it could not be better:" — O King of a thousand! — "Has liberty to shoot stags, moorcocks (Hühner) and the like; and a small-hunt" (kleine Jagd, not a Parforce or big one) "can be got up for his amusement now and then;" furthermore "a little duck-shooting, from boat," on the sedgy waters there, — if the poor soul should care about it. Wolden, or one of the Kammerjunkers, to accompany always, and be responsible. "No Mädchen or Frauensmensch," no shadow of womankind; — keep an eye on him, "you three!"

These things are in the Prussian Archives; of date the week after that Interview. In two weeks farther, follows the Prince's speculation about Carzig and the Building of a Farmstead there; with Papa's "real contentment that you come upon such proposals, and seek "to make improvements. Only" — Wusterhausen, 11th September (King to Crown-Prince).

* * * "Only you must examine whether there is meadow-ground enough, and how many acres can actually be allotted "to that Farm." (Hear his Majesty!) "Take a Land-surveyor with you; and have all well considered; and exactly "inform yourself what kind of land it is, whether it can only "grow rye, or whether some of it is barley-land: you must "consider it yourself, and do it all out of your own head, "though you may consult with others about it. In grazing-ground (Hüthung) I think it will not fail; if only the meadow-land" — in fact it fails in nothing; and is got all done ("wood "laid out to season straightway," and "what digging "and stubbing there is proceeded with through the "winter"): done in a successful and instructive manner, both Carzig and Himmelstädt, though we will say nothing farther of them. *

Cülstrin, 22d September (Crown-Prince to Papa). * * "Have "been at Lebus; excellent land out there; fine weather for "the husbandman." "Major Röder," unknown Major, "passed this way; and dined with me, last Wednesday. He "has got a pretty fellow (schönen Kerl) for my Most All-Gracious Father's regiment" (the Potsdam Giants, where I used to be); "whom I could not look upon without bleeding heart. "I depend on my Most All-Gracious Father's Grace, that "he will be good to me: I ask for nothing and no happiness "in the world but what comes from You; and hope You will, "some day, remember me in grace, and give me the Blue "Coat to put on again!"* — To which Papa answers nothing, or only "Hm, na, time may come!"

Carzig goes on straightway; Papa charmed to grant the moneys; "wood laid out to season," and much "stubbing and digging" set on foot, before the month ends. Carzig; and directly on the heel of it, on like terms, Himmelstädt, — but of all this we must say no more. It is clear the Prince is learning the Domain Sciences; eager to prove himself a perfect son in the eyes of Papa. Papa, in hopeful moments, asks himself: "To whom shall we marry him then; how settle him?" But what the Prince, in his own heart, thought of it all; how he looked, talked, lived, in unofficial times? Here has a crabbed dim Document turned up, which, if it were not nearly undecipherable to the reader and me, would throw light on the point:

Schulenburg's Three Letters to Grumkow, on visits to the Crown-Prince, during the Cüstrin time.

The reader knows Lieutenant-General Schulenburg; stiff little military gentleman of grave years, nephew of the Maypole Emerita who is called Duchess of Kendal in England. "Had a horse shot under him at Malplaquet;" battlings and experiences enough, before and since. Has real sense, abundant real pedantry; a Prussian soldier every inch. He presided in the Cöpenick Court-martial; he is deeply concerned in these Crown-Prince difficulties. His Majesty even honours him by expecting he should quietly keep a monitorial eye upon the Crown-Prince; — being his neighbour in those parts; Colonel-Commandant of a regiment of Horse at Landsberg not many miles off. He has just been at Vienna* on some “business” (quasi-diplomatic probably, which can remain unknown to us); and has reported upon it, or otherwise finished it off, at Berlin; — whence rapidly home to Landsberg again. On the way homewards, and after getting home, he writes these Three Letters; offhand and in all privacy, and of course with a business sincerity, to Grumkow; — little thinking they would one day get printed, and wander into these latitudes to be scanned and scrutinised! Undoubtedly an intricate crabbed Document to us; but then an indubitable one. Crown-Prince, Schulenburg himself, and the actual figure of Time and Place, are here mirrored for us, with a business sincerity, in the mind of Schulenburg, — as from an accidental patch of water; ruffled bog-water, in sad twilight, and with sedges and twigs intervening; but under these conditions we do look with our own eyes!

* Briefwechsel mit Vater (Œuvres, xxvll. part 3d, p. 27).

Could not one, by any conceivable method, interpret into legibility this abstruse dull Document; and so pick out here and there a glimpse, actual face-to-face view, of Crown-Prince Friedrich in his light-gray frock with the narrow silver tresses, in his eclipsed condition there in the Cüstrin region? All is very mysterious about him; his inward opinion about all manner of matters, from the Gnadenwahl to the late Double-Marriage Question. Even his outward manner of life, in its flesh-and-blood physiognomy, — we search in vain through tons of dusty lucubration totally without interest, to catch here and there the corner of a feature of it. Let us try Schulenburg. We shall know at any rate that to Grumkow, in the Autumn 1731, these words were luculent and significant: consciously they tell us something of young Friedrich; unconsciously a good deal of Lieutenant-General Schulenburg, who with his strict theologies, his military stiffnesses, his reticent, pipeclayed, rigorous and yet human ways, is worth looking at, as an antique species extinct in our time. He is just home from Vienna, getting towards his own domicile from Berlin, from Cüstrin, and has seen the Prince. He writes in a wretched wayside tavern, or posthouse, between Cüstrin and Landsberg, — dates his Letter "Wien (Vienna)," as if he were still in the imperial City, so off-hand is he.

* September 1731 (Militair-Lexikon, III. 433).

No. 1. To his Excellenz (add a shovelful of other titles) Lieutenant-General Herr Baron von Grumkow, President of the Krieges- und Domänen-Directorium, of the (in fact, Vice-President of the Tobacco-Parliament), in Berlin.

"Wien" (properly Berlin-Landsberg Highway, other side of Cüstrin), "4th October 1731.

"I regret much to have missed the pleasure of seeing your "Excellency again before I left Berlin. I set off between “seven and eight in the morning yesterday, and got to “Cüstrin” (seventy miles or so) “before seven at night. But “the Prince had gone, that day, to the Bailliage of Himmel- “städt” (up the Warta Country, eastward some five-and- thirty miles, much preparatory digging and stubbing there); and he “slept at Massin” (circuitous road back), “where he “shot a few stags this morning. As I was told he might pro- “bably dine at Kammin” (still nearer Cüstrin, twelve miles from it; half that distance east of Zorndorf, — mark that, O reader*) “with Madam Colonel Schöning, I drove thither. “He had arrived there, a moment before me.” And who is Madam Schöning, lady of Kammin here? — Patience, reader.

“I found him much grown; an air of health and gaiety “about him. He caressed me greatly (me gracieusea fort); “afterwards questioned me about my way of life in Vienna; “and asked, If I had diverted myself well there? I told him “what business had been the occasion of my journey, and “that this rather than amusements had occupied me; for the “rest, that there had been great affluence of company, and “no lack of diversions. He spoke a long time to Madam de “Wreech” —

“Wrochem” Schulenburg calls her: young wife of Lieu- tenant-General von Wreech, a Marlborough Campaigner, made a Knight of Malta the other day;  — his charm- ing young Wife, and Daughter of Madam Colonel Schöning our hostess here; lives at Tamsel, in high style, in these parts: mark the young Lady well, —

“who did not appear indifferent to him.” No! — “and in fact “she was in all her beauty; a complexion of lily and rose.”

* Map at p. 185.

 Militair-Lexikon, iv. 269.

Charming creature; concerning whom there are anecdotes still afloat, and at least verses of this Prince's writing; not too well seen by Wreech, lately made a Knight of Malta, who, though only turning forty, is perhaps twice her age. The beautifullest, cleverest, — fancy it; and whether the peaty Neumark produces nothing in the floral kind!

“We went to dinner; he asked me to sit beside him. The “conversation fell, among other topics, on the Elector Palatine's Mistress,” — crotchety old gentleman, never out of quarrels, with Heidelberg Protestants, heirs of Jülich and Berg, and in general with an unreasonable world, whom we saw at Mannheim last year; has a Mistress, — “Elector Palatine's Mistress, called Taxis. Crown-Prince said: ‘I should “like to know what that good old gentleman does with a mistress?’ I answered, That the fashion had come so much “in vogue, Princes did not think they were Princes unless “they had mistresses; and that I was amazed at the facility “of women, how they could shut their eyes on the sad reverse “of fortune nearly inevitable for them; — and instanced the “example of Madam Grävenitz” —

“Grävenitz;” example lately fallen out at Würtemberg, as we predicted. Prayers of the Country, “Deliver us from evil,” are now answered there: Grävenitz quite over with it! Alas, yes; lately fallen from her high estate in Würtemberg, and become the topic of dinner-tables; seized by soldiers in the night-time; vain her high refusals, assurances of being too unwell to dress, “Shall go in your shift, then,” — is in prison, totally eclipsed.* Calming her fury, she will get out; and wearisomely wander about in fashionable capitals, toujours un lavement à ses trousses! —

“There were other subjects touched upon; and I always endeavoured to deduce something of moral instruction from them,” being a military gentleman of the old school.

“Among other things, he said, He liked the great world, and was charmed to observe the ridiculous weak side of some people. ‘That is excellent,’ said I, ‘if one profit by it oneself: but if it is only for amusement, such a motive is worth little; we should rather look out for our own ridiculous weak side.’ On rising, Hofmarschall Wolden said to me,” without much sincerity, “‘You have done well to preach a little morality to him.’ The Prince went to a window, and beckoned me thither.

“‘You have learned nothing of what is to become of me?’ said he. I answered: ‘It is supposed your Royal Highness will return to Berlin, when the Marriage’ (Wilhelmina’s) ‘takes place: but as to what will come next, I have heard nothing. But as your Highness has friends, they will not fail to do their endeavour: and M. de Grumkow has told me he would try to persuade the King to give you a regiment, in order that your Highness might have something to do.’ It seemed as if that would give him pleasure. I then took the liberty of saying: ‘Monsieur, the most, at present, depends on yourself.’ — ‘How so?’ asked he. I answered, ‘It is only by showing good conduct, and proofs of real wisdom and worth, that the King’s entire favour can be gained. First of all, to fear God’ — — And in fact I launched now into a moral preachment, or discursive Dis-ogue, of great length; much needing to have the skirts of it tucked up, in a way of faithful abridgment, for behoof of poor English readers. As follows:

“Schulenburg: If your Highness behave well, the King will accord what you want; but it is absolutely necessary to begin by that. — Prince: I do nothing that can displease the King. — Schulenburg: It would be a little soon yet! But I speak of the future. Your Highness, the grand thing I recommend is to fear God! Everybody says, you have the sentiments of an honest man: excellent, that, for a beginning; but without the fear of God, your Highness, the passions stifle the finest sentiments. Must lead a life clear of reproach; and more particularly on the chapter of women! Need not imagine you can do the least thing without the King’s knowing it: if your Highness take the bad road, he will wish to correct it; the end will be, he will bring you back to live beside him; which will not be very agreeable. — Prince: Hmph, No! — Schulenburg: Of the ruin to health I do not speak; I — Prince: Pooh, one is young, one is not master of that;” — and, in fact, on this delicate chapter, which runs to some length, Prince answers as wildish young fellows will; quizzing my grave self, with glances even at his Majesty, on alleged old peccadilloes of ours. Which allegations or inferences I rebutted with emphasis. “But, I confess, though I employed all my rhetoric, his mind did not seem to alter; and it will be a miracle if he change on this head.” Alas, General! Can’t be helped, I fear!

“He said he was not afraid of anything so much as of living constantly beside the King. — Schulenburg: Arm yourself with patience, Monseigneur, if that happen. God has given you sense enough; persevere to use it faithfully on all occasions, you will gain the good graces of the King. — Prince: “Impossible; beyond my power, indeed, said he; and made "a thousand objections. — Schulenburg: Your Highness is "like one that will not learn a trade because you do not al"ready know it. Begin; you will certainly never know it "otherwise! Before rising in the morning, form a plan for "your day," — in fact, be moral, O be moral!

His Highness now got upon the marriages talked of for him; an important point for the young man. He spoke, hopefully rather, of the marriage with the Princess of Mecklenburg, — Niece of the late Czar Peter the Great; Daughter of that unhappy Duke who is in quarrel with his Ritters, and a trouble to all his neighbours, and to us among the number. Readers recollect that young Lady's Serene Mother, and a meeting she once had with her Uncle Peter, — at Magdeburg, a dozen years ago, in a public drawing-room with alcove near; — anecdote, not lightly to be printed in human types, nor repeated where not necessary. The Mother is now dead; Father still up to the eyes in puddle and trouble: but as for the young Lady herself, she is Niece to the now Czarina Anne; by law of primogeniture, Heiress of all the Russias: something of a match truly!

"But there will be difficulties; your Highness to change
"your religion, for one thing? — Prince: Won't by any "means. — Schulenburg: And give up the succession to Prus"sia? — Prince: A right fool if I did! — Schulenburg: Then
"this marriage comes to nothing. — Thereupon next he said,
"If the Kaiser is so strong for us, let him give me his second
"Daughter;" lucky Franz of Lorraine is to get the first. —
"Schulenburg: Are you serious? — Prince: Why not; with “a Duchy or two it would do very well. — Schulenburg: No “Duchies possible under the Pragmatic Sanction, your High“ness: besides your change of religion? — Prince: Oh, as to “that, never! — Then this marriage also comes to nothing.

“Of the English, and their Double-Marriage, and their “Hotham brabble, he spoke lightly, as of an extinct matter, “— in terms your Excellency will like.

“But, said I, since you speak so much of marriages, I sup“pose you wish to be married? — Prince: No; but if the King “absolutely will have it, I will marry to obey him. After “that, I will shove my wife into the corner (planterai là ma “femme), and live after my own fancy. — Schulenburg: Hor“rible to think of! For, in the first place, your Highness, is “it not written in the Law of God, Adulterers shall not in“herit the Kingdom of Heaven?” And in the second place; and in the third and the fourth place! — To all which he answered as wild young fellows do, — especially if you force marriage on them. “I can perceive, if he marries, it will “only be to have more liberty than now. It is certain, if he “had his elbows free, he would strike out (s’en donnerait à “gauche). He said to me several times: ‘I am young; I want “‘to profit by my youth.’” A questionable young fellow,
Herr General; especially if you force marriage on him.

“This conversation done,” continues the General, “he set “to talking with the Madam Wreech,” and her complexion of lily and rose; “but he did not stay long; drove off about “five” (dinner at the stroke of twelve in those countries), “in“viting me to see him again at Cüstrin, which I promised.”

And so the Prince is off in the Autumn sunset, driving down the peaty hollow of the Warta, through unpicturesque country, which produces Wreechs and incomparable flowers nevertheless. Yes; and if he look a six miles to the right, there is the smoke of the evening kettles from Zorndorf, rising into the sky; and across the River, a twenty miles to the left, is Kunersdorf: poor sleepy sandy hamlets; where nettles of the Devil are to be plucked one day! —

“The beautiful Wreech drove off to Tamsel,” her fine house: I to this wretched tavern; where, a couple of hours after that conversation, I began writing it all down, and have nothing else to do for the night. Your Excellency’s most moral, stiffnecked, pipeclayed, and extremely obedient,

“VON SCHULENBURG.”*

This young man may be orthodox on Predestination, and outwardly growing all that a Papa could wish; but here are strange heterodoxies, here is plenty of mutinous capricious fire in the interior of him, Herr General! In fact, a young man unfortunately situated; already become solitary in Creation; has not, except himself, a friend in the world available just now. Tempestuous Papa storms one way, tempestuous Mamma Nature another; and between the outside and the inside there are inconsistencies enough.

Concerning the fair Wreech of Tamsel, with her complexion of lily and rose, there ensued by and by much whispering, and rumouring underbreath; which has survived in the apocryphal Anecdote-Books, not in too distinct a form. Here, from first hand, are three words, which we may take to be the essence of the whole. Grumkow reporting, in a sordid, occasionally

* Förster, iii. 65-71.

smutty spy-manner, to his Seckendorf, from Berlin, eight or ten months hence, has this casual expression: 'He' (King Friedrich Wilhelm) "told me in confidence 'that Wreech, the Colonel's Wife, is — to P. R. (Prince-Royal); and that Wreech vowed he would 'not own it for his. And his Majesty in secret is 'rather pleased," adds the smutty spy.* Elsewhere I have read that the poor object, which actually came as anticipated (male or female, I forget), did not live long; — nor had Friedrich, by any opportunity, another child in this world. Domestic Tamsel had to slay itself as it best could; and the fair Wreech became much a stranger to Friedrich, — surprisingly so of Friedrich the King, as perhaps we may see. —

Predestination, Gnadenwahl, Herr General: what is orthodoxy on Predestination, with these accompaniments! We go now to the Second Letter and the Third, — from Landsberg about a fortnight later:

No. 2. To his Excellency (shovelful of titles) von Grumkow in Berlin.

"Landsberg, 19th October 1731.

"The day before yesterday" (that is, Wednesday 17th October) "I received an Order, To have only fifty Horse at that post, and" — Order which shows us that there has fallen out some recruiting squabble on the Polish Frontier whereabouts; that the Polack gentlemen have seized certain corporals of ours, but are about restoring them; Order and

* Grumkow to Seckendorf, Berlin, 20th August 1732 (Förster. iii. 112).

 For Wreech, see Benckendorf, v. 94.; for Schulenburg, ib. 26; — and Militair Lexikon, iii. 432, 433, and iv. 268, 269. Vacant on the gossiping points; cautiously official, both these.

affair which we shall omit. "Corporals will be got back: "but as these Polack gentlemen will see, by the course taken, "that we have no great stomach for biting, I fancy they will "grow more insolent; then, 'ware who tries to recruit there "for the future!

"On the same day I was apprised, from Cüstrin, That the "Prince-Royal had resolved on an excursion to Carzig, and "thence to the Bailliage of Himmelstädt" (digging and stubbing now on foot at Himmelstädt too), "which is but a couple "of miles* from this; that there would be a little hunt be"tween the two Bailliages; and that if I chose to come,
"I might, and the Prince would dine with me." — Which I did; and so, here again, Thursday 18th October 1731, in those remote Warta-Oder Countries, is a glimpse of his Royal Highness at first hand. Schulenburg continues; not even taking a new paragraph, which indeed he never does:

"They had shut up a couple of Spiesser (young roes), and "some stags, in the old wreck of a Saugarten" (Boar-park, between Carzig and Himmelstädt; fast ruinirten Saugarten, he calls it, daintily throwing-in a touch of German here): "the "Prince shot one or two of them, and his companions the "like; but it does not seem as if this amusement were much "to his taste. He went on to Himmelstädt; and at noon he "arrived here." in my poor Domicile at Landsberg.

"At one o'clock we went to table, and sat till four. He "spoke only of very indifferent things; except saying to me:
"'Do you know, the King has promised 400,000 crowns
"“(20,000)” towards disengaging these Bailliages of the Mar-
"graf of Raireuth's." — old Margraf. Bailliages pawned to raise ready cash; readers remember what interminable Law-pleading there was, till Friedrich Wilhelm put it into a liquid state. 'Pay me back the money, then!' — "400,000 tha-

* "Doms-masse" German.

 Supra, vol. III. pp 226-228.

“lers to the old Margraf, in case his Prince (Wilhelmina’s “now Bridegroom) have a son by my Sister.’ I answered, I “had heard nothing of it. — ‘But,’ said he, ‘that is a great “deal of money! And some hundred-thousands more have “gone the like road, to Anspach, who never will be able to “repay. For all is much in disorder at Anspach. Give the “Margraf his Heron-hunt (chasse au héron), he cares for no“thing; and his people pluck him at no allowance.’ I said:
“That if these Princes would regulate their expenditure, they “might, little by little, pay off their debts; that I had been “told at Vienna the Baireuth Bailliages were mortgaged on “very low terms, those who now held them making eight or “ten per-cent of their money;” — that the Margraf ought to make an effort; and so on. “I saw very well that these Loans
“the King makes are not to his mind.

“Directly on rising from table, he went away; excusing “himself to me, That he could not pass the night here; that “the King would not like his sleeping in the Town; besides “that he had still several things to complete in a Report he “was sending off to his Majesty. He went to Massin, and “slept there. For my own share, I did not press him to re“main; what I did was rather in the way of form. There “were with him President Münchow,” civil gentleman whom we know, “an Engineer Captain Reger, and the three Gen“tlemen of his Court,” Wolden, Rohwedel, Natzmer who once twirled his finger in a certain mouth, the insipid fellow.

“He is no great eater; but I observed he likes the small “dishes (petits plats) and the high tastes: he does not care for “fish; though I had very fine trouts, he never touched them.
“He does not take brown soup (soupe au bouillon). It did not “seem to me he cared for wine: he tastes at all the wines;
“but commonly stands by burgundy with water.

•

"I introduced to him all the Officers of my Regiment who are here; he received them in the style of a king" (en roi plenty of quiet pride in him, Herr General). "It is certain he feels what he is born to; and if ever he get to it, will stand on the top of it. As to me, I mean to keep myself retired and shall see of him as little as I can. I perceive well he does not like advice," especially when administered in the way of preachment, by stiff old military gentlemen of the all-wise stamp;—"and does not take pleasure except with people inferior to him in mind. His first aim is to find out the ridiculous side of every one, and he loves to banter and quiz. I think it is a fault in a Prince: he ought to know people's faults, and not to make them known to anybody whatever,"—which we perceive, is not quite the method with private gentlemen of the all-wise type!—

"I speak to your Excellency as a friend; and assure you he is a Prince who has talent, but who will be the slave of his passions (se fera dominer par ses passions,"—not a felicitous prophecy, Herr General); "and will like nobody but such as encourage him therein. For me, I think all Princes are cast in the same mould; there is only a more and a less.

"At parting, he embraced me twice; and said: 'I am sorry I cannot stay longer; but another time I will profit better.' Wolden" (one of the Three) "told me he could not describe how well-intentioned for your Excellency the Prince-Royal is" (cunning dog!), "who says often to Wolden" (doubtless guessing it will be re-said), "'If I cannot show him my gratitude, I will his posterity:'"—profoundly obliged to the Grumkow kindred first and last!—"I remain your Excellency's" most pipeclayed

"VON SCHULENBURG."*

* Förster, III. 71-73.

And so, after survey of the spademen at Carzig and Himmelstädt (where Colonel Wreech, by the way, is Amts-Hauptmann, official Head Man), after shooting a Spiesser or two, and dining and talking in this sort, his Royal-Highness goes to sleep at Massin; and ends one day of his then life. We proceed to Letter No. 3.

A day or two after No. 2, it would appear, his Majesty, who is commonly at Wusterhausen hunting in this season, has been rapidly out to Crossen, in these Landsberg regions (to south, within a day's drive of Landsberg), rapidly looking after something; Grumkow and another Official attending him: — other Official, "Truchsess," is Truchsess von Waldburg, a worthy soldier and gentleman of those parts, whom we shall again hear of. In No. 3 there is mention likewise of the "Kurfürst of Köln," — Elector of Cologne; languid lanky gentleman of Bavarian breed, whom we saw last year at Bonn, richest Pluralist of the Church; whom doubtless our poor readers have forgotten again. Mention of him; and also considerable sulky humour, of the Majesty's-Opposition kind, on Schulenburg's part; for which reason, and generally as a poor direct reflex of time and place, — reflex by ruffled bog-water, through sedges, and in twilight; dim but indubitable, — we give the Letter, though the Prince is little spoken of in it:

No. 3. To the Excellency Grumkow (as above) in Berlin.

“Landsberg, 22d October (Monday) 1731.

“Monsieur, — I trust your Excellency made your journey “to Crossen with all the satisfaction imaginable. Had I been “warned sooner, I would have come; not only to see the King, “but for your Excellency's sake and Truchsess's: but I received your Excellency's Letter only yesterday morning; so “I could not have arrived before yesternight, and that late; “for it is fifty miles off, and one has to send relays beforehand; “there being no posthorses on that road.

“We are, — not to make comparisons, — like Harlequin! “No sooner out of one scrape, than we get into another; and 22d Oct. 1731.

“all for the sake of those Big Blockheads (l'amour de ces grands colosses). What the Kurfürst of Köln has done, in “his character of Bishop of Osnabrück,” — a deed not known to this Editor, but clearly in the way of snubbing our recruiting system, — “is too droll: but if we avenge ourselves, “there will be high play, and plenty of it, all round our “borders! If such things would make any impression on the “spirit of our Master: but they do not; they” — in short, this recruiting system is delirious, thinks the stiff Schulenburg; and scruples not to say so, though not in his place in Parliament, or even Tobacco-Parliament. For there is a Majesty's Opposition in all lands and times. “We ruin the Country,” says the Honourable Member, “sending annually millions of “money out of it, for a set of vagabond fellows (gens à sac et à corde), who will never do us the least service. One sees “clearly it is the hand of God,” darkening some people's understanding; “otherwise it might be possible their eyes “would open, one time or another!” — A stiff pipeclayed gentleman of great wisdom, with plenty of sulphur burning in the heart of him. The rest of his Letter is all in the Opposition strain (almost as if from his place in Parliament, only far briefer than is usual “within these walls”); and winds up with a glance at Victor Amadeus's strange feat, or rather at the Son's feat done upon Victor, over in Sardinia; preceded by this interjectionary sentence on a Prince nearer home:

“As to the Prince-Royal, depend on it he will do whatever “is required of him” (marry anybody you like &c.), “if you “give him more elbow-room, for that is whither he aims. — “Not a bad stroke that, of the King of Sardinia” — Grand news of the day, at that time; now somewhat forgotten, and requiring a word from us:

Old King Victor Amadeus of Sardinia had solemnly

abdicated in favour of his Son; went, for a twelvemonth or more, into private felicity with an elderly Lady-love whom he had long esteemed the first of women; — tired of such felicity, after a twelvemonth; demanded his crown back, and could not get it! Lady-love and he are taken prisoners; lodged in separate castles:* and the wrath of the proud old gentleman is Olympian in character, — split an oak table, smiting it while he spoke (say the cicerones); — and his silence, and the fiery daggers he looks, are still more emphatic. But the young fellow holds out; you cannot play handy-dandy with a king's crown, your Majesty! say his new Ministers. Is and will continue King. “Not a bad stroke of him,” thinks Schulenburg, —

— “especially if his Father meant to play him the same trick,” that is, clap him in prison. Not a bad stroke; — which perhaps there is another that could imitate, “if his Papa gave “him the opportunity! But this Papa will take good care; “and the Queen will not forget the Sardinian business, “when he talks again of abdicating,” as he does when in ill humour. —

“But now had not we better have been friends with England, should war rise upon that Sardinian business? General “Schulenburg,” — the famed Venetian Fieldmarshal, bruiser of the Turks in Candia, my honoured Uncle, who sometimes

* 2d September 1780, abdicated, went to Chambéry; reclaims, is locked in Rivoli, 8th October 1781 (news of it just come to Schulenburg); dies there, 31st October 1782, his 67th year.

 Same who was beaten by Charles XII. before; a worthy soldier nevertheless, say the Authorities: Life of him by Varnhagen von Ense (Biographische Denkmale, Berlin, 1845).

used to visit his Sister the Maypole, now Emerita, in London, and sip beer and take tobacco on an evening, with George I. of famous memory, — he also “writes me this Victor-“Amadeus news, from Paris;” so that it is certain; Ex-King locked in Rivoli near a fortnight ago: “he, General Schulenburg, says farther, To judge by the outside, all appears “very quiet; but many think, at the bottom of the bag it will “not be the same.” —

“I am, with respect,” your Excellency’s much in buckram, “LE COMTE DE SCHOULENBOURG.”*

So far Lieutenant-General Schulenburg; whom we thank for these contemporary glimpses of a young man that has become historical, and of the scene he lived in. And with these three accidental utterances, as if they (which are alone left) had been the sum of all he said in the world, let the Lieutenant-General withdraw now into silence: he will turn up twice again, after half-a-score of years, once in a nobler than talking attitude, the close-harnessed, stalwart, slightly atrabiliar military gentleman of the old Prussian school.

These glimpses of the Crown-Prince, reflected on us in this manner, are not very luculent to the reader, — light being indifferent, and mirror none of the best: — but some features do gleam forth, good and not so good; which, with others coming, may gradually coalesce into something conceivable. A Prince clearly of much spirit, and not without petulance; abundant fire, much of it shining and burning irregularly at present; being sore held down from without, and anomalously situated.

* Förster, iii. 73-75.

Pride enough, thinks Schulenburg, capricious petulance enough, — likely to go into “a reign of the passions,” if we live. As will be seen! —

Wilhelmina was betrothed in June last: Wilhelmina, a Bride these six months, continues to be much tormented by Mamma. But the Bridegroom, Prince of Baireuth, is gradually recommending himself to persons of judgment, to Wilhelmina among others. One day he narrowly missed an unheard-of accident: a foolish servant, at some boar-hunt, gave him a loaded piece on the half-cock; half-cock slipped in the handling; bullet grazed his Majesty's very temple, was felt twitching the hair there: — ye Heavens! Whereupon impertinent remarks from some of the Dessau people (allies of Schwedt and the Margravine in high colours); which were well answered by the Prince, and noiselessly but severely checked by a well-bred King.* King has given the Prince of Baireuth a regiment; and likes him tolerably, though the young man will not always drink as could be wished. Wedding, in spite of clouds from her Majesty, is coming steadily on.

His Majesty's Building Operations.

“This year,” says Fassmann, “the building operations both in Berlin and Stettin,” — in Stettin where new fortifications are completed, in Berlin where gradually whole new quarters are getting built, — “were

* Wilhelmina, i. 356.

“exceedingly pushed forward (äusserst poussirt).” Alas, yes; this too is a questionable memorable feature of his Majesty's reign. Late Majesty, old King Friedrich I., wishful, as others had been, for the growth of Berlin, laid out a new Quarter, and called it Friedrichs Stadt; — scraggy boggy ground, planned out into streets, Friedrichs Strasse the chief street, with here and there a house standing lonesomely prophetic on it. But it is this present Majesty, Friedrich Wilhelm, that gets the plan executed, and the Friedrichs Strasse actually built, not always in the soft or spontaneous manner. Friedrich Wilhelm was the Ædile of his Country, as well as the Drill-sergeant; Berlin City did not rise of its own accord, or on the principle of leave-alone, any more than the Prussian Army itself. Wreck and rubbish Friedrich Wilhelm will not leave alone, in any kind; but is intent by all chances to sweep them from the face of the Earth, that something useful, seemly to the Royal mind, may stand there instead. Hence these building-operations in the Friedrich Street and elsewhere, so “exceedingly pushed forward.”

The number of scraggy waste places he swept clear, first and last, and built tight human dwellings upon, is almost uncountable. A common gift from him (as from his Son after him) to a man in favour, was that of a new good House, — an excellent gift. Or if the man is himself able to build, Majesty will help him, incite him: “Timber enough is in the royal forests; stone, lime are in the royal quarries; scraggy waste is abundant: why should any man, of the least industry or private capital, live in a bad house?" By degrees, the pressure of his Majesty upon private men to build with encouragement became considerable, became excessive, irresistible; and was much complained of, in these years now come. Old Colonel Derschan is the King's Agent, at Berlin, in this matter; a hard stiff man; squeezes men, all manner of men with the least capital, till they build.

Nüssler, for example, whom we once saw at Hanover, managing a certain contested Heritage for Friedrich Wilhelm; adroit Nüssler, though he has yet got no fixed appointment, nor pay except by the job, is urged to build; — second year hence, 1733, occurs the case of Nüssler, and is copiously dwelt upon by Büsching his biographer: "Build yourself a house in the Friedrichs Strasse!" urges Derschan. "But I have no pay, no capital!" pleads Nüssler. — "Tush, your Father-in-law, abstruse Kanzler von Ludwig, in Halle University, monster of law-learning there, is not he a monster of hoarded moneys withal? He will lend you, for his own and his Daughter's sake.* Or shall his Majesty compel him?" urges Derschan. And slowly, continually turns the screw upon Nüssler, till he too raises for himself a firm good house in the Friedrichs Stadt, — Friedrichs Strasse, or Street, as they now call it, which the Tourist of these days knows. Substantial clear ashlar Street, miles or half-miles long; straight as a line: — Friedrich Wilhelm found it scrag and quagmire; and left it what the Tourist sees, by these hard methods. Thus Herr

* Büsching: Beiträge, i. 324.

Privy-Councillor Klinggräf too, Nüssler's next neighbour: he did not want to build; far from it; but was obliged, on worse terms than Nüssler. You have such work, founding your house; — for the Nüssler-Klinggräf spot was a fish-pool, and "carps were dug up" in founding; — such piles, bound platform of solid beams; "4,000 thalers gone before the first stone is laid:" and in fact, the house must be built honestly, or it will be worse for the house and you. "Cost me 12,000 thalers (1,800*l.*) in all, and is worth perhaps 2,000!" sorrowfully ejaculates Nüssler, when the job is over. Still worse with Privy-Councillor Klinggräf: his house, the next to Nüssler's, is worth mere nothing to him when built; a soap-boiler offers him 800 thalers (120*l.*) for it; and Nüssler, to avoid suffocation, purchases it himself of Klinggräf for that sum. Derschau, with his slow screw-machinery, is very formidable; — and Büsching knows it for a fact, "that respectable Berlin persons "used to run out of the way of Bürgermeister Koch "and him, when either of them turned up on the "streets!"

These things were heavy to bear. Truly, yes: where is the liberty of private capital, or liberty of almost any kind, on those terms? Liberty to annihilate rubbish and chaos, under known conditions, you may have; but not the least liberty to keep them about you, though never so fond of doing it! What shall we say? Nüssler and the Soapboiler do both live in houses more human than they once had. Berlin itself, and some other things, did not spring from Free-trade. Berlin

City would, to this day, have been a Place of Scrubs ("the Berlin," a mere appellative noun to that effect), had Free-trade always been the rule there. I am sorry his Majesty transgresses the limits; — and we, my friends, if we can make our Chaos into Cosmos by firing Parliamentary éloquence into it, and bombarding it with Blue-Books, we will much triumph over his Majesty, one day! —

Thus are the building operations exceedingly pushed forward, the Ear of Jenkins torn off, and Victor Amadeus locked in ward, while our Crown-Prince, in the eclipsed state, is inspected by a Sage in pipeclay, and Wilhelmina's wedding is coming on.

CHAPTER VI.

WILHELMINA'S WEDDING.

TUESDAY, 20th November 1731, Wilhelmina's wedding-day arrived, after a brideship of eight months; and that young Lady's troublesome romance, more happily than might have been expected, did at last wind itself up. Mamma's unreasonable humours continued, more or less; but these also must now end. Old wooers and outlooks, "the four or three crowned heads," — they lie far over the horizon; faded out of one's very thoughts, all these. Charles XII., Peter II. are dead, Weissenfels is not, but might as well be. Prince Fred, not yet wedded elsewhere, is doing French madrigals in Leicester House; tending towards the "West Wickham" set of Politicians, the Pitt-Lyttleton set; stands ill with Father and Mother, and will not come to much. August the Dilapidated-Strong is deep in Polish troubles, in Anti-Kaiser politics, in drinking-bouts; — his great toe never mended, never will mend. Gone to the spectral state all these: here, blooming with life in its cheeks, is the one practical Fact, our good Hereditary Prince of Baireuth, — privately our fate all along; — which we will welcome cheerfully; and be thankful to Heaven that we have not died in getting it decided for us! —

Wedding was of great magnificence; Berlin Palace and all things and creatures at their brightest; the Brunswick-Beverns here, and other high Guests; no end of pompous ceremonials, solemnities and splendours, — the very train of one's gown was "twelve yards long." Eschewing all which, the reader shall commodiously conceive it all, by two samples we have picked out for him: one sample of a Person, high Guest present; one of an Apartment where the sublimities went on.

The Duchess Dowager of Sachsen-Meiningen, who has come to honour us on this occasion, a very large Lady, verging towards sixty; she is the person. A living elderly Daughter of the Great Elector himself; half-sister to the late King, half-aunt to Friedrich Wilhelm; widow now of her third husband: a singular phenomenon to look upon, for a moment, through Wilhelmina's satirical spectacles. One of her three husbands, "Christian Ernst of Baireuth" (Margraf there, while the present Line was but expectant), had been a kind of Welsh-Uncle to the Prince now Bridegroom; so that she has a double right to be here. "She had found the secret of totally ruining Baireuth," says Wilhelmina; "Baireuth, and Courland, as well, where her "first wedlock was;" — perhaps Meiningen was done to her hand? Here is the Portrait of "my Grand-Aunt;" dashed off in very high colours, not by a flattering pencil:

"It is said she was very fond of pleasing, in her youth; "one saw as much still by her affected manners. She would "have made an excellent actress, to play fantastic parts of “that kind. Her flaming red countenance, her shape, of such “monstrous extent that she could hardly walk, gave her the “air of a Female Bacchus. She took care to expose to view “her,” — a part of her person, large but no longer beautiful, — “and continually kept patting it with her hands, to attract “attention thither. Though sixty gone,” — fifty-seven in point of fact, — “she was tricked out like a girl; hair done “in ribbon-locks (marronnés), all filled with gewgaws of rose-“pink colour, which was the prevailing tint in her complexion,

“and so loaded with coloured jewels, you would have taken
“her for the rainbow.”*

This charming old Lady, daughter of the Grosse Kurfürst, and so very fat and rubicund, had a Son once: he too is mentionable in his way, — as a milestone (parish milestone) in the obscure Chronology of those parts. Her first Husband was the Duke of Courland; to him she brought an heir, who became Duke in his turn, — and was the final Duke, last of the “Kettler” or native Line of Dukes there. The Kettlers had been Teutsch Ritters, Commandants in Courland; they picked up that Country, for their own behoof, when the Ritterdom went down; and this was the last of them. He married Anne of Russia with the big cheek (Czar Peter’s Niece, who is since become Czarina); and died shortly after, twenty years ago; with tears doubtless from the poor rosepink Mother, far away in Bai-reuth and childless otherwise; and also in a sense to the sorrow of Courland, which was hereby left vacant, a prey to enterprising neighbours. And on those terms

* Wilhelmina, i. 375.

it was that Saxon Moritz (our dissolute friend, who will be Maréchal de Saxe one day) made his clutch at Courland, backed by moneys of the French Actress; rumour of which still floats vaguely about. Moritz might have succeeded, could he have done the first part of the feat, fallen in love with swoln-cheeked Anne, Dowager there; but he could not; could only pretend it: Courland therefore (now that the Swoln-cheek is become Czarina) falls to one Bieren, a born Courlander, who could.* — We hurry to the “Grand Apartment” in Berlin Schloss, and glance rapidly, with Wilhelmina (in an abridged form), how magnificent it is:

Royal Apartment, third floor of the Palace at Berlin, one must say, few things equal it in the world. “From the Outer “Saloon or Antechamber, called Salle des Suisses” (where the halberdier and valet people wait) “you pass through six “grand rooms, into a saloon magnificently decorated; thence “through two rooms more, and so into what they call the “Picture-Gallery, a room ninety feet long. All this is in a “line.” Grand all this; but still only common in comparison. From the Picture-Gallery you turn (to right or left, is not said, nor does it matter) into a suite of Fourteen great rooms, each more splendid than the other: lustre from the ceiling of the first room, for example, is of solid silver; weighs, in pounds avoirdupois I know not what, but in silver coin "10,000 crowns:" ceilings painted as by Correggio; "wall-mirrors between each pair of windows are twelve feet high, "and their piers (trumeaux) are of massive silver; in front of "each mirror, table can be laid for twelve;" twelve Serenities may dine there, flanked by their mirror, enjoying the Correggiosities above, and the practical sublimities all round. "And this is but the first of the Fourteen;" and you go on increasing in superbness, till, for example, in the last, or superlative Saloon, you find "a lustre weighing 50,000 "crowns; the globe of it big enough to hold a child of eight "years; and the branches (guéridons) of it," I forget how many feet or fathoms in extent: silver to the heart. Nay the music-balcony is of silver; wearied fiddler lays his elbow on balustrades of that precious metal. Seldom if ever was seen the like. In this superlative Saloon, the Nuptial Benediction was given.*

* Last Kettler, Anne's Husband, died (leaving only an old Uncle, fallen into Papistry and other futility, who, till his death some twenty years after, had to reside abroad and be nominal merely), 1711; Moritz's attempt with Adrienne Lecouvreur's cash was, 1726; Anne became Sovereign of all the Russias (on her poor Cousin Peter II.'s death), 1730; Bieren (Biren as he tried to write himself, being of poor birth) did not get installed till 1737; and had, he and Courland both, several tumbles after that before getting to stable equilibrium.

Old King Friedrich, the expensive Herr, it was he that did the furnishing and Correggio-painting of these sublime rooms: but this of the masses of wrought silver, this was done by Friedrich Wilhelm, — incited thereto by what he saw at Dresden in August the Strong's Establishment; and reflecting, too, that silver is silver, whether you keep it in barrels in a coined form, or work it into chandeliers, mirror-frames and music-balconies. — These things we should not have mentioned, except to say that the massive silver did prove a hoard available, in after times, against a rainy day. Massive silver (well mixed with copper first) was all melted down, stamped into current coins, native and foreign, and sent wandering over the world, before a certain Prince got through his Seven-Years Wars and other pinches that are ahead! —

In fine, Wilhelmina's Wedding was magnificent; though one had rubs too; and Mamma was rather severe. "Hair went all wrong, by dint of over-dressing; and hung on one's face like a boy's. Crown-royal they had put (as indeed was proper) on one's head: "hair was in twenty-four locks the size of your arm: "such was the Queen's order. Gown was of cloth-of-silver, trimmed with Spanish gold-lace (avec un point d'Espagne d'or); train twelve yards long; — one was "like to sink to the earth in such equipment." Courage, my Princess! — In fact, the Wedding went beautifully off; with dances and sublimities, slow solemn Torch-dance to conclude with, in those unparalleled upper rooms; Grand-Aunt Meiningen and many other stars and rainbows witnessing; even the Margravine of Schwedt, in her high colours, was compelled to be there. Such variegated splendour, such a dancing of the Constellations; sublunary Berlin, and all the world, on tiptoe round it! Slow Torch-dance, winding it up, melted into the shades of midnight, for this time; and there was silence in Berlin.

But, on the following nights, there were Balls of a less solemn character; far pleasanter for dancing purposes. It is to these, to one of these, that we direct the attention of all readers. Friday 23d, there was again Ball and Royal Evening Party — “Grand Apartment” so-called. Immense Ball, “seven hundred couples, all people of condition;” there were “Four Quadrilles,” or dancing places in the big sea of quality-figures; each at its due distance in the grand suite of rooms: Wilhelmina presides in Quadrille Number One: place assigned her was in the room called Picture-Gallery; Queen and all the Principalities were with Wilhelmina, she is to lead-off their quadrille, and take charge of it. Which she did, with her accustomed fire and elasticity; — and was circling there, on the light fantastic toe, time six in the evening, when Grumkow, whom she had been dunning for his bargain about Friedrich the day before, came up:

“I liked dancing,” says she, “and was taking advantage “of my chances. Grumkow came up, and interrupted me in “the middle of a minuet: ‘Eh, mon Dieu, Madame!’ said “Grumkow, ‘you seem to have got bit by the tarantula! ““Don’t you see those strangers who have just come in?’ I stopt “short; and looking all round, I noticed at last a young man “dressed in gray, whom I did not know. ‘Go, then, embrace “‘the Prince-Royal; there he is before you!’ said Grumkow. “All the blood in my body went topsy-turvy for joy. ‘O ““Heaven, my Brother?’ cried I: ‘But I don’t see him; where, ““is he? In God’s name, let me see him!’ Grumkow led “me to the young man in gray. Coming near, I recognised “him, though with difficulty: he had grown amazingly stouter “(prodigieusement engraisé), shortened about the neck; his “face too had much changed, and was no longer so beautiful “as it had been. I sprang upon him with open arms (sautai

“au cou”; I was in such a state, I could speak nothing but broken exclamations: I wept, I laughed, like one gone delirious. In my life I have never felt so lively a joy.

“The first sane step was to throw myself at the feet of the King: King said, ‘Are you content with me? You see I have kept my word!’ I took my Brother by the hand; and entreated the King to restore him his friendship. This scene was so touching, it drew tears from the eyes of everybody. I then approached the Queen. She was obliged to embrace me, the King being close opposite; but I remarked that her joy was only affected.” — Why then, O Princess? Guess, if you can, the female humours of her Majesty! —

“I turned to my Brother again; I gave him a thousand caresses, and said the tenderest things to him: to all which he remained cold as ice, and answered only in monosyllables. I presented the Prince (my Husband); to whom he did not say one word. I was astonished at this fashion of procedure! But I laid the blame of it on the King, who was observing us, and who I judged might be intimidating my Brother. But even his countenance surprised me: he wore a proud air, and seemed to look down on everybody.”

A much-changed Crown-Prince. What can be the meaning of it? Neither King nor he appeared at supper: they were supping elsewhere, with a select circle; and the whisper ran among us, His Majesty was treating him with great friendliness. At which the Queen, contrary to hope, could not conceal her secret pique. “In fact,” says Wilhelmina, again too hard on Mamma, “she did not love her children except as they served her ambitious views.” The fact that it was I, and not she, who had achieved the Prince’s deliverance, was painful to her Majesty: alas, yes, in some degree!

“Ball having recommenced, Grumkow whispered to me, “That the King was pleased with my frank kind ways to my “‘Brother; and not pleased with my Brother’s cold way of “‘returning it: Does he simulate, and mean still to deceive “‘me? Or is that all the thanks he has for Wilhelmina?

“‘thinks his Majesty. Go on with your sincerity, Madam;
“‘and for God’s sake admonish the Crown-Prince to avoid “‘finessing!’ Crown-Prince, when I did, in some interval of “the dance, report this of Grumkow, and say, Why so changed
“and cold, then, Brother of my heart? answered, That he “was still the same; and that he had his reasons for what he “did.” Wilhelmina continues; and cannot understand her Crown-Prince at all:

“Next morning, by the King’s order, he paid me a visit.
“The Prince,” my Husband, “was polite enough to with“draw, and left me and Sonsfeld alone with him. He gave “me a recital of his misfortunes; I communicated mine to “him,”—and how I had at last bargained to get him free again by my compliance. “He appeared much discountenanced at “this last part of my narrative. He returned thanks for the “obligations I had laid on him, — with some caressings, “which evidently did not proceed from the heart. To break
“this conversation, he started some indifferent topic; and,
“under pretence of seeing my Apartment, moved into the “next room, where the Prince my Husband was. Him he ran “over with his eyes from head to foot, for some time; then,
“after some constrained civilities to him, went his way.”
What to make of all this? “Madam Sonsfeld shrugged her “shoulders;” no end of Madam Sonsfeld’s astonishment at such a Crown-Prince.

Alas, yes, poor Wilhelmina; a Crown-Prince got into terrible cognisance of facts since we last met him!
Perhaps already sees, not only what a Height of place is cut out for him in this world, but also in a dim way

what a solitude of soul, if he will maintain his height? Top of the frozen Schreckhorn; — have you well considered such a position! And even the way thither is dangerous, is terrible in this case. Be not too hard upon your Crown-Prince. For it is certain he loves you to the last!

Captain Dickens, who alone of all the Excellencies was not at the Wedding, — and never had believed it would be a wedding, but only a rumour to bring England round, — duly chronicles this happy reappearance of the Prince-Royal: “about six, yesterday evening, as the company was dancing, — to the great joy and surprise of the whole Court;” — and adds: “This morning the Prince came to the public Parade; where crowds of people of all ranks flocked to see his Royal Highness, and gave the most open demonstrations of pleasure.” *

Wilhelmina, these noisy tumults, not all of them delightful, once done, gets out of the perplexed hurly-burly, home towards still Baireuth, shortly after New-year. “Berlin was become as odious to me as it had once been dear. I flattered myself that, renouncing grandeurs, I might lead a soft and tranquil life in my new Home, and begin a happier year than the one that had just ended.” Mamma was still perverse; but on the edge of departure Wilhelmina contrived to get a word of her Father, and privately open her heart to him. Poor Father, after all that has come and gone:

* Despatch, 24th Nov. 1731.

 11th Jan. 1732 (Wilhelmina, II. 2).

“My discourse produced its effect; he melted into tears, “could not answer me for sobs; he explained his thoughts by “his embracings of me. Making an effort, at length, he “said: ‘I am in despair that I did not know thee. They had “told me such horrible tales, I hated thee as much as I now “love thee. If I had addressed myself direct to thee, I “should have escaped much trouble, and thou too. But they “hindered me from speaking; said thou wert ill-natured as “the Devil, and wouldst drive to extremities I wanted to “avoid. Thy Mother, by her intrigings, is in part the “cause of the misfortunes of the family; I have been deceived “and duped on every side. But my hands are tied; and “though my heart is torn in pieces, I must leave these ini- “quities unpunished!’” — The Queen’s intentions were al- ways good, urged Wilhelmina. “Let us not enter into that “detail,” answered he: “what is past is past; I will try to “forget it;” and assured Wilhelmina that she was the dearest to him of the family, and that he would do great things for her still, — only part of which came to effect in the sequel. “I am too sad of heart to take leave of you,” con- cluded he: “embrace your Husband on my part; I am so “overcome that I must not see him.”* And so they rolled away.

Crown-Prince was back to Cüstrin again many weeks before. Back to Cüstrin; but under totally changed omens: his history, after that first emergence in Wilhelmina’s dance, “23d November about six P.M.,” and appearance at Parade on the morrow (Saturday morning), had been as follows. Monday November 26th, there was again grand Ball, and the Prince there, not in gray this time. Next day, the Old Dessauer and all the higher Officers in Berlin petitioned, "Let us have him in the Army again, your Majesty!" Majesty consented: and so, Friday 30th, there was grand dinner at Seckendorf's, Crown-Prince there, in soldier's uniform again; a completely pardoned youth. His uniform is of the Goltz Regiment, Infantry: Goltz Regiment, which lies at Ruppín, — at and about, in that moory Country to the Northeast, some thirty or forty miles from Berlin; — whither his destination now is.

* Wilhelmina, ii. 4; who dates, 11th January 1732.

Crown-Prince had to resume his Kammer work at Cüstrin, and see the Buildings at Carzig, for a three months longer, till some arrangements in the Regiment Goltz were perfected, and finishing improvements given to it. But "on the last day of February" (29th, 1732 being leap-year), his Royal Highness's Commission to be Colonel Commandant of said Regiment is made out; and he proceeds, in discharge of the same, to Ruppín, where his men lie. And so puts off the pike-gray coat, and puts on the military blue one,* — never to quit it again, as turned out.

Ruppín is a little Town, in that northwest Fehrbellin region: Regiment Goltz had lain in detached quarters hitherto; but is now to lie at Ruppín, the first Battalion of it there, and the rest within reach. Here, in Ruppín itself, or ultimately at Reinsberg in the neighbourhood, was Friedrich's abode, for the next eight years. Habitual residence; with transient excursions, chiefly to Berlin in Carnival time, or on other great occasions, and always strictly on leave; his employment being that of Colonel of Foot, a thing requiring continual vigilance and industry in that Country. Least of all to be neglected, in any point, by one in his circumstances. He did his military duties to a perfection satisfactory even to Papa; and achieved on his own score many other duties and improvements, for which Papa had less value. These eight years, it is always understood, were among the most important of his life to him.

* Preuss, i. 69.

BOOK IX.

THE STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP:
LIFE IN RUPPIN.

1732-1736.

Feb. 1732.

CHAPTER I.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH CHRISTINA OF BRUNSWICK-BEVERN.

WE described the Crown-Prince as intent to comply, especially in all visible external particulars, with Papa's will and pleasure; — to distinguish himself by real excellence in Commandantship of the Regiment Goltz, first of all. But before ever getting into that, there has another point risen, on which obedience, equally essential, may be still more difficult.

Ever since the grand Catastrophe went off without taking Friedrich's head along with it, and there began to be hopes of a pacific settlement, question has been, Whom shall the Crown-Prince marry? And the debates about it in the royal breast and in Tobacco-Parliament, and rumours about it in the world at large, have been manifold and continual. In the Schulenburg Letters we saw the Crown-Prince himself, much interested, and eagerly inquisitive on that head. As was natural: but it is not in the Crown-Prince's mind, it is in the Tobacco-Parliament, and the royal breast as influenced there, that the thing must be decided. Who in the world will it be, then?

Crown-Prince himself hears now of this party, now of that. England is quite over, and the Princess Amelia sunk below the horizon. Friedrich himself appears a little piqued that Hotham carried his nose high; that the English would not, in those life-and-death circumstances, abate the least from their "Both marriages or none," — thinks they should have saved Wilhelmina, and taken his word of honor for the rest. England is now out of his head; — all romance is too sorrowfully swept out: and instead of the "sacred air cities of hope" in this high section of his history, the young man is looking into the "mean clay hamlets of reality," with an eye well recognising them for real. With an eye and heart already tempered to the due hardness for them. Not a fortunate result, though it was an inevitable one. We saw him flirting with the beautiful wedded Wreech; talking to Lieutenant-General Schulenburg about marriage, in a way which shook the pipeclay of that virtuous man. He knows he would not get his choice, if he had one; strives not to care. Nor does he, in fact, much care; the romance being all out of it. He looks mainly to outward advantages: to personal appearance, temper, good manners; to "religious principle," sometimes rather in the reverse way (fearing an overplus rather); — but always to likelihood of moneys by the match, as a very direct item. Ready command of money, he feels, will be extremely desirable in a Wife; desirable and almost indispensable, in present straitened circumstances. These are the notions of this ill-situated Coelebs.

The parties proposed first and last, and rumoured of in Newspapers and the idle brains of men, have been very many, — no limit to their numbers; it may be anybody: an intending purchaser, though but possessed of sixpence, is in a sense proprietor of the whole Fair! Through Schulenburg we heard his own account of them, last Autumn; — but the far noblest of the lot was hardly glanced at, or not at all, on that occasion. The Kaiser's eldest Daughter, sole heiress of Austria and these vast Pragmatic-Sanction operations; Archduchess Maria Theresa herself, — it is affirmed to have been Prince Eugene's often-expressed wish, That the Crown-Prince of Prussia should wed the future Empress.* Which would indeed have saved immense confusions to mankind! Nay she alone of Princesses, beautiful, magnanimous, brave, was the mate for such a Prince, — had the Good Fairies been consulted, which seldom happens: — and Romance itself might have become Reality in that case; with high results to the very soul of this young Prince! Wishes are free: and wise Eugene will have been heard, perhaps often, to express this wish; but that must have been all. Alas, the preliminaries, political, especially religious, are at once indispensable and impossible: we have to dismiss that day-dream. A Papal-Protestant controversy still exists among mankind; and this is one penalty they pay for not having settled it sooner. The Imperial Court cannot afford its Archduchess on the terms possible in that quarter.

What the Imperial Court can do is, to recommend a Niece of theirs, insignificant young Princess, Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern, who is Niece to the

* Hormayr: Allgemeine Geschichte der neuesten Zeit (Wien, 1817), I. 18; cited in Preuss, I. 71.

Empress; and may be made useful, in this way, to herself and us, think the Imperial Majesties; — will be a new tie upon the Prussians and the Pragmatic Sanction, and keep the Alliance still surer for our Archduchess in times coming, think their Majesties. She, it is insinuated by Seckendorf in Tobacco-Parliament; ought not she, Daughter of your Majesty's esteemed friend, — modest-minded, innocent young Princess, with a Brother already betrothed in your Majesty's House, — to be the Lady? It is probable she will.

Did we inform the reader once about Kaiser Karl's young marriage adventures; and may we, to remind him, mention them a second time? How Imperial Majesty, some five-and-twenty years ago, then only King of Spain, asked Princess Caroline of Anspach, who was very poor, and an orphan in the world. Who at once refused, declining to think of changing her religion on such a score; — and now governs England, telegraphing with Walpole, as Queen there instead. How Karl, now Imperial Majesty, then King of Spain, next applied to Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel; and met with a much better reception there. Applied to old Anton Ulrich, reigning Duke, who writes big Novels, and does other foolish goodnatured things; — who persuaded his Granddaughter that a change to Catholicism was nothing in such a case, that he himself should not care in the least to change. How the Granddaughter changed accordingly, went to Barcelona, and was wedded; — and had to dun old Grand-Papa, “Why don’t you change, then!” Who did change thereupon; thinking to himself, “Plague on it, I must then!” the foolish old Herr. He is dead; and his Novels, in six volumes quarto, are all dead: and the Granddaughter is Kaiserinn, on those terms, a serene monotonous well-favoured Lady, diligent in her Catholic exercises; of whom I never heard any evil, good rather, in her eminent serene position. Pity perhaps that she had recommended her Niece for this young Prussian gentleman; whom it by no means did “attach to the Family” so very careful about him at Vienna! But if there lay a sin, and a punishment following on it, here or elsewhere, in her Imperial position, surely it is to be charged on foolish old Anton Ulrich; not on her, poor Lady, who had never coveted such height, nor durst for her soul take the leap thitherward, till the serene old literary gentleman showed her how easy it was.

Well, old Anton Ulrich is long since dead,* and his religious accounts are all settled beyond cavil; and only the sad duty devolves on me of explaining a little what and who his rather insipid offspring are, so far as related to readers of this History. Anton Ulrich left two sons; the elder of whom was Duke, and the younger had an Apanage, Blankenburg by name. Only this younger had children, — serene Kaiserinn that now is, one of them. The elder died childless, precisely a few months before the times we are now got to; reigning Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel,* all but certain Apanages; and does not concern us farther. To that supreme dignity the younger has now come, and his Apanage of Blankenburg and children with him; — so that there is now only one outstanding Apanage (Bevern, not known to us yet); which also will perhaps get reunited, if we cared for it. Ludwig Rudolf is the name of this new sovereign Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, or Duke in chief; age now sixty; has a shining, bustling, somewhat irregular Duchess, says Wilhelmina; and a nose — or rather almost no nose, for sad reasons! Other qualities or accidents I know not of him, — except that he is Father of the Vienna Kaiserinn; Grandfather of the Princess whom Seckendorf suggests for our Friedrich of Prussia.

* 1714, age 70. Hübner, t. 190.

 1781, Michaelis, i. 182.

In Ludwig Rudolf's insipid offspring our readers are unexpectedly somewhat interested: let readers patiently attend, therefore. He had three Daughters, never any son. Two of his Daughters, eldest and youngest, are alive still; the middle one had a sad fate long ago. She married, in 1711, Alexius the Czarowitz of Peter the Great: foolish Czarowitz, miserable and making others miserable, broke her heart by ill conduct, ill usage, in four years; so that she died; leaving him only a poor small Peter II., who is now dead too, and that matter ended all but the memory of it. Some accounts bear, that she did not die; that she only pretended it, and ran and left her intolerable Czarowitz. That she wedded, at Paris, in deep obscurity, an Officer just setting out for Louisiana; lived many years there as a thrifty soldier's-wife; returned to Paris with her Officer reduced to halfpay; and told him, — or told some select Official person after him, under sevenfold oath, being then a widow and necessitous, — her sublime secret. Sublime secret, which came thus to be known to a supremely select circle at Paris; and was published in Books, where one still reads it. No vestige of truth in it, — except that perhaps a necessitous soldier's widow at Paris, considering of ways and means, found that she had some trace of likeness to the Pictures of this Princess, and had heard her tragic story.

* "Welf-booths" (Hutted Camp of the Welfs), according to Etymology. "Brunswick," again, is Braun's-Wick; "Braun" (Brown) being an old militant Welf in those parts, who built some lodge for himself, as a convenience there, — Year 880, say the uncertain old Books. Hübner, t. 149; Michaelis, &c.

 Wilhelmina, ii. 121.

Ludwig Rudolf's second Daughter is dead long years ago; nor has this fable as yet risen from her dust. Of Ludwig Rudolf's other two Daughters, we have said that one, the eldest, was the Kaiserinn; Empress Elizabeth Christina, age now precisely forty; with two beautiful Daughters, sublime Maria Theresa the elder of them, and no son that would live. Which last little circumstance has caused the Pragmatic Sanction, and tormented universal Nature for so many years back! Ludwig Rudolf has a youngest Daughter, also married, and a Mother in Germany, — to this day conspicuously so; — of whom next, or rather of her Husband and Family-circle, we must say a word.

Her Husband is no other than the esteemed Friend of Friedrich Wilhelm; Duke of Brunswick-Bevern, by title; who, as a junior branch, lives on the Apanage of Bevern, as his Father did; but is sure now to inherit the Sovereignty and be Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel at large, he or his Sons, were the present incumbent, Ludwig Rudolf, once out. Present incumbent, we have just intimated, is his Father-in-law; but it is not on that ground that he looks to inherit. He is Nephew of old Anton Ulrich, Son of a younger Brother (who was also "Bevern" in Anton's time); and is the evident Heir-male; old Anton being already fallen into the distaff, with nothing but three Granddaughters. Anton's heir will now be this Nephew: Nephew has wedded one of the Granddaughters, youngest of the Three, youngest Daughter of Ludwig Rudolf, Sovereign Duke that now is; — which Lady, by the family she brought him, if no otherwise, is memorable or mentionable here, and may be called a Mother in Germany.

Father Bevern her Husband, Ferdinand Albert the name of him, is now just fifty, only ten years younger than his serene Father-in-law Ludwig Rudolf: — whom, I may as well say here, he does at last succeed, three years hence (1735), and becomes Duke of Brunswick in General, according to hope; — but only for a few months, having himself died that same year.* Poor Duke; rather a good man, by all the accounts I could hear; though not of qualities that shone. He is at present "Duke of Brunswick-Bevern," — such his actual nomenclature in those ever-fluctuating Sibyl's-leaves of German History-Books, Wilhelmina's and the others; — expectant Duke of Brunswick in General; much a friend of Friedrich Wilhelm. A kind of Austrian soldier he was formerly, and will again be for brief times; General-Feldmarschall so-styled; but is not notable in War, nor otherwise at all, except for the offspring he had by this serene Spouse of his. Insipid offspring, the impatient reader says; but permits me to enumerate one or two of them:

* ANTON ULRICH (1633-1714), Duke in Chief; that is, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel.

AUGUST WILHELM, elder Son and Heir (1662, 1714, 1731); had no Children.

LUDWIG RUDOLF, the younger Son (1671, 1731, 1735, apanaged in Blankenburg; Duke of Brunswick-Blankenburg; became Wolfenbüttel, 1731; died, 1st March 1735. No Son: so that now the Bevern succeeded. Three Daughters:

Elizabeth Christina, the Kaiser-inn (1691, 1708, 1750). Charlotte Christina (1694, 1711, 1715), Alexius of Russia's; had a fabulous end. Antoinette Amelia (1695, 1712, 1762); Bevern's Wife,—a "Mother in Germany."

FERDINAND ALBERT (1636-1687), his younger Brother apanaged in Bevern; that is, Duke of Brunswick-Bevern.

FERDINAND ALBERT, eldest Son (an elder had perished, 1704, on the Schellenberg under Marlborough), followed in Bevern (1680, 1687-1704, 1735); Kaiser's soldier, Friedrich Wilhelm's friend; married his Cousin, Antoinette Amelia ("Mother in Germany," as we call her). Duke in Chief, 1st March 1735, on Ludwig Rudolf's decease; died himself, 3d September same year.

Born 1718, Karl the Heir (to marry our Friedrich's Sister).	1714, Anton Ulrich (Russia; tragedy of Czar Iwan).	1715, 8th November, Elizabeth Christina (Crown-Prince's).	1718, Ludwig Ernst (Holland, 1787).	1721, Ferdinand (Chat-ham's and England's) of the Seven-Years War.	1722, 1724, 1725, 1732, Four others; Boys the youngest Two, who were both killed in Friedrich's Wars.
---	--	---	-------------------------------------	--	---

1°. Karl, eldest Son; who is sure to be Brunswick in General; who is betrothed to Princess Charlotte of Prussia, — “a satirical creature, she, fonder of my Prince than of him,” Wilhelmina thinks. The wedding nevertheless took effect. Brunswick in General duly fell in, first to the Father; then, in a few months more, to Karl with his Charlotte: and from them proceeded, in due time, another Karl, of whom we shall hear in this History; — and of whom all the world heard much in the French Revolution Wars; in 1792, and still more tragically afterwards. Shot, to death or worse, at the Battle of Jena, October 1806; “battle lost before it was begun,” — such the strategic history they give of it. He peremptorily ordered the French Revolution to suppress itself; and that was the answer the French Revolution made him. From this Karl, what new Queens Caroline of England and portentous Dukes of Brunswick, sent upon their travels through the anarchic world, profitable only to Newspapers, we need not say! —

2°. Anton Ulrich; named after his august Great-Grandfather; does not write novels like him. At present a young gentleman of eighteen; goes into Russia before long, hoping to beget Czars; which issues dreadfully for himself and the potential Czars he begot. The reader has heard of a potential “Czar Iwan,” violently done to death in his room, one dim moonlight night of 1764, in the Fortress of Schlüsselburg, middle of Lake Ladoga; misty moon looking down on the stone battlements, on the melancholy waters, and saying nothing. — But let us not anticipate.

3°. Elizabeth Christina; to us more important than any of them. Namesake of the Kaiserinn, her august Aunt; age now seventeen; insipid fine-complexioned young lady, who is talked of for the Bride of our Crown-Prince. Of whom the reader will hear more. Crown-Prince fears she is “too religious," — and will have "cagots" about her (solemn persons in black, highly unconscious how little wisdom they have), who may be troublesome.

4°. A merry young Boy now ten, called Ferdinand; with whom England within the next thirty years will ring, for some time, loud enough: the great "Prince Ferdinand" himself, — under whom the Marquis of Granby and others became great; Chatham superintending it. This really was a respectable gentleman, and did considerable things, — a Trismegistus in comparison with the Duke of Cumberland whom he succeeded. A cheerful, singularly polite, modest, well-conditioned man withal. To be slightly better known to us, if we live. He at present is a Boy of ten, chasing the thistle's beard.

5°. Three other sons, all soldiers, two of them younger than Ferdinand; whose names were in the gazettes down to a late period; — whom we shall ignore in this place. The last of them was marched out of Holland, where he had long been Commander-in-chief on rather Tory principles, in the troubles of 1787. Others of them we shall see storming forward on occasion, valiantly meeting death in the field of fight, all conspicuously brave of character; but this shall be enough of them at present.

It is of these that Ludwig Rudolf's youngest daughter, the serene Ferdinand Albert's wife, is Mother in Germany; highly conspicuous in their day. If the question is put, it must be owned they are all rather of the insipid type. Nothing but a kind of albuminous simplicity noticeable in them; no wit, originality, brightness in the way of uttered intellect. If it is asked, How came they to the least distinction in this world?

— the answer is not immediately apparent. But indeed they are Welf of the Welfs, in this respect as in others. One asks, with increased wonder, noticing in the Welfs generally nothing but the same albuminous simplicity, and poverty rather than opulence of uttered intellect, or of qualities that shine, How the Welfs came to play such a part, for the last thousand years, and still to be at it, in conspicuous places?

Reader, I have observed that uttered intellect is not what permanently makes way, but unuttered. Wit, logical brilliancy, spiritual effulgency, true or false, — how precious to idle mankind, and to the Newspapers and History Books, even when it is false: while, again, Nature and Practical Fact care next to nothing for it in comparison, even when it is true! Two silent qualities you will notice in these Welfs, modern and ancient; which Nature much values: First. consummate human Courage; a noble, perfect, and as it were unconscious superiority to fear. And then secondly, much weight of mind, a noble not too conscious Sense of what is Right and Not-Right, I have found in some of them; — which means mostly weight, or good gravitation, good observance of the perpendicular; and is called justice, veracity, high honour, and other such names. These are fine qualities indeed, especially with an “albuminous simplicity” as vehicle to them. If the Welfs had not much articulate intellect, let us guess they made a good use, not a bad or indifferent, as is commoner, of what they had! —

Who his Majesty's Choice is; and what the Crown-Prince thinks of it.

Princess Elizabeth Christina, the insipid Brunswick specimen, backed by Seckendorf and Vienna, proves on consideration the desirable to Friedrich Wilhelm in this matter. But his Son's notions, who as yet knows her only by rumour, do not go that way. Insipidity, triviality; the fear of "cagotage," and frightful fellows in black supremely unconscious what blockheads they are, haunts him a good deal. And as for any money coming, — her sublime Aunt the Kaiserinn never had much ready money; one's resources on that side are likely to be exiguous. He would prefer the Princess of Mecklenburg, Semi-Russian Catharine or Anna, of whom we have heard; would prefer the Princess of Eisenach (whose name he does not know rightly); thinks there are many Princesses preferable. Most of all he would prefer, what is well known of him in Tobacco-Parliament, but known to be impossible, this long while back, to go upon a round of travel, — as for instance the Prince of Lorraine is now doing, — and look about him a little.

These candid considerations the Crown-Prince earnestly suggests to Grumkow, and the secret committee of Tobacco-Parliament; earnestly again and again, in his Correspondence with that gentleman, which goes on very brisk at present. "Much of it lost," we hear; but enough, and to spare, is saved! Not a be Correspondence: the tone of it shallow, hard of heart; tragically flippant, especially on the Crown-Prince's part; now and then, even a touch of the hypocritical from him, slight touch and not with will: alas, what can the poor young man do? Grumkow — whose ground, I think, is never quite so secure since that Nosti business, — professes ardent attachment to the real interests of the Prince; and does solidly advise him of what is feasible, what not, in headquarters: very exemplary "attachment;" credible to what length, the Prince well enough knows. And so the Correspondence is unbeautiful; not very descriptive even, — for poor Friedrich is considerably under mask, while he writes to that address; and of Grumkow himself we want no more "description;" — and is, in fact, on its own score, an avoidable article rather than otherwise; though perhaps the reader, for a poor involved Crown-Prince's sake, will wish an exact Excerpt or two before we quite dismiss it.

Towards turning off the Brunswick speculation, or turning on the Mecklenburg or Eisenach or any other in its stead, the Correspondence naturally avails nothing. Seckendorf has his orders from Vienna: Grumkow has his pension, — his creambowl duly set, — for helping Seckendorf. Though angels pleaded, not in a tone of tragic flippancy, but with the voice of breaking hearts, it would be to no purpose. The Imperial Majesties have ordered, Marry him to Brunswick, "bind him the better to our House in time coming;" nay the Royal mind at Potsdam gravitates, of itself, that way, after the first hint is given. The Imperial will has become the Paternal one; no answer but obedience. What Grumkow can do will be, if possible, to lead or drive the Crown-Prince into obeying smoothly, or without breaking of harness again. Which, accordingly, is pretty much the sum of his part in this unlovely Correspondence: the geeho-ing of an expert wagoner, who has got a fiery young Arab thoroughly tied into his dastard sandcart, and has to drive him by voice, or at most by slight crack of whip; and does it. Can we hope, a select specimen or two of these Documents, not on Grumkow's part, or for Grumkow's unlovely sake, may now be acceptable to the reader? A Letter or two picked from that large stock, in a legible state, will show us Father and Son, and how that tragic matter went on, better than description could.

Papa's Letters to the Crown-Prince during that final Cüstrin period, when Carzig and Himmelstädt were going on, and there was such progress in Economics, are all of hopeful ruggedly affectionate tenor; and there are a good few of them: style curiously rugged, intricate, headlong; and a strong substance of sense and worth tortuously visible everywhere. Letters so delightful to the poor retrieved Crown-Prince then and there; and which are still almost pleasant reading to third-parties, once you introduce grammar and spelling. This is one exact specimen; most important to the Prince and us. Suddenly, one night, by estafette, his Majesty, meaning nothing but kindness, and grateful to Seckendorf and Tobacco-Parliament for such idea, proposes, — in these terms (merely reduced to English and the common spelling):

"To the Crown-Prince at Cüstrin (From Papa)

"Potsdam, 4th February 1732.

"My dear Son Fritz, — I am very glad you need no more
"physic. But you must have a care of yourself, some days
"yet, for the severe weather; which gives me and every"body colds: so pray be on your guard (nekmet Euch hübsch
"in Acht).

"You know, my dear Son, that when my children are
"obedient, I love them much: so, when you were at Berlin,
"I from my heart forgave you everything; and from that "Berlin time, since I saw you, have thought of nothing but
"of your well-being and how to establish you, — not in the "Army only, but also with a right Step-daughter, and so
"see you married in my lifetime. You may be well persuaded
"I have had the Princesses of Germany taken survey of,
"so far as possible, and examined by trusty people, what "their conduct is, their education and so on: and so a "Princess has been found, the Eldest one of Bevern, who "is well brought up, modest and retiring, as women ought "to be.

"You will, without delay (citò) write me your mind on
"this. I have purchased the Von Katsch House; the Feld-
"marschall," old Wartensleben, poor Katte's grandfather,
"as Governor" of Berlin, "will get that to live in: and his "Government House* I will have made-new for you, and

* Fine enough old House, or Palace, built by the Great Elector; given by him to Graf Feldmarschall von Schomberg, the "Duke Schomberg" who was killed in the Battle of the Boyne: "same House, opposite the "Arsenal, which belongs now (1855) to his Royal Highness Prince Friedrich "Wilhelm of Prussia." (Prenss, i. 73; and Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 12a.

“furnish it all; and give you enough to keep house your“self there; and will command you into the Army, April “coming” (which is quite a subordinate story, your Majesty!).

“The Princess is not ugly, nor beautiful. You must men“tion it to no mortal; — write indeed to Mamma (der Mama)
“that I have written to you. And when you shall have a Son,
“I will let you go on your Travels, — wedding, however,
“cannot be before winter next. Meanwhile I will try and con“trive opportunity that you see one another, a few times, in “all honour, yet so that you get acquainted with her. She “is a God-fearing creature (gottesfürchtiges Mensch), which is all “in all; will suit herself to you” (be comportable to you) “as “she does to the Parents-in-law.

“God give his blessing to it; and bless You and your “Posterity, and keep Thee as a good Christian. And have “God always before your eyes; — and don’t believe that “damnable Particular tenet” (Predestination); “and be “obedient and faithful: so shall it, here in Time and there in “Eternity, go well with thee; — and whoever wishes that from “the heart, let him say Amen.

“Your true Father to the death,

“FRIEDRICH WILHELM.

“When the Duke of Lorraine comes, I will have thee “come. I think thy Bride will be here then. Adieu; God be “with you.” *

This important Missive reached Cüstrin, by estafette, that same midnight, 4th-5th February; when Wolden, “Hofmarschall of the Prince’s Court” (titular

* Ceuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 55.

Goldstick there, but with abundance of real functions laid on him), had the honour to awaken the Crown-Prince into the joy of reading. Crown-Prince instantly despatched, by another estafette, the requisite responses to Papa and Mamma, — of which Wolden does not know the contents at all, not he, the obsequious Goldstick; — but doubtless they mean "Yes," Crown-Prince appearing so overjoyed at this splendid evidence of Papa's love, as the Goldstick could perceive.*

What the Prince's actual amount of joy was, we shall learn better from the following three successive utterances of his, confidentially despatched to Grumkow in the intermediate days, before Berlin or this "Duke of Lorraine" (whom our readers and the Crown-Prince are to wait upon), with actual sight of Papa and the Intended, came in course. Grumkow's Letters to the Crown-Prince in this important interval are not extant, nor if they were could we stand them; from the Prince's Answers it will be sufficiently apparent what the tenor of them was. Utterance first is about a week after that of the estafette at midnight:

To General Feldmarschall von Grumkow, at Potsdam (From the Crown-Prince).

• "Cüstrin, 11th February 1732.

"My dear General and Friend, — I was charmed to learn
"by your Letter that my affairs are on so good a footing"

* Wolden's Letter to Friedrich Wilhelm, "5th February 1732:" in Preuss, ii. part 2d (or Urkundenbuch), p. 206. Mamma's answer to the message brought her by this return estafette, a mere formal Very-well, written from the fingers outward, exists (Œuvres, xxvi. 65); the rest have happily vanished.

(Papa so well satisfied with my professions of obedience);
“and you may depend on it I am docile to follow your advice.
“I will lend myself to whatever is possible for me; and pro“vided I can secure the King’s favour by my obedience, I will “do all that is within my power.

“Nevertheless, in making my bargain with the Duke of “Bevern, manage that the Corpus Delicti” (my Intended) “be “brought up under her Grandmother” (Duchess of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, Ludwig Rudolf’s Spouse, an airy coquettish
Lady, — let her be the tutoress and model of my Intended, O General). “For I should prefer being made a” — what shall we say? by a light wife, — “or to serve under the “haughty *fontange of my Spouse” (as Ludwig Rudolf does, by all accounts), “than to have a blockhead who would drive “me mad by her ineptitudes, and whom I should be ashamed
“to produce.

“I beg you labour at this affair. When one hates romance “heroines as heartily as I do, one dreads those ‘virtues’ of the “ferocious type” (les vertus farouches, so terribly aware that they are virtuous); “and I had rather marry the greatest” — (unnameable) — “in Berlin, than a devotee with half-a-dozen “ghastly hypocrites (cagots) at her beck. If it were still “möglich” (possible, in German) “to make her Calvinist” (Réformée; our Court-Creed, which might have an allaying tendency, and at least would make her go with the stream)?
“But I doubt that: — I will insist, however, that her Grand“mother have the training of her. What you can do to help
“in this, my dear Friend, I am persuaded you will do.

“It afflicted me a little that the King still has doubts of me, “while I am obeying in such a matter, diametrically opposite
“to my own ideas. In what way shall I offer stronger proofs?

* Species of top-knot; so named from Fontange, an unfortunate-female of Louis Fourteenth’s, who invented the ornament.

"I may give myself to the Devil, it will be to no purpose; no"thing but the old song over again, doubt on doubt. — Don't "imagine I am going to disoblige the Duke, the Duchess or
"the Daughter, I beseech you! I know too well what is due "to them, and too much respect their merits, not to observe
"the strictest rules of what is proper, — even if I hated their "progeny and them like the pestilence.

"I hope to speak to you with open heart at Berlin." — —
"You may think, too, how I shall be embarrassed, having "to do the Amoroso perhaps without being it, and to take an "appetite for mute ugliness, — for I don't much trust Count
"Seckendorf's taste in this article," — in spite of his testimonies in Tobacco-Parliament and elsewhere. "Monsieur!
"Once more, get this Princess to learn by heart the Ecole des
"Maris and the Ecole des Femmes; that will do her much more "good than True Christianity by the late Mr. Arndt!* If,
"besides, she would learn steadiness of humour (toujours
"danser sur un pied), learn music; and, nota bene, become
"rather too free than too virtuous, — ah then, my dear Gene"ral, then I should feel some liking for her, and a Colin "marrying a Phyllis, the couple would be in accordance:
"but if she is stupid, naturally I renounce the Devil and her."
— — "It is said she has a Sister, who at least has common "sense. Why take the eldest, if so? To the King it must "be all one. There is also a Princess Christina Marie of "Eisenach" (real name being Christina Wilhelmina, but no matter), "who would be quite my fit, and whom I should "like to try for. In fine, I mean to come soon into your "Countries; and perhaps will say like Cæsar, Veni, vidi,
"vici." * *

* Johann Arndt ("late" this long while back): Vom wahren Christen-thum, Magdeburg, 1610.

 Did come, 26th February, as we shall see.

Paragraph of tragic compliments to Grumkow we omit. Letter ends in this way:

“Your Baireuth News is very interesting; I hope, in “September next” (time of a grand problem coming there for Wilhelmina), “my Sister will recover her first health. If I go “travelling, I hope to have the consolation of seeing her for a “fortnight or three weeks: I love her more than my life; and “for all my obediences to the King, surely I shall deserve that “recompense. The diversions for the Duke of Lorraine are “very well schemed; but” — but what mortal can now care about them? Close, and seal.*

As to this Duke of Lorraine just coming, he is Franz Stephan, a pleasant young man of twenty-five, son of that excellent Duke Leopold Joseph, whom young Lyttelton of Hagley was so taken with, while touring in those parts in the Congress-of-Soissons time. Excellent Duke Leopold Joseph is since dead; and this Franz has succeeded to him, — what succession there was; for Lorraine as a Dukedom has its neck under the foot of France this great while, and is evidently not long for this world. Old Fleury, men say, has his eye upon it. And in fact it was, as we shall see, eaten up by Fleury within four years time; and this Franz proved the last of all the Dukes there. Let readers notice him: a man of high destiny otherwise, of whom we are to hear much. For ten years past he has lived about Vienna, being a born Cousin of that House (Grandmother was Kaiser Leopold's own Sister); and it is understood, nay it is privately settled, he is to marry the transcendent Archduchess, peerless Maria Theresa herself; and is to reap, he, the whole harvest of that Pragmatic Sanction sown with such travail of the Universe at large. May be King of the Romans (which means successor to the Kaisership) any day; and actual Kaiser one day.

* Förster, iii. 160-162; Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 37-39.

We may as well say here, he did at length achieve these dignities, though not quite in the time or on the terms proposed. King of the Romans old Kaiser Karl never could quite resolve to make him, — having always hopes of male progeny yet; which never came. For his peerless Bride he waited six years still (owing to accidents), “attachment mutual all the while;” did then wed, 1738, and was the happiest of men and expectant Kaisers: — but found, at length, the Pragmatic Sanction to have been a strange sowing of dragon's teeth, and the first harvest reaping from it a world of armed men! — For the present he is on a grand Tour, for instruction and other objects; has been in England last; and is now getting homewards again, to Vienna, across Germany; conciliating the Courts as he goes. A pacific friendly eupeptic young man: Crown-Prince Friedrich, they say, took much to him in Berlin; — did not quite swear eternal friendship; but kept up some correspondence for a while, and “once sends him a present of salmon.” — But to proceed with the utterances to Grumkow.

Utterance second is probably of prior date; but introducible here, being an accidental Fragment, with the date lost:

To the Feldmarschall von Grumkow (From the Crown-Prince; exact date lost).

“* * As to what you tell me of the Princess of Mecklenburg,” for whom they want a Brandenburg Prince, — “could not I marry her? Let her come into this Country, and think no more of Russia: she would have a Dowry of two or three millions of roubles, — only fancy how I could live with that! I think that project might succeed. The Princess is Lutheran; perhaps she objects to go into the Greek Church? — — I find none of these advantages in this Princess of Bevern; who, as many people, even of the Duke’s Court, say, is not at all beautiful, speaks almost nothing, and is given to pouting (faisant la fâchée). The good Kaiserinn has so little herself, that the sums she could afford her Niece would be very moderate.”*

“Given to pouting,” too! No, certainly; your Insipidity of Brunswick, without prospects of ready money; dangerous for cagotage; “not a word to say for herself in company, and given to pouting:” I do not reckon her the eligible article! —

Seckendorf, Schulenburg, Grumkow and all hands are busy in this matter; geeho-ing the Crown-Prince towards the mark set before him. With or without explosion, arrive there he must; other goal for him is none! — In the mean while, it appears, illustrious Franz of Lorraine, coming on, amid the proper demonstrations, through Magdeburg and the Prussian Towns, has caught some slight illness, and been obliged to pause; so that Berlin cannot have the happiness of seeing him quite so soon as it expected. The high guests invited to meet Duke Franz, especially the high Brunswicks, are already there. High Brunswicks, Bevern with Duchess, and still more important, with Son and with Daughter: — insipid Corpus delicti herself has appeared on the scene; and Grumkow, we find, has been writing some description of her to the Crown-Prince. Description of an unfavourable nature; below the truth, not above it, — to avert disappointment, nay to create some gleam of inverse joy, when the actual meeting occurs. That is his art in driving the fiery little Arab ignominiously yoked to him; and it is clear he has overdone it, for once. This is Friedrich's third utterance to him; much the most emphatic there is:

* Fragment given in Seckendorfs Leben, iii. 249 n.

To the General Feldmarschall von Grumkow.

“Cüstrin, 19th February 1782.

“Judge, my dear General, if I can have been much “charmed with the description you give of the abominable ob“ject of my desires! For the love of God, disabuse the King “in regard to her” (show him that she is a fool, then); “and “let him remember well that fools commonly are the most “obstinate of creatures.

“Some months ago he wrote a Letter to Wolden,” the obsequious Goldstick, “of his giving me the choice of several “Princesses: I hope he will not give himself the lie in that.
“I refer you entirely to the Letter, which Schulenburg will “have delivered,” — little Schulenburg called here, in passing your way; all hands busy. “For there is no hope of wealth,

“no reasoning, nor chance of fortune that could change my “sentiment as expressed there” (namely, that I will not have her, whatever become of me): “and miserable for miserable, “it is all one! Let the King but think that it is not for him“self he is marrying me, but for myself; nay he too will have “a thousand chagrins, to see two persons hating one another,
“and the miserablest marriage in the world; — to hear their “mutual complaints, which will be to him so many reproaches
“for having fashioned the instrument of our yoke. As a good “Christian, let him consider, If it is well done to wish to force “people; to cause divorces, and to be the occasion of all the “sins that an ill-assorted marriage leads us to commit! I am “determined to front everything in the world sooner: and “since things are so, you may in some good way apprise
“the Duke” of Bevern “that, happen what may, I never will “have her.

“I have been unfortunate (malheureux) all my life; and I “think it is my destiny to continue so. One must be patient, “and take the time as it comes. Perhaps a sudden tract of “good fortune, on the back of all the chagrins I have made “profession of ever since I entered this world, would have “made me too proud. In a word, happen what will, I have “nothing to reproach myself with. I have suffered sufficiently “for an exaggerated crime” (that of ‘attempting to desert;’ — Heavens!) — “and I will not engage myself to extend “my miseries (chagrins) into future times. I have still re“sources: — a pistol-shot can deliver me from my sorrows and “my life: and I think a merciful God would not damn me for “that; but taking pity on me, would, in exchange for a life “of wretchedness, grant me salvation. This is witherward “despair can lead a young person, whose blood is not so “quiescent as if he were seventy. I have a feeling of myself, “Monsieur; and perceive that, when one hates the methods

"of force as much as I, our boiling blood will carry us always "towards extremities."

* * "If there are honest people in the world, they must "think how to save me from one of the most perilous passages
"I have ever been in. I waste myself in gloomy ideas; I fear
"I shall not be able to hide my grief, on coming to Berlin.
"This is the sad state I am in; — but it will never make me "change from being," — surely to an excessive degree, the illustrious Grumkow's most &c. &c.

"FRIEDRICH."

"I have received a Letter from the King; all agog (bien
"coiffé) about the Princess. I think I may still finish the "week here.* When his first fire of approbation is spent,
"you might, praising her all the while, lead him to notice
"her faults. Mon Dieu, has he not already seen what an ill-
"assorted marriage comes to, — my Sister of Anspach and "her Husband, who hate one another like the fire! He has "a thousand vexations from it every day.  And what aim has "the King? If it is to assure himself of me, that is not the "way. Madame of Eisenach might do it; but a fool not (point
"une bête); — on the contrary, it is morally impossible to love
"the cause of our misery. The King is reasonable; and I am "persuaded he will understand this himself." **

Very passionate pleading; but it might as well address itself to the east-winds. Have east-winds a heart, that they should feel pity? Jarni-bleu, Herr Feldzeugmeister, — only take care he don't upset things again!

Grumkow, in these same hours, is writing a Letter to the Prince, which we still have,* How charmed his Majesty is at such obedience; “shed tears of joy,” writes Grumkow, “and said it was the happiest day of his life.” Judge Grumkow’s feelings soon after, on this furious recalcitration breaking out! Grumkow’s Answer, which also we still have, is truculence itself in a polite form: — horrorstruck as a Christian at the suicide notion, at the — in fact at the whole matter; and begs, as a humble individual, not wishful of violent death and destruction upon self and family, to wash his poor hands of it altogether. Dangerous for the like of him: “interfering between Royal Father and Royal Son of such opposite humours, would break the neck of any man,” thinks Grumkow; and sums-up with this pithy reminiscence: “I remember always what the King said to me at Wusterhausen, when your Royal Highness lay prisoner in the Castle of Cüstrin, and I wished to take your part: ‘Nein, Grumkow, denket an diese Stelle, Gott gebe dass ich nicht wahr rede, aber mein Sohn stirbt nicht eines natürlichen Todes; und Gott gebe dass er nicht unter Henkers Hände komme.’ No, Grumkow, think of what I now tell you: God grant it do not come true, — but my Son won’t die a natural death; God grant he do not come into the Hangman’s hands yet!’ I shuddered at these words, and the King repeated them twice to me: that is true, or may I never see God’s face, or have part in the merits of Our Lord.” — The Crown-Prince’s readings” may fitly terminate here.

* 26th, did arrive in Berlin: Preuss (in Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 58n.).

 Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 41-42.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 43.

 Ib. pp. 44-45.

Duke of Lorraine arrives in Potsdam, and in Berlin.

Saturday, 23d February 1732, his Serene Highness of Lorraine did at length come to hand. Arrived in Potsdam that day; where the two Majesties, with the Serene Beverns, with the Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, and the other high guests, had been some time in expectation. Suitable persons invited for the occasion: Bevern, a titular Austrian Feldmarschall; Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, an actual one (poor old Eberhard Ludwig's Cousin, and likely to be Heir there soon): high quasi-Austrian Serenities; — not to mention Schulenburg and others officially related to Austria, or acquainted with it. Nothing could be more distinguished than the welcome of Duke Franz; and the things he saw and did, during his three-weeks visit, are wonderful to Fassmann and the extinct Gazetteers. Saw the Potsdam Giants do their "exercitia," transcendent in perfection; had a boarhunt; "did divine-service in the Potsdam Catholic Church;" — went by himself to Spandau, on the Tuesday (26th), where all the guns broke forth, and dinner was ready: King, Queen and Party having made off for Berlin, in the interim, to be ready for his advent there "in the evening about five." Majesties wait at Berlin, with their Party, — among whom, say the old Newspapers, "is his Royal Highness the Crown-Prince:" Crown-Prince just come in from Cüstrin; just blessed with the first sight of his Charmer, whom he finds perceptibly less detestable than he expected.

26th Feb. 1782.

Serene Highness of Lorraine arrived punctually at five, with outburst of all the artilleries and hospitalities; balls, soirees, exercitia of the Kleist Regiment, of the Gens d'Armes; dinners with Grumkow, dinners with Seckendorf, evening party with the Margravine Philip (Margravine in high colours); — one scenic miracle succeeding another, for above a fortnight to come.

The very first spectacle his Highness saw, a private one, and of no intense interest to him, we shall mention here for our own behoof. “An hour after his arrival “the Duke was carried away to his Excellency Herr “Creutz the Finance Minister’s; to attend a wedding “there, along with his Majesty. Wedding of Excellency “Creutz’s only Daughter to the Herr Hofjägermeister “von Hacke,” — Hofjägermeister (Master of the Hunt), and more specifically Captain Hacke, of the Potsdam Guard or Giant regiment, much and deservedly a favourite with his Majesty. Majesty has known, a long while, the merits military and other of this Hacke; a valiant expert exact man, of good stature, good service among the Giants and otherwise, though not himself gigantic; age now turned of thirty; — and unluckily little but his pay to depend on. Majesty, by way of increment to Hacke, small increment on the pecuniary side, has lately made him “Master of the Hunt;” will, before long, make him Adjutant-General, and his right-hand man in Army matters, were he only rich; — has, in the mean while, made this excellent match for him; which supplies that defect. Majesty was the making of Creutz himself; who is grown very rich, and has but one Daughter: "Let Hacke have her!" his Majesty advised; — and snatches off the Duke of Lorraine to see it done. *

Did the reader ever hear of Finance-Minister Creutz, once a poor Regiments-Auditor, when his Majesty, as yet Crown-Prince, found talent in him? Can readers fish up from their memory, twenty years back, anything of a terrific Spectre walking in the Berlin Place, for certain nights, during that "Stralsund Expedition" or famed Swedish-War time, to the terror of mankind? Terrific Spectre, thought to be in Swedish pay, — properly a spy Scullion, in a small concern of Grumkow versus Creutz?  This is the same Creutz; of whom we have never spoken more, nor shall again, now that his rich Daughter is well married to Hacke, a favourite of his Majesty's and ours. It was the Duke's first sight in Berlin; February 26th; prologue to the flood of scenic wonders there.

But perhaps the wonderfullest thing, had he quite understood it, was that of the 10th March, which he was invited to. Last obligation laid upon the Crown-Prince, "to bind him to the House of Austria," that evening. (Of which take this account, external and internal, from authentic Documents in our hand.

* Fassmann, p. 430.

 Antea, vol. ii. pp. 173-177; Wilhelmina.

Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to the Brunswick Charmer, Niece of Imperial Majesty, Monday Evening, 10th March 1732.

Document first is of an internal nature, from the Prince's own hand, written to his Sister four days before:

"To the Princess Wilhelmina at Baireuth.

"Berlin, 6th March 1732.

*"My dearest Sister, — Next Monday comes my Betrothal,
"which will be done just as yours was. The Person in question "is neither beautiful nor ugly, not wanting for sense, but "very ill brought up, timid, and totally behind in manners
"and social behaviour (manières du savoir-vivre): that is the "candid portrait of this Princess. You may judge by that,
"dearest Sister, if I find her to my taste or not. The greatest "merit she has is that she has procured me the liberty of "writing to you; which is the one solacement I have in your "absence.*

*"You never can believe, my adorable Sister, how con"cerned I am about your happiness; all my wishes centre
"there, and every moment of my life I form such wishes. You "may see by this that I preserve still that sincere friendship
"which has united our hearts from our tenderest years: —
"recognise at least, my dear Sister, that you did me a sen"sible wrong when you suspected me of fickleness towards
"you, and believed false reports of my listening to tale-
"bearers; me, who love only you, and whom neither ab"sence nor lying rumours could change in respect of you.
"At least don't again believe such things on my score, and "never mistrust me till you have had clear proof, — or till
"God has forsaken me, and I have lost my wits. And being "persuaded that such miseries are not in store to overwhelm*

“me, I here repeat how much I love you, and with what respect and sincere veneration, — I am and shall be till death, my dearest Sister, — Your most humble and faithful Brother and Valet, — FRIDERICH.”*

That was on the Thursday; Betrothal is on the Monday following. Document second is from poor old Fassmann, and quite of external nature; which we much abridge:

“Monday evening, all creatures are in gala, and the Royal Apartments upstairs are brilliantly alight; Duke of Lorraine with the other high strangers are requested to take their place up there, and wait for a short while. Prussian Majesty, Queen and Crown-Prince with him, proceeds then, in a solemn official manner, to the Durchlaucht of Bevern’s Apartment, in a lower floor of the Palace; where the Bevern Party, Duke, Duchess, Son and intended Charmer are. Prussian Majesty asks the Durchlaucht and Spouse, “Whether the Marriage, some time treated of, between that their Princess here present, and this his Crown-Prince likewise here, is really a thing to their mind?” Serene Spouses answer, to the effect, ‘Yea surely, very much!’ Upon which they all solemnly ascend to the Royal Apartments up stairs” (where we have seen Wilhelmina dancing before now), “where Lorraine, Würtemberg and the other sublimities are in waiting. Lorraine and the sublimities form a semicircle; with the two Majesties, and pair of young creatures, in the centre. You young creatures, you are of one intention with your parents in this matter? Alas, there is no doubt of it. Pledge yourselves, then, by exchange of rings! said his Majesty with due business brevity. The rings are exchanged: Majesty embraces the two young crea-

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 5.

“tures with great tenderness;” as do Queen and Serenities; and then all the world takes to embracing and congratulating: and so the Betrothal is a finished thing. Bassoons and violins, striking up, whirl it off in universal dancing, — in “supper of “above Two hundred and sixty persons,” princely, or otherwise sublime in rank, “with spouses and noble ladies there” in the due proportion.*

Here is fraction of another Note from the Crown-Prince to his Sister at Baireuth, a fortnight after that event:

*Berlin, 24th March 1732 (To Princess Wilhelmina). — ***
“God be praised that you are better, dearest Sister! For “nobody can love you more tenderly than I do. — As to the “Princess of Bevern” (my Betrothed), “the Queen” (Mamma, whom you have been consulting on these etiquettes) “bids me “answer, That you need not style her ‘Highness,’ and that “you may write to her quite as to an indifferent Princess. As “to ‘kissing of the hands,’ I assure you I have not kissed “them, nor will kiss them; they are not pretty enough to “tempt one that way. God long preserve you in perfect “health! And you, preserve for me always the honour of your “good graces; and believe, my charming Sister, that never “brother in the world loved with such tenderness a sister so “charming as mine; in short, believe, dear Sister, that with- “out compliments, and in literal truth, I am yours wholly (tout “à vous): FRIDERICH.”

This is the Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to an In- sipidity of Brunswick. Insipidity’s private feelings, per- haps of a languidly glad sort, are not known to us;

* Fassmann, pp. 432-433.

 Ib. xxvii. part. 1st, p. 5.

Crown-Prince's we have in part seen. He has decided to accept his fate without a murmur farther. Against his poor Bride or her qualities not a word more. In the Schloss of Berlin, amid such tempests of female gossip (Mamma still secretly corresponding with England), he has to be very reserved, on this head especially. It is understood he did not, in his heart, nearly so much dislike the insipid Princess as he wished Papa to think he did.

Duke Franz of Lorraine went off above a week ago, on the Saturday following the Betrothal; an amiable serene young gentleman, well-liked by the Crown-Prince and everybody. "He avoided the Saxon Court, "though passing near it," on his way to old Kur-Maintz; "which is a sign," thinks Fassmann, "that mutual matters are on a weak footing in that quarter;" — Pragmatic Sanction never accepted there, and plenty of intricacies existing. Crown-Prince Friedrich may now go to Ruppin and the Regiment Goltz; his business and destinies being now all reduced to a steady condition; — steady sky, rather leaden, instead of the tempestuous thunder-and-lightning weather which there heretofore was. Leaden sky, he, if left well to himself, will perhaps brighten a little. Study will be possible to him; improvement of his own faculties, at any rate. It is much his determination. Outwardly, besides drilling the Regiment Goltz, he will have a steady correspondence to keep up with his Brunswick Charmer; — let him see that he be not slack in that.

CHAPTER II.

SMALL INCIDENTS AT RUPPIN.

FRIEDRICH, after some farther pause in Berlin, till things were got ready for him, went to Ruppın. This is in the Spring of 1732;* and he continued to have his residence there till August 1736. Four important years of young life; of which we must endeavour to give, in some intelligible condition, what traces go hovering about in such records as there are.

Ruppın, where lies the main part of the Regiment Goltz, and where the Crown-Prince Colonel of it dwells, is a quiet dull little Town, in that northwestern region; inhabitants, grown at this day to be 10,000, are perhaps guessable then at 2,000. Regiment Goltz daily rolls its drums in Ruppın: Town otherwise lifeless enough, except on market-days; and the grandest event ever known in it, this removal of the Crown-Prince thither, — which is doubtless much a theme, and proud temporary miracle, to Ruppın at present. Of society there or in the neighbourhood, for such a resident, we hear nothing.

Quiet Ruppın stands in grassy flat country, much of which is natural moor, and less of it reclaimed at that time than now. The environs, except that they are a bit of the Earth, and have a bit of the sky over them, do not set up for loveliness. Natural woods abound in that region; also peatbogs not yet drained; and fishy lakes and meres, of a dark complexion: plenteous cattle there are, pigs among them; — thick-soled husbandmen inarticulately toiling and moiling. Some glass-furnaces, a royal establishment, are the only manufactures we hear of. Not a picturesque country; but a quiet and innocent, where work is cut out, and one hopes to be well left alone after doing it. This Crown-Prince has been in far less desirable localities.

* Still in Berlin, 6th March; dates from Nauen (in the Ruppın neighbourhood) for the first time, 25th April 1732, among his Letters yet extant: Preuss. Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 4; xvi. 49.

He had a reasonable house, two houses made into one for him, in the place. He laid out for himself a garden in the outskirts, with what they call a "temple" in it, — some more or less ornamental garden-house, — from which I have read of his "letting off rockets" in a summer twilight. Rockets to amuse a small dinner-party, I should guess, — dinner of Officers, such as he had weekly or twice a week. On stiller evenings we can fancy him there in solitude; reading meditative, or musically fluting; — looking out upon the silent death of Day: how the summer gloaming steals over the moorlands, and over all lands; shutting up the toil of mortals; their very flocks and herds collapsing into silence, and the big Skies and endless Times over-arching him and them. With thoughts perhaps sombre enough now and then, but profitable if he face them piously.

His Father's affection is returning; would so fain return if it durst. But the heart of Papa has been sadly torn up: it is too good news to be quite believed, that he has a son grown wise, and doing son-like! Rumour also is very busy, rumour and the Tobacco-Parliament for or against; a little rumour is capable of stirring up great storms in the suspicious paternal mind. All along during Friedrich's abode at Ruppın, this is a constantly recurring weather-symptom; very grievous now and then; not to be guarded against by any precaution; — though steady persistence in the proper precaution will abate it, and as good as remove it, in course of time. Already Friedrich Wilhelm begins to understand that "there is much in this Fritz," — who knows how much, though of a different type from Papa's? — and that it will be better if he and Papa, so discrepant in type, and ticklishly related otherwise, live not too constantly together, as heretofore. Which is emphatically the Crown-Prince's notion too.

I perceive he read a great deal at Ruppın: what Books I know not specially; but judge them to be of more serious solid quality than formerly; and that his reading is now generally a kind of studying as well. Not the express Sciences or Technologies; not these, in any sort, — except the military, and that an express exception. These he never cared for, or regarded as the noble knowledges for a king or man. History and Moral Speculation; what mankind have done and been in this world (so far as "History" will give one any glimpse of that), and what the wisest men, poetical or other, have thought about mankind and their world: this is what he evidently had the appetite for; appetite insatiable, which lasted with him to the very end of his days. Fontenelle, Rollin, Voltaire, all the then French lights, and gradually others that lay deeper in the firmament: — what suppers of the gods one may privately have at Ruppin, without expense of wine! Such an opportunity for reading he had never had before.

In his soldier business he is punctual, assiduous; having an interest to shine that way. And is, in fact, approvable as a practical officer and soldier, by the strictest judge then living. Reads on soldiering withal; studious to know the rationale of it, the ancient and modern methods of it, the essential from the unessential in it; to understand it thoroughly, — which he got to do. One already hears of conferences, correspondences, with the Old Dessauer on this head: "Account of the Siege of Stralsund," with plans, with didactic commentaries, drawn up by that gunpowder Sage for behoof of the Crown-Prince, did actually exist, though I know not what has become of it. Now and afterwards this Crown-Prince must have been a great military reader. From Cæsar's Commentaries, and earlier, to the Chevalier Folard, and the Marquis Feuquière;* from Epaminondas at Leuctra to Charles XII. at Pultawa, all manner of Military Histories, we perceive, are at his finger-ends; and he has penetrated into the essential heart of each, and learnt what it had to teach him. Something of this, how much we know not, began at Ruppín; and it did not end again.

* Mémoires sur la Guerre (specially on the Wars of Louis XIV., in which Feuquière had himself shone): a new Book at this time (Amsterdam, 1731; first complete edition is, Paris, 1770, 4 vols. 4to); at Ruppin, and afterwards, a chief favourite with Friedrich.

On the whole, Friedrich is prepared to distinguish himself henceforth by strictly conforming, in all outward particulars possible, to the paternal will, and becoming the most obedient of sons. Partly from policy and necessity, partly also from loyalty; for he loves this rugged Father, and begins to perceive that there is more sense in his peremptory notions than at first appeared. The young man is himself rather wild, as we have seen, with plenty of youthful petulance and longings after forbidden fruit. And then he lives in an element of gossip; his whole life enveloped in a vast Dionysius'-Ear, every word and action liable to be debated in Tobacco-Parliament. He is very scarce of money, too, Papa's allowance being extremely moderate, "not above 6,000 thalers (900*l.)," says Seckendorf once. There will be contradictions enough to settle: caution, silence, every kind of prudence will be much recommendable.

In all outward particulars the Crown-Prince will conform; in the inward, he will exercise a judgment, and if he cannot conform, will at least be careful to hide. To do his Commandant duties at Ruppín, and avoid offences, is much his determination. We observe he takes great charge of his men's health; has the

* Förster, iii. 114 (Seckendorf to Eugene).

Regiment Goltz in a shinningly exact condition at the grand reviews; — is very industrious now and afterwards to get tall recruits, as a dainty to Papa. Knows that nothing in Nature is so sure of conciliating that strange old gentleman; — corresponds, accordingly, in distant quarters; lays out, now and afterwards, sums far too heavy for his means upon tall recruits for Papa. But it is good to conciliate in that quarter, by every method, and at every expense; — Argus of Tobacco-Parliament still watching one there; and Rumour needing to be industriously dealt with, difficult to keep down.

Such, so far as we can gather, is the general figure of Friedrich's life at Ruppín. Specific facts of it, anecdotes about it, are few in those dim Books; are uncertain as to truth, and without importance whether true or not. For all his gravity and Colonelship, it would appear the old spirit of frolic has not quitted him. Here are two small incidents, pointing that way; which stand on record; credible enough, though vague and without importance otherwise. Incident first is to the following feeble effect; indisputable, though extremely unmomentous: Regiment Goltz, it appears, used to have gold trimmings; the Colonel Crown-Prince petitioned that they might be of silver, which he liked better: Papa answers, Yes. Regiment Goltz gets its new regimentals done in silver; the Colonel proposes they shall solemnly burn their old regimentals. And they do it, the Officers of them, sub dio, perhaps in the Prince's garden, stripping successively in the “Temple” there, — with such degree of genial humour, loud laughter, or at least boisterous mock-solemnity, as may be in them. This is a true incident of the Prince’s history, though a small one.

Incident second is of slightly more significance; and intimates, not being quite alone in its kind, a questionable habit or method the Crown-Prince must have had of dealing with Clerical Persons hereabouts when they proved troublesome. Here are no fewer than three such Persons, or Parsons, of the Ruppín Country, who got mischief by him. How the first gave offence shall be seen, and how he was punished: offences of the second and the third we can only guess to have been perhaps pulpit-rebukes of said punishment; perhaps general preaching against military levities, want of piety, nay open sinfulness, in thoughtless young men with cockades. Whereby the thoughtless young men were again driven to think of nocturnal charivari? We will give the story in Dr. Büsching’s own words, who looks before and after to great distances, in a way worth attending to. The Herr Doctor, and endless Collector and Compiler on all manner of subjects, is very authentic always, and does not want for natural sense: but he is also very crude, — and here and there not far from stupid, such his continual haste, and slobbery manner of working up those Hundred and odd Volumes of his:*

* See his Autobiography, which forms Beyträge, B. vi. (the biggest and last Volume).

"The sanguine-choleric temperament of Friedrich," says this Doctor, "drove him, in his youth, to sensual enjoyments "and wild amusements of different kinds; in his middle age, "to fiery enterprises; and in his old years to decisions and "actions of a rigorous and vehement nature; yet so that the "primary form of utterance, as seen in his youth, never al- "together ceased with him. There are people still among us "(1788) who have had, in their own experience, knowledge of "his youthful pranks; and yet more are living, who know that "he himself, at table, would gaily recount what merry strokes "were done by him, or by his order, in those young years. To "give an instance or two.

"While he was at Neu-Ruppin as Colonel of the Infantry "Regiment there, the Chaplain of it sometimes waited upon "him about the time of dinner, — having been used to dine oc- "casionally with the former Colonel. The Crown-Prince, "however, put him always off, did not ask him to dinner; "spoke contemptuously of him in presence of the Officers. "The Chaplain was so inconsiderate, he took to girding at "the Crown-Prince in his Sermons. 'Once on a time,' "preached he, one day, 'there was Herod who had Herodias "'to dance before him; and he, — he gave her John the Bap- "'tist's head for her pains!'" This Herod, Büsching says, was understood to mean, and meant, the Crown-Prince; Herodias, the merry corps of Officers who made sport for him; John the Baptist's head was no other than the Chaplain not invited to dinner! "To punish him for such a sally, the Crown- "Prince with the young Officers of his Regiment went, one "night, to the Chaplain's house," somewhere hard by, with cow's-grass adjoining to it, as we see: and "first, they knocked-in the windows of his sleeping-room upon him" (hinge-windows, glass not entirely broken, we may hope); "next there were crackers" (Schwärmer, "enthusiasts," so to “speak!) “thrown in upon him; and thereby the Chaplain, “and his poor Wife,” more or less in an interesting condition, poor woman, “were driven out into the court-yard, and at last “into the dungheap there;” — and so left, with their Head on a Charger to that terrible extent!

That is Büsching’s version of the story; no doubt substantially correct; of which there are traces in other quarters, — for it went farther than Ruppín: and the Crown-Prince had like to have got into trouble from it. “Here is piety!” said Rumour, carrying it to Tobacco-Parliament. The Crown-Prince plaintively assures Grumkow that it was the Officers, and that they got punished for it. A likely story, the Prince’s! —

“When King Friedrich, in his old days, recounted this “after dinner, in his merry tone, he was well pleased that the “guests, and even the pages and valets behind his back, “laughed aloud at it.” Not a pious old King, Doctor, still less an orthodox one! The Doctor continues: “In a like “style, at Nauen, where part of his regiment lay, he had, — “by means of Herr von der Gröben, his First-Lieutenant,” much a comrade of his, as we otherwise perceive, — “the “Diaconus of Nauen and his Wife hunted out of bed, and “thrown into terror of their lives, one night:” offence of the Diaconus not specified. “Nay he himself once pitched his “goldheaded stick through Salpius the Church Inspector’s “window,” — offence again not specified, or perhaps merely for a little artillery practice? — “and the throw was so “dextrous that it merely made a round hole in the glass: stick “was lying on the floor; and the Prince,” on some excuse or other, “sent for it next morning.” “Margraf Heinrich of

"Schwedt," continues the Doctor, very trustworthy on points of fact, "was a diligent helper in such operations. Kaiserling," whom we shall hear of, "First-Lieutenant von der Gröben," these were prime hands; "Lieutenant Buddenbrock" (old Feldmarschall's son) "used, in his old days, when himself "grown high in rank and dining with the King, to be appealed "to as witness for the truth of these stories."*

These are the two Incidents at Ruppín, in such light as they have. And these are all. Opulent History yields from a ton of broken nails these two brass farthings, and shuts her pocket on us again. A Crown-Prince given to frolic, among other things; though aware that gravity would beseem him better. Much gay bantering humour in him, cracklings, radiations, — which he is bound to keep well under cover, in present circumstances.

* Büsching: Beyträge zu der Lebensgeschichte denkwürdiger Personen, v. 19-21. Vol. v., — wholly occupied with Friedrich II. King of Prussia (Halle, 1788), — is accessible in French and other languages; many details, and (as Büsching's wont is) few or none not authentic, are to be found in it; a very great secret spleen against Friedrich is also traceable, — for which the Doctor may have had his reasons, not obligatory upon readers of the Doctor. The truth is, Friedrich never took the least special notice of him; merely employed and promoted him, when expedient for both parties; and he really was a man of considerable worth, in an extremely crude form.

CHAPTER III.

THE SALZBURGERS.

FOR three years past there has been much rumour over Germany, of a strange affair going on in the remote Austrian quarter, down in Salzburg and its fabulous Tyrolese valleys. Salzburg, city and territory, has an Archbishop, not theoretically Austrian, but sovereign Prince so-styled; it is from him, and his orthodoxies, and pranks with his sovereign crosier, that the noise originates. Strange rumour of a body of the population discovered to be Protestant among the remote Mountains, and getting miserably ill-used by the Right Reverend Father in those parts. Which rumour, of a singular, romantic, religious interest for the general Protestant world, proves to be but too well founded. It has come forth in the form of practical complaint to the Corpus Evangelicorum at the Diet, without result from the Corpus; complaint to various persons; — in fine, to his Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm, with result.

With result at last; actual “Emigration of the Salzburgers:” and Germany, — in these very days while the Crown-Prince is at Berlin betrothing himself, and Franz of Lorraine witnessing the exercitia and wonders there, — sees a singular phenomenon of a touching idyllic nature going on; and has not yet quite forgotten it in our days. Salzburg Emigration was all in motion, flowing steadily onwards, by various routes, towards Berlin, at the time the Betrothal took place; and seven weeks after that event, when the Crown-Prince had gone to Ruppin, and again could only hear of it, the first Instalment of Emigrants arrived bodily at the Gates of Berlin, "30th April, at four in the afternoon;" Majesty himself and all the world going out to witness it, with something of a poetic, almost of a psalmist feeling, as well as with a practical on the part of his Majesty. First Instalment this; copiously followed by others, all that year; and flowing on, in smaller rills and drippings, for several years more, till it got completed. A notable phenomenon, full of lively picturesque and other interest to Brandenburg and Germany; — which was not forgotten by the Crown-Prince in coming years, as we shall transiently find; nay which all Germany still remembers, and even occasionally sings. Of which this is in brief the history.

The Salzburg Country, north-eastern slope of the Tyrol (Donau draining that side of it, Etsch or Adige the Italian side), is celebrated by the Tourist for its airy beauty, rocky mountains, smooth green valleys and swift-rushing streams; perhaps some readers have wandered to Bad Gastein, or Ischl, in these nomadic summers; have locked into Salzburg, Berchtesgaden, and the Bavarian-Austrian boundary-lands; seen the wooden-clock makings, salt-works, toy-manufactures, of those simple people in their slouch-hats; and can bear some testimony to the phenomena of Nature there.

Salzburg is the Archbishop's City, metropolis of his bit of sovereignty that then was.* A romantic City, far off among its beautiful Mountains, shadowing itself in the Salza River, which rushes down into the Inn, into the Donau, now becoming great with the tribute of so many valleys. Salzburg we have not known hitherto except as the fabulous restingplace of Kaiser Barbarossa: but we are now slightly to see it in a practical light; and mark how the memory of Friedrich Wilhelm makes an incidental lodgment for itself there.

It is well known there was extensive Protestantism once in those countries. Prior to the Thirty-Years War, the fair chance was, Austria too would all become Protestant; an extensive minority among all ranks of men in Austria too, definable as the serious intelligence of mankind in those countries, having clearly adopted it, whom the others were sure to follow. In all ranks of men; only not in the highest rank, which was pleased rather to continue Official and Papal. Highest rank had its Thirty-Years War, "its sleek Fathers Lämmerlein and Hyacinth in Jesuit serge, its terrible Fathers Wallenstein in chain-armour;" and, by working late and early then and afterwards, did manage at length to trample out Protestantism, — they know with what advantage by this time. Trample out Protestantism; or drive it into remote nooks, where under sad conditions it might protract an unnoticed existence. In the Imperial Free-Towns, Ulm, Augsburg, and the like, Protestantism continued, and under hard conditions contrives to continue: but in the country parts, except in unnoticed nooks, it is extinct. Salzburg Country is one of those nooks; an extensive Crypto-Protestantism lodging, under the simple slouch-hats, in the remote valleys there. Protestantism peaceably kept concealed, hurting nobody; wholesomely forwarding the woodenclock manufacture, and arable or grazier husbandries, of those poor people. More harmless sons of Adam, probably, did not breathe the vital air, than those dissentient Salzburger; generation after generation of them giving offence to no creature.

* Tolerable description of it in the Baron Riesbeck's Travels through Germany (London, 1787, Translation by Maty, 3 vols. 8vo), i. 124-222; — whose details otherwise, on this Emigration business, are of no authenticity or value. A kind of Playactor and miscellaneous Newspaper-man in that time (not so opulent to his class as ours is); who takes the title of "Baron" on this occasion of coming out with a Book of Imaginary "Travels." Had personally lived, practising the miscellaneous arts, about Lintz and Salzburg, — and may be heard on the look of the Country, if on little else.

Successive Archbishops had known of this Crypto-Protestantism, and in remote periods had made occasional slight attempts upon it; but none at all for a long time past. All attempts that way, as ineffectual for any purpose but stirring up strife, had been discontinued for many generations;* and the Crypto-Protestantism was again become a mythical romantic object, ignored by Official persons. However, in 1727, there came a new Archbishop, one "Firmian," Count Firmian by secular quality, of a strict lean character, zealous rather than wise; who had brought his orthodoxies with him in a rigid and very lean form.

Right Reverend Firmian had not been long in Salz-

* Buchholz, i. 148-151.

burg till he smelt out the Crypto-Protestantism; and determined to haul it forth from the mythical condition into the practical; and in fact, to see his law-beagles there worry it to death as they ought. Hence the rumours that had risen over Germany, in 1729: Law-terriers penetrating into human cottages in those remote Salzburg valleys, smelling out some German Bible or devout Book, making lists of Bible-reading cottagers; haling them to the Right Reverend Father-in-God; thence to prison, since they would not undertake to cease reading. With fine, with confiscation, tribulation: for the peaceable Salzburgers, respectful creatures, doffing their slouch-hats almost to mankind in general, were entirely obstinate in that matter of the Bible. "Cannot, your Reverence; must not, dare not!" and went to prison or whithersoever rather; a wide cry rising, Let us sell our possessions and leave Salzburg then, according to Treaty of Westphalia, Article so-and-so. "Treaty of Westphalia? Leave Salzburg?" shrieked the Right Reverend Father: "Are we getting into open mutiny then? Open extensive mutiny!" shrieked he. Borrowed a couple of Austrian regiments, — Kaiser and we always on the pleasantest terms; — and marched the most refractory of his Salzburgers over the frontiers (retaining their properties and families); whereupon noise rose louder and louder.

Refractory Salzburgers sent Deputies to the Diet; appealed, complained to the Corpus Evangelicorum, Treaty of Westphalia in hand, — without result. Corpus, having verified matters, complained to the Kaiser, to the Right Reverend Father. The Kaiser, intent on getting his Pragmatic Sanction through the Diet, and anxious to offend nobody at present, gave good words; but did nothing: the Right Reverend Father answered a Letter or two from the Corpus; then said at last, He wished to close the Correspondence, had the honour to be, — and answered no farther, when written to. Corpus was without result. So it lasted through 1730; rumour, which rose in 1729, waxing ever louder into practicable or impracticable shape, through that next year; tribulation increasing in Salzburg; and noise among mankind. In the end of 1730, the Salzburger sent Two Deputies to Friedrich Wilhelm at Berlin; solid-hearted, thick-soled men, able to answer for themselves, and give real account of Salzburg and the phenomena: this brought matters into a practicable state.

“Are you actual Protestants, the Treaty of Westphalia applicable to you? Not mere fanatic mystics, as Right Reverend Firmian asserts; protectible by no Treaty?” That was Friedrich Wilhelm’s first question; and he set his two chief Berlin Clergymen, learned Roloff one of them, a divine of much fame, to catechise the two Salzburg Deputies, and report upon the point. Their Report, dated Berlin, 30th November 1730, with specimens of the main questions, I have read;* and can fully certify, along with Roloff and friend, That here are orthodox Protestants, apparently of very pious peaceable nature, suffering hard wrong; — orthodox beyond doubt, and covered by the Treaty of Westphalia. Whereupon his Majesty dismisses them with assurance, "Return, and say there shall be help!" — and straightway lays hand on the business, strong swift steady hand as usual, with a view that way.

* Fassmann, pp. 446-448.

Salzburg being now a clear case, Friedrich Wilhelm writes to the Kaiser; to the King of England, King of Denmark; — orders preparations to be made in Preussen, vacant messuages to be surveyed, moneys to be laid up; — bids his man at the Regensburg Diet signify, That unless this thing is rectified, his Prussian Majesty will see himself necessitated to take effectual steps: "reprisals" the first step, according to the old method of his Prussian Majesty. Rumour of the Salzburg Protestants rises higher and higher. Kaiser intent on conciliating every Corpus, Evangelical and other, for his Pragmatic Sanction's sake, admonishes Right Reverend Firmian; intimates at last to him, That he will actually have to let those poor people emigrate if they demand it; Treaty of Westphalia being express. In the end of 1731 it has come thus far.

"Emigrate, says your Imperial Majesty? Well, they shall emigrate," answers Firmian; "the sooner the better!" And straightway, in the dead of winter, marches, in convenient divisions, some Nine hundred of them over the frontiers: "Go about your business, then; emigrate — to the Old One, if you like!" — "And our properties, our goods and chattels?" ask they. — "Be thankful you have kept your skins. Emigrate, I say!" And the poor Nine hundred had to go out, in the rigour of winter, “hoary old men among them, and “women coming near their time;” and seek quarters, in the wide world mostly unknown to them. Truly Firmian is an orthodox Herr; acquainted with the laws of fair usage and the time of day. The sleeping Barbarossa does not awaken upon him within the Hill here: — but in the Roncalic Fields, long ago, I should not have liked to stand in his shoes!

Friedrich Wilhelm, on this procedure at Salzburg, intimates to his Halberstadt and Minden Catholic gentlemen, that their Establishments must be locked up, and incomings suspended; that they can apply to the Right Reverend Firmian upon it; — and bids his man at Regensburg signify to the Diet that such is the course adopted here. Right Reverend Firmian has to hold his hand; finds both that there shall be Emigration, and that it must go forward on human terms, not inhuman; and that in fact the Treaty of Westphalia will have to guide it, not he henceforth. Those poor ousted Salzburgers cower into the Bavarian cities, till the weather mend, and his Prussian Majesty's arrangements be complete for their brethren and them.

His Prussian Majesty has been maturing his plans, all this while; — gathering moneys, getting lands ready. We saw him hanging Schlubhut in the Autumn of 1731, who had peculated from said moneys; and surveying Preussen, under storms of thunder and rain on one occasion. Preussen is to be the place for these people; Tilsit and Memel region, same where the big Fight of Tannenberg and ruin of the Teutsch Ritters took place: in that fine fertile Country there are homes got ready for this Emigration out of Salzburg.

Long ago, at the beginning of this History, did not the reader hear of a Pestilence in Prussian Lithuania? Pestilence in old King Friedrich's time; for which the then Crown-Prince, now Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm, vainly solicited help from the Treasury, and only brought about partial change of Ministry and no help. "Fifty-two Towns" were more or less entirely depopulated; hundreds of thousands of fertile acres fell to waste again, the hands that had ploughed them being swept away. The new Majesty, so soon as ever the Swedish War was got rid of, took this matter diligently in hand: built up the fifty-two ruined towns; issued Proclamations once and again (Years 1719, 1721), to the Wetterau, to Switzerland, Saxony, Schwaben;* inviting Colonists to come, and, on favourable terms, till and reap there. His terms are favourable, well-considered; and are honestly kept. He has a fixed set of terms for Colonists: their road-expenses thither, so much a day allowed each travelling soul; homesteads, ploughing implements, cattle, land, await them at their journey's end; their rent and services, accurately specified, are light not heavy; and "immunities" from this and that are granted them, for certain years, till they get well nestled. Excellent arrangements: and his Majesty has, in fact, got about 20,000 families in that way. And still there is room for thousands more. So that if the tyrannous Firmian took to tribulating Salzburg in that manner, Heaven had provided remedies and a Prussian Majesty. Heaven is very opulent; has alchemy to change the ugliest substances into beautifullest. Privately to his Majesty, for months back, this Salzburg Emigration is a most manageable matter. Manage well, it will be a godsend to his Majesty, and fit as by preëstablished harmony into the ancient Prussian sorrow; and "two afflictions well put together shall become a consolation," as the proverb promises! Go along then, Right Reverend Firmian, with your Emigration there: only no foul play in it, — or Halberstadt and Minden get locked: — for the rest of the matter we will undertake.

* Buchholz, i. 148.

And so, February 2d, 1732, Friedrich Wilhelm's Proclamation* flew abroad over the world; brief and business-like, cheering to all but Firmian; — to this purport: "Come ye poor Salzburger, there are homes provided for you. Apply at Regensburg, at Halle: "Commissaries are appointed; will take charge of your long march and you. Be kind, all Christian German Princes; do not hinder them and me." And in a few days farther, still early in February (for the matter is all ready before proclaiming), an actual Prussian Commissary hangs out his announcements and officialities at Donauwörth, old City known to us, within reach of the Salzburg Boundaries; collects, in a week or two, his first lot of Emigrants, near a thousand strong; and fairly takes the road with them.

A long road and a strange: I think, above five hundred miles before we get to Halle, within Prussian land; and then seven hundred more to our place there, in the utmost East. Men, women, infants and hoary grandfathers are here; most of their property sold, — still on ruinous conditions, think of it, your Majesty. Their poor bits of preciosities and heirlooms they have with them; made up in succinct bundles, stowed on ticketed baggage-wains: “some have their own poor “cart and horse, to carry the too old and the too “young, those that cannot walk.” A pilgrimage like that of the Children of Israel: such a pilgrim caravan as was seldom heard of in our Western Countries. Those poor succinct bundles, the making of them up and stowing of them; the pangs of simple hearts, in those remote native valleys; the tears that were not seen, the cries that were addressed to God only: and then at last the actual turning out of the poor caravan, in silently practical condition, staff in hand, no audible complaint heard from it; ready to march; practically marching here: — which of us can think of it without emotion, sad and yet in a sort blessed!

* Copy of it in Mauvillon, February 1732, ii. 311.

Every Emigrant man has four groschen a day (four-pence odd) allowed him for road expenses, every woman three groschen, every child two: and regularity itself, in the shape of Prussian Commissaries, presides over it. Such marching of the Salzburgers; host after host of them, by various routes, from February onwards; above Seven thousand of them this year, and Ten thousand more that gradually followed, — was heard of at all German firesides, and in all European lands.

A phenomenon much filling the general ear and imagination; especially at the first emergence of it. We will give from poor old authentic Fassmann, as if caught up by some sudden photograph-apparatus, a rude but undeniable glimpse or two into the actuality of this business: the reader will in that way sufficiently conceive it for himself.

Glimpse first is of an Emigrant Party arriving, in the cold February days of 1732, at Nördlingen, Protestant Free-Town in Bavaria: Three hundred of them; first section, I think, of those Nine hundred who were packed away unceremoniously by Firmian last winter, and have been wandering about Bavaria, lodging "in Kaufbeuern" and various preliminary Towns, till the Prussian arrangements became definite. Prussian Commissaries are, by this time, got to Donauwörth; but these poor Salzburger are ahead of them, wandering under the voluntary-principle as yet. Nördlingen, in Bavaria, is an old Imperial Free-Town; Protestantism not suppressed there, as it has been all round; scene of some memorable fighting in the Thirty-Years War, especially of a bad defeat to the Swedes and Bernhard of Weimar, the worst they had in the course of that bad business. The Salzburger are in number Three hundred and thirty-one; time, "first days of February 1732, weather very cold and raw." The charitable Protestant Town has been expecting such an advent:

"Two chief Clergymen, and the Schoolmaster and Scholars,
"with some hundreds of citizens and many young people, “went out to meet them; there, in the open field, stood the “Salzburgers, with their wives and their little ones, with their “bullock-carts and baggage-wains,” pilgriming towards unknown parts of the Earth. ““Come in, ye blessed of the ““Lord! Why stand ye without?” said the Parson solemnly, “by way of welcome; and addressed a Discourse to them,” devout and yet human, true every word of it, enough to draw tears from any Fassmann that were there; — Fassmann and we not far from weeping without words. “Thereupon they “ranked themselves two and two, and marched into the “Town,” straight to the Church, I conjecture, Town all out to participate; “and there the two reverend gentlemen succes“sively addressed them again, from appropriate texts: Text “of the first reverend gentleman was, And every one that hath “forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or “wife, or children, or lands, for my name’s sake, shall receive an “*hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life. Text of the “second was, Now the Lord had said unto Abraham, Get thee out “of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, “*unto a land that I will show thee. Excellent texts; well handled, let us hope, — especially with brevity. “After “which the strangers were distributed, some into public-“houses, others taken home by the citizens to lodge.

“Out of the Spital there was distributed to each person, for “the first three days, a half pound of flesh-meat, bread, and a “measure of beer. The remaining days they got in money six “creutzers (two pence) each, and bread. On Sunday, at the “Church-doors there was a collection: no less than eight “hundred gulden” (80*l.*; population, say, three thousand) “for “this object. At Sermon they were put into the central part “of the Church,” all Nördlingen lovingly encompassing them;
“and were taught in two sermons,” texts not given, “What the

* Matthew xix. 29.

 Genesis xli. 1.

"true Church is built of, and then Of true Faith, and what love a Christian ought to have;" Nördlingen copiously shedding tears the while (viele Thränen vergossen), as it well might. "Going to Church, and coming from it, each Landlord walked ahead of his party; party followed two and two. On other days, there was much catechising of them at different parts of the Town;" — orthodox enough, you see, nothing of superstition or fanaticism in the poor people; — "they made a good testimony of their Evangelical truth.

"The Baggage-wagons which they had with them, ten in number, upon which some of their old people sat, were brought into the Town. The Baggage was unloaded, and the packages, Two hundred and eighty-one of them in all" (for Fassmann is Photography itself), "were locked in the Zoll-Haus. Over and above what they got from the Spital, the Church-collection and the Town-chest, Citizens were liberal; daily sent them food, or daily had them by fours and fives to their own houses to meat." And so let them wait for the Prussian Commissary, who is just at hand: "they would not part from one another, these Three hundred and thirty-one," says Fassmann, "though their reunion was but of that accidental nature."*

Glimpse second: not dated; perhaps some ten days later; and a Prussian Commissary with this party:

"On their getting to the Anspach Territory, there was so incredible a joy at the arrival of these exiled Brothers in the Faith (Glaubens-Brüder) that in all places, almost in the smallest hamlets, the bells were set a-tolling; and nothing was heard but a peal of welcome from far and near." Prussian Commissary, when about quitting Anspach, asked leave to pass through Bamberg; Bishop of Bamberg, too orthodox a gentleman, declined; so the Commissary had to go by Nürnberg and Baireuth. Ask not if his welcome was good, in those Protestant places. "At Erlangen, fifteen miles from Nürnberg, where are French Protestants and a Dowager Margravine of Baireuth, — Widow of Wilhelmina's Father-in-law's predecessor (if the reader can count that); daughter of Weissenfels who was for marrying Wilhelmina not long since! — "at Erlangen, the Serene Dowager "snatched up fifty of them into her own House for christian "refection; and Burghers of means had twelve, fifteen and "even eighteen of them, following such example set. Nay "certain French Citizens, prosperous and childless, besieged "the Prussian Commissary to allow them a few Salzburg "children for adoption; especially one Frenchman was extremely urgent and specific: but the Commissary, not having "any order, was obliged to refuse."* These must have been interesting days for the two young Margravines; forwarding Papa's poor Pilgrims in that manner.

* Fassmann, pp. 439-440.

"At Baireuth," other side of Nürnberg, "it was towards "Good Friday when the Pilgrims under their Commissarius "arrived. They were lodged in the Villages about, but came "copiously into the Town; came all in a body, to Church, on "Good Friday; and at coming out, were one and all carried "off to dinner, a very scramble arising among the Townsfolk to "get hold of Pilgrims and dine them. Vast numbers were "carried to the Schloss:" one figures Wilhelmina among them, figures the Hereditary Prince and old Margraf: their treatment there was "beyond belief," says Fassmann; "not "only dinner of the amplest quality and quantity, but much "money added and other gifts." From Baireuth the route is towards Gera and Thüringen, circling the Bamberg Territory:

* Fassmann, p. 441.

readers remember Gera, where the Gera Bond was made? — “At Gera, a commercial gentleman dined the whole party in “his own premises, and his wife gave eight groschen to each “individual of them; other two persons, brothers in the place, “doing the like. One of the poor pilgrim women had been “brought to bed on the journey, a day or two before: the Com- “missarius lodged her in his own inn, for greater safety; “Commissarius returning to his inn, finds she is off, nobody at “first can tell him whither: a lady of quality (vornehme Dame) “has quietly sent her carriage for the poor pilgrim sister, and “has her in the right softest keeping. No end to people’s “kindness: many wept aloud, sobbing out, ‘Is this all the “‘help we can give?’ Commissarius said, ‘There will others “‘come shortly; them also you can help.’”

In this manner march these Pilgrims. “From “Donauwörth, by Anspach, Nürnberg, Baireuth, through “Gera, Zeitz, Weissenfels, to Halle,” where they are on Prussian ground, and within few days of Berlin. Other Towns, not upon the first straight route to Berlin, demand to have a share in these grand things; share is willingly conceded: thus the Pilgrims, what has its obvious advantages, march by a good variety of routes. Through Augsburg, Ulm (instead of Donauwörth), thence to Frankfurt; from Frankfurt some direct to Leipzig; some through Cassel, Hanover, Brunswick, by Halberstadt and Magdeburg instead of Halle. Starting all at Salzburg, landing all at Berlin; their routes spread over the Map of Germany in the intermediate space.

“Weissenfels Town and Duke distinguished themselves by “liberality: especially the Duke did;” — poor old drinking

Duke; very Protestant all these Saxon Princes, except the Apostate or Pseudo-Apostate the Physically Strong, for sad political reasons. "In Weissenfels Town, while the Pilgrim procession walked, a certain rude fellow, flax-dresser by trade, by creed Papist or worse, said floutingly, 'The Archbishop ought to have flung you all into the river, you —!' Upon which a menial servant of the Duke's suddenly broke in upon him in the way of actuality, the whole crowd blazing into flame; and the flaxman would certainly have got irreparable damage, had not the Townguard instantly hooked him away."

April 21st, 1732, the first actual body, a good nine hundred strong,* got to Halle; where they were received with devout jubilee, psalm-singing, spiritual and corporeal refection, as at Nördlingen and the other stages; "Archidiaconus Franke" being prominent in it, — I have no doubt, a connexion of that "chien de Franke," whom Wilhelmina used to know. They were lodged in the Waisenhaus (old Franke's Orphan-house); Official List of them was drawn up here, with the fit specificality; and, after three days, they took the road again for Berlin. Useful Buchholz, then a very little boy, remembers the arrival of a Body of these Salzburgers, not this but a later one in August, which passed through his native Village, Pritzwalk in the Priegnitz: How village and village authorities were all awake, with opened stores and hearts; how his Father, the Village Parson, preached at five in the afternoon. The same Buchholz, coming afterwards to College at

* Buchholz, i. 156.

Halle, had the pleasure of discovering two of the Commissaries, two of the three, who had mainly superintended in this Salzburg Pilgrimage. Let the reader also take a glance at them, as specimens worth notice:

Commissarius First: "Herr von Reck was a nobleman from the Hanover Country; of very great piety; who, after his Commission was done, settled at Halle; and lived there, without servant, in privacy, from the small means he had; — seeking his sole satisfaction in attendance on the Theological and Ascetic College-Lectures, where I used to see him constantly in my student time."

Commissarius Second: "Herr Göbel was a medical man by profession; and had the regular degree of Doctor; but was in no necessity to apply his talents to the gaining of bread. His zeal for religion had moved him to undertake this Commission. Both these gentlemen I have often seen in my youth," but do not tell you what they were like farther; "and both their Christian-names have escaped me."

A third Commissarius was of Preussen, and had religious-literary tendencies. I suppose these Three served gratis; — volunteers; but no doubt under oath, and tied by strict enough Prussian law. Physician, Chaplain, Road-guide, here they are, probably of supreme quality, ready to our hand. *

Buchholz, after "his student time," became a poor Country-Schoolmaster, and then a poor Country-Parson, in his native Altmark. His poor Book is of innocent, clear, faithful nature, with some vein of "unconscious geniality" in it here and there; — a Book by no means so destitute of human worth as some that have superseded it. This was posthumous, this "Newest History," and has a Life of the Author prefixed. He has four previous Volumes on the "Ancient History of Brandenburg," which are not known to me. — About the Year 1745, there were Four poor Schoolmasters in that region (two at Havelberg, one at Seehausen, one at Werben), of extremely studious turn; who, in spite of the Elbe which ran between, used to meet on stated nights, for colloquy, for interchange of Books and the like. One of them, the Werben one, was this Buchholz; another, Seehausen, was the Winckelmann so celebrated in after years. A third, one of the Havelberg pair, "went into Mecklenburg in a year or two, "as Tutor to Karl Ludwig the Prince of Strelitz's children," — whom also mark. For the youngest of these Strelitz children was no other than the actual "Old Queen Charlotte" (ours and George III.'s), just ready for him with her Hornbooks about that time: Let the poor man have what honour he can from that circumstance! "Prince Karl Ludwig," rather a foolish-looking creature, we may fall in with personally by and by.

* Buchholz: Neueste Preussisch-Brandenburgische Geschichte (Berlin, 1775, 2 vols. 4to), i. 155 n.

It was the 30th April 1732, seven weeks and a day since Crown-Prince Friedrich's Betrothal, that this first body of Salzburg Emigrants, nine hundred strong, arrived at Berlin; "four in the afternoon, at the Brandenburg Gate;" Official persons, nay Majesty himself, or perhaps both Majesties, waiting there to receive them. Yes, ye poor footsore mortals, there is the dread King himself; stoutish short figure in blue uniform and white wig, straw-coloured waistcoat, and white gaiters; stands uncommonly firm on his feet; reddish, blue-reddish face, with eyes that pierce through a man: look upon him, and yet live if you are true men. His Majesty's reception of these poor people could not-but be good; nothing now wanting in the formal kind. But better far, in all the essentialities of it, there had not been hitherto, nor was henceforth, the least flaw. This Salzburg Pilgrimage has found for itself, and will find, regulation, guidance, ever a stepping-stone at the needful place; a paved road, so far as human regularity and punctuality could pave one. That is his Majesty's shining merit. "Next Sunday after sermon, "they" (this first lot of Salzburger) "were publicly "catechised in church; and all the world could hear "their pertinent answers, given often in the very Scripture texts, or express words of Luther."

His Majesty more than once took survey of these Pilgrimage Divisions, when they got to Berlin. A pleasant sight, if there were leisure otherwise. On various occasions, too, her Majesty had large parties of them over to Monbijou, to supper there in the fine gardens; and "gave them Bibles," among other gifts, if in want of Bibles through Firmian's industry. Her Majesty was Charity itself, Charity and Grace combined, among these Pilgrims. On one occasion she picked out a handsome young lass among them, and had Painter Pesne over to take her portrait. Handsome lass, by Pesne, in her Tyrolese Hat, shone thenceforth on the walls of Monbijou; and fashion thereupon took up the Tyrolese Hat, "which has been much worn "since by the beautiful part of the Creation," says Buchholz; "but how many changes they have introduced in it no pen can trace."

At Berlin the Commissarius ceased; and there was usually given the Pilgrims a Candidatus Theologiæ, who was to conduct them the rest of the way, and be their Clergyman when once settled. Five hundred long miles still. Some were shipped at Stettin; mostly they marched, stage after stage, — four groschen a day. At the farther end they found all ready; tight cottages, tillable fields, all implements furnished, and stock, — even to "Federvieh," or Chanticleer with a modicum of Hens. Old neighbours, and such as liked each other, were put together: fields grew green again, desolate scrubs and scrags yielding to grass and corn. Wooden clocks even came to view, — for Berchtesgaden neighbours also emigrated; and Swiss came, and Bavarians and French: — and old trades were revived in those new localities.

Something beautifully real-idyllic in all this, surely: — Yet do not fancy that it all went on like clockwork; that there were not jarrings at every step, as is the way in things real. Of the Prussian Minister chiefly concerned in settling this new Colony I have heard one saying, forced out of him in some pressure: "There "must be somebody for a scolding-stock and scape-goat; I will be it, then!" And then the Salzburg Officials, what a humour they were in! No Letters allowed from those poor Emigrants; the wickedest rumours circulated about them: "All cut to pieces by inroad of the Poles;" "Pressed for soldiers by the Prussian drill-sergeant;" "All flung into the Lakes and stagnant waters there; drowned to the last individual," and so on. Truth nevertheless did slowly pierce through. And the "Grosse Wirth," our idyllic-real Friedrich Wilhelm, was wanting in nothing. Lists of their unjust losses in Salzburg were, on his Majesty's order, made out and authenticated, by the many who had suffered in that way there, — forced to sell at a day's notice, and the like: — with these his Majesty was diligent in the Imperial Court; and did get what human industry could of compensation, a part but not the whole. Contradictory noises had to abate. In the end, sound purpose, built on fact and the Laws of Nature, carried it; lies, vituperations, rumour and delusion sank to zero; and the true result remained. In 1738, the Salzburg Emigrant Community in Preussen held, in all their Churches, a Day of Thanksgiving; and admitted piously that Heaven's blessing, of a truth, had been upon this King and them. There we leave them, a useful solid population ever since in those parts; increased by this time we know not how many fold.

It cost Friedrich Wilhelm enormous sums, say the Old Histories; probably "ten tons of gold." — that is to say, ten Hundred-thousand Thalers; almost 150,000*l.*, no less! But he lived to see it amply repaid, even in his own time; how much more amply since; — being a man skilful in investments to a high degree indeed.

Fancy 150,000*l.* invested there, in the Bank of Nature herself; and a Hundred-millions invested, say at Balaclava, in the Bank of Newspaper rumour: and the respective rates of interest they will yield, a million years hence! This was the most idyllic of Friedrich Wilhelm's feats, and a very real one the while.

We have only to add or repeat, that Salzburgers to the number of about 7,000 souls arrived at their place this first year; and in the year or two following, less noted by the public, but faring steadily forward upon their four groschen a day, 10,000 more. Friedrich Wilhelm would have gladly taken the whole; "but "George II. took a certain number," say the Prussian Books (George II., or pious Trustees instead of him), "and settled them at Ebenezer in Virginia," — read, Ebenezer in Georgia, where General Oglethorpe was busy founding a Colony.* There at Ebenezer I calculate they might go ahead, too, after the questionable fashion of that country, and increase and swell; — but have never heard of them since.

Salzburg Emigration was a very real transaction on Friedrich Wilhelm's part; but it proved idyllic too, and made a great impression on the German mind. Readers know of a Book called Hermann and Dorothea? It is written by the great Goethe, and still worth reading. The great Goethe had heard, when still very little, much talk among the elders about this Salzburg Pilgrimage; and how strange a thing it was, twenty years ago and more.* In middle life he threw it into Hexameters, into the region of the air; and did that unreal Shadow of it; a pleasant work in its way, since he was not inclined for more.

* Petition to Parliament, 10th (21st) May 1783, by Oglethorpe and his Trustees, for 100,000 l. to carry over these Salzburgers; which was granted: Tindal's Rapin (London, 1769), xx. 184.

* 1749 was Goethe's birth-year.

CHAPTER IV.

PRUSSIAN MAJESTY VISITS THE KAISER.

MAJESTY seeing all these matters well in train, — Salzburgers under way, Crown-Prince betrothed according to his Majesty's and the Kaiser's (not to her Majesty's, and high-flying little George of England my Brother the Comedian's) mind and will, — begins to think seriously of another enterprise, half business half pleasure, which has been hovering in his mind for some time. "Visit to my Daughter at Baireuth," he calls it publicly; but it means intrinsically Excursion into Böhmen, to have a word with the Kaiser, and see his Imperial Majesty in the body for once. Too remarkable a thing to be omitted by us here.

Crown-Prince does not accompany on this occasion; Crown-Prince is with his Regiment all this while; busy minding his own affairs in the Ruppín quarter; — only hears, with more or less interest, of these Salzburg-Pilgrim movements, of this Excursion into Böhmen. Here are certain scraps of Letters; which, if once made legible, will assist readers to conceive his situation and employments there. Letters otherwise of no importance; but worth reading on that score. The first (or rather first three, which we huddle into one) is from "Nauen," few miles off Ruppín; where one of our Battalions lies; requiring frequent visits there:

1. To Grumkow, at Berlin (From the Crown-Prince).

"Nauen, 25th April 1782.

"Monsieur my dearest Friend, — I send you a big mass of "papers, which a certain gentleman named Plötz has trans"mitted me. In faith, I know not in the least what it is: I "pray you present it" (to his Majesty, or in the proper quarter),
"and make me rid of it.

"Tomorrow I go to Potsdam" (a drive of forty miles southward), "to see the exercise, and if we do it here according to "pattern. Neue Besen kehren gut" (New brooms sweep clean, in German); "I shall have to illustrate my new character" of "Colonel; and show that I am ein tüchtiger Officier (a right "Officer). Be what I may, I shall to you always be," &c. &c.

Nauen, 7th May 1782. " * * Thousand thanks for informing "me how everything goes on in the world. Things far from "agreeable, those leagues" (imaginary, in Tobacco-Parliament) "suspected to be forming against our House! But "if the Kaiser don't abandon us;" "if God second the valour
"of 80,000 men resolved to spend their life," — "let us hope
"there will nothing bad happen.

"Meanwhile, till events arrive, I make a pretty stir here
"(me trémousse ici d'importance), to bring my Regiment to its "requisite perfection; and I hope I shall succeed. The other "day I drank your dear health, Monsieur; and I wait only the "news from my Cattlestall that the Calf I am fattening there "is ready for sending to you. I unite Mars and Housekeeping,
"you see. Send me your Secretary's name, that I may ad"dress your Letters that way," — our Correspondence needing to be secret in certain quarters. * * "With a" truly infinite esteem:

"FRÉDÉRIC."

Nauen, 10th May 1732. "You will see by this that I am "exact to follow your instruction; and that the Schulz of "Tremmen" (Village in the Brandenburg quarter, with a "Schulz or Mayor to be depended on) "becomes for the present
"the mainspring of our correspondence. I return you all the "things (pièces) you had the goodness to communicate to me, "— except Charles Douze,* which attaches me infinitely. The "particulars hitherto unknown which he reports; the greatness
"of that Prince's actions, and the perverse singularity (bizar- "rerie) of his fortune: all this, joined to the lively, brilliant
"and charming way the Author has of telling it, renders this "Book interesting to the supreme degree. * * * I send you a "fragment of my correspondence with the most illustrious
"Sieur Crochet," some French Envoy or Emissary, I conclude:
"you perceive we go on very sweetly together, and are in a "high strain. I am sorry I burnt one of his Letters, wherein
"he assured me he would in the Versailles Antechamber itself
"speak of me to the King, and that my name had actually "been mentioned at the King's Levee. It certainly is not my "ambition to choose this illustrious mortal to publish my "renown; on the contrary, I should think it soiled by such a "mouth, and prostituted if he were the publisher. But enough "of the Crochet: the kindest thing we can do for so con"temptible an object is to say nothing of him at all." — * *

Letter Second is to Jägermeister Hacke, Captain of the Rotsdam Guard; who stands in great nearness to the King's Majesty; and, in fact, is fast becoming his factotum in Army-details. We, with the Duke of Lorraine and Majesty in person, saw his marriage to the Excellency Creutz's Fräulein Daughter not long since;

* Voltaire's new Book; lately come out, "Bâle, 1731."

 Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 49, 51.

who we trust has made him happy; — rich he is at any rate, and will be Adjutant-General before long: powerful in such intricacies as this that the Prince has fallen into.

The Letter has its obscurities; turns earnestly on Recruits tall and short; nor have idle Editors helped us, by the least hint, towards “reading” it with more than the eyes. Old Dessauer at this time is Commandant at Magdeburg; Buddenbrock, now passing by Ruppín, we know for a high old General, fit to carry messages from Majesty: we can guess, that the flattering Dessauer has sent his Majesty Five gigantic men from the Magdeburg regiments, and that Friedrich is ordered to hustle out Thirty of insignificant stature from his own, by way of counter-gift to the Dessauer; — which Friedrich does instantly, but cannot, for his life, see how (being totally cashless) he is to replace them with better, or replace them at all!

2. To Captain Hacke, of the Potsdam Guard.

“Ruppín, 15th July 1732.

“Mein Gott, what a piece of news Buddenbrock has brought me! I am to get nothing out of Brandenburg, my dear Hacke? Thirty men I had to sift out of my company in “consequence” (of Buddenbrock’s order); “and where am I now to get other thirty? I would gladly give the King tall men, as the Dessauer at Magdeburg does: but I have no money; and I don’t get, or set up for getting, six men for “one” (thirty short for five tall), “as he does. So true is that Scripture: To him that hath shall be given; and from him “that hath not shall be taken away even that he hath.

“Small art, that the Prince of Dessau’s and the Magdeburg ‘Regiments are fine, when they have money at command, and ‘thirty men gratis over and above! I, poor devil, have ‘nothing; nor shall have, all my days. Prithee, dear Hacke ‘(bitte Ihn, lieber Hacke), think of all that: and if I have no ‘money allowed, I must bring Asmus* alone as Recruit next ‘year; and my Regiment will to a certainty be rubbish
‘(Kroop). Once I had learned a German Proverb, —

“Versprechen und halten (To promise and to keep)

Ziemt wohl Jungen und Alten (Is pretty for young and for old)!”

“I depend alone on you (Ihn), dear Hacke; unless you help,
‘there is a bad outlook. Today I have knocked again” written to Papa for money); “and if that does not help, it is ‘over. If I could get any money to borrow, it would do; but ‘I need not think of that. Help me then, dear Hacke! I ‘assure you I will ever remember it; who, at all times, am my ‘dear Herr Captain’s devoted (ganz ergebener) servant and ‘friend, — FRIDERICH.”

To which add only this Note, two days later, to Seckendorf; indicating that the process of “borrowing” was already, in some form, begun, — process which will have to continue, and to develop itself; — and that his Majesty, as Seckendorf well knows, is resolved upon his Bohemian journey:

3. To the General Feldzeugmeister Graf von Seckendorf.

“Ruppin, 17th July 1732.

“My very dear General, — I have written to the King, that ‘I owed you 2,125 thalers for the Recruits; of which he says

* Recruit unknown to me.

 In German: Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 177.

"there are 600 paid: there remain, therefore, 1,525, which he "will pay you directly.

"The King is going to Prague: I shall not be of the party"
(as you will). "To say truth, I am not very sorry; for it "would infallibly give rise to foolish rumours in the world. At "the same time, I should have much wished to see the Emperor,
"Empress, and Prince of Lorraine, for whom I have a quite "particular esteem. I beg you, Monsieur, to assure him of it;
"— and to assure yourself that I shall always be, — with a "great deal of consideration, Monsieur, mon très-cher Gé-
"néral," &c.

"FRÉDÉRIC."

And now for the Bohemian Journey, "Visit at Kladrup" as they call it; — Ruppín being left in this assiduous and wholesome, if rather hampered condition.

Kaiser Karl and his Empress, in this summer of 1732, were at Karlsbad, taking the waters for a few weeks. Friedrich Wilhelm, who had long, for various reasons, wished to see his Kaiser face to face, thought this would be a good opportunity. The Kaiser himself, knowing how it stood with the Jülich-and-Berg and other questions, was not anxious for such an interview:
still less were his official people; among whom the very ceremonial for such a thing was matter of abstruse difficulty. Seckendorf accordingly had been instructed to hunt wide, and throw in discouragements, so far as possible; — which he did, but without effect. Friedrich Wilhelm had set his heart upon the thing; wished to behold for once a Head of the Holy Roman Empire, and Supreme of Christendom; — also to see a little, with his own eyes, into certain matters Imperial.

And so, since an express visit to Karlsbad might give rise to newspaper rumours, and will not suit, it is settled, There shall be an accidental intersection of routes, as the Kaiser travels homeward, — say in some quiet Bohemian Schloss or Hunting seat of the Kaiser's own, whither the King may come incognito; and thus, with a minimum of noise, may the needful passage of hospitality be done. Easy all of this: only the Vienna Ministers are dreadfully in doubt about the ceremonial, Whether the Imperial hand can be given (I forget if for kissing or for shaking)? — nay at last they manfully declare that it cannot be given; and wish his Prussian Majesty to understand that it must be refused.* “Res summæ consequentiæ,” say they; and shake solemnly their big wigs. — Nonsense (Narrenpossen)! answers the Prussian Majesty: You, Seckendorf, settle about quarters, reasonable food, reasonable lodging; and I will do the ceremonial.

Seckendorf, — worth glancing into, for biographical purposes, in this place, — has written to his Court: That, as to the victual department, his Majesty goes upon good common meat; flesh, to which may be added all manner of river-fish and crabs: sound old Rhenish is his drink, with supplements of brown and of white beer. Dinner-table to be spread always in some airy place, gardenhouse, tent, big clean barn, — Majesty likes air, of all things; — will sleep, too, in a clean barn or garden-house: better anything than being stifled, thinks his Majesty. Who, for the rest, does not like mounting stairs.* These are the regulations; and we need not doubt they were complied with.

* Förster, i. 328.

Sunday, 27th July 1732, accordingly, his Majesty, with five or six carriages, quits Berlin, before the sun is up, as is his wont: eastward, by the road for Frankfurt on the Oder; "intends to look at Schulenburg's regiment," which lies in those parts, — Schulenburg's regiment for one thing: the rest is secret from the profane vulgar. Schulenburg's regiment (drawn up for Church, I should suppose) is soon looked at; Schulenburg himself, by preappointment, joins the travelling party, which now consists of the King and Eight: — known figures, seven, Buddenbrock, Schulenburg, Waldau, Derschau, Seckendorf, Grumkow, Captain Hacke of the Potsdam Guard; and for eighth the Dutch Ambassador, Ginkel, an accomplished knowing kind of man, whom also my readers have occasionally seen. Their conversation, road-colloquy, could it interest any modern reader? It has gone all to dusk; we can know only that it was human, solid, for most part, and had much tobacco intermingled. They were all of the Calvinistic persuasion, of the military profession; knew that life is very serious, that speech without cause is much to be avoided. They travelled swiftly, dined in airy places: they are a fact. they and their summer dustcloud there, whirling through the vacancy of that dim Time; and have an interest for us, though an unimportant one.

* Seckendorf's Report (in Förster, i. 330).

The first night they got to Grünberg; a pleasant Town, of vineyards and of looms, across the Silesian frontier. They are now turning more southeastward; they sleep here, in the Kaiser's territory, welcomed by some Official persons; who signify that the overjoyed Imperial Majesty has, as was extremely natural, paid the bill everywhere. On the morrow, before the shuttles awaken, Friedrich Wilhelm is gone again; towards the Glogau region, intending for Liegnitz that night. Coursing rapidly through the green Silesian Lowlands, blue Giant Mountains (Riesengebirge) beginning to rise on the south and left. Dines, at noon, under a splendid tent, in a country place called Polkwitz,* with country Nobility (sorrow on them, and yet thanks to them) come to do reverence. At night he gets to Liegnitz.

Here is Liegnitz, then. Here are the Katzbach and the Blackwater (Schwarzwasser), famed in war, your Majesty; here they coalesce; gray ashlar houses (not without inhabitants unknown to us) looking on. Here are the venerable walls and streets of Liegnitz; and the Castle which defied Baty Khan and his Tartars, five hundred years ago. — Oh, your Majesty, this Liegnitz, with its princely Castle, and wide rich Territory, the bulk of the Silesian Lowland, whose is it if right

* "Balkowitz," say Pöllnitz (ii. 407) and Förster; which is not the correct name.

 1241, the Invasion, and Battle here, of this unexpected Barbarian.

were done? Hm, his Majesty knows full well; in Seckendorf's presence, and going on such an errand, we must not speak of certain things. But the undisputed truth is, Duke Friedrich II., come of the Sovereign Piasts, made that Erbverbrüderung, and his Grandson's Grandson died childless: so the heirship fell to us, as the biggest wig in the most benighted Chancery would have to grant; — only the Kaiser will not, never would; the Kaiser plants his armed self on Schlesien, and will hear no pleading. Jägerndorf too, which we purchased with our own money — No more of that; it is too miserable! Very impossible too, while we have Berg and Jülich in the wind! —

At Liegnitz, Friedrich Wilhelm "reviews the garrison, cavalry and infantry," before starting; then off for Glatz, some sixty miles before we can dine. The goal is towards Bohemia, all this while; and his Majesty, had he liked the mountain-passes, and unlevel ways of the Giant Mountains, might have found a shorter road and a much more picturesque one. Road abounding in gloomy valleys, intricate rock-labyrinths, haunts of Sprite Rübezahl, sources of the Elbe and I know not what. Majesty likes level roads, and interesting rock-labyrinths built by man rather than by Nature. Majesty makes a wide sweep round to the east of all that; leaves the Giant Mountains, and their intricacies, as a blue Sierra far on his left, — had rather see Glatz Fortress than the caverns of the Elbe; and will cross into Bohemia, where the Hills are fallen lowest. At Glatz during dinner, numerous Nobilities are again in waiting. Glatz in Jägerndorf region: Jägerndorf, which we purchased with our own money, is and remains ours, in spite of the mishaps of the Thirty-Years War; — ours, the merkest Chancery would be obliged to say, from under the immensest wig! Patience, your Majesty; Time rings roses! —

From Glatz, after viewing the works, drilling the guard a little, not to speak of dining, and despatching the Nobilities, his Majesty takes the road again; turns now abruptly westward, across the Hills at their lowest point; into Bohemia, which is close at hand. Lewin, I should say, these are the Bohemian villages, with their dominant of Czechs; not a prosperous population to look upon: but it is the Kaiser's own Kingdom; "King of Bohemia" one of his Titles ever since Sigismund Super-rammaticam's time. And here now, at the meeting of the waters (Elbe one of them, a brawling mountain-ream) is Jaromierz, respectable little Town, with an Imperial Officiality in it, — where the Official Gentlemen meet us all in gala, "Thrice welcome to this kingdom, your Majesty!" — and signify that they are to wait upon us henceforth, while we do the Kaiser's kingdom of Bohemia that honour.

It is Tuesday night, 29th July, this first night in Bohemia. The Official Gentlemen lead his Majesty to superb rooms, new-hung with crimson velvet, and the gold fringes and tresses, — very grand indeed; but probably not so airy as we wish. "This is the way the Kaiser lodges in his journeys; and your Majesty to be served like him." The goal of our journey is now within few miles. Wednesday, 30th July 1732, his Majesty awakens again, within these crimson-velvet hangings with the gold tresses and fringes, not so airy as he could wish; despatches Grumkow to the Kaiser, who is not many miles off, to signify what honour we would do ourselves.

It was on Saturday last that the Kaiser and Kaiserinn, returning from Karlsbad, illuminated Prag with their serene presence; "attended high-mass, vespers," and a good deal of other worship, as the meagre old Newspapers report for us, on that and the Sunday following. And then "on Monday, at six in the morning," both the Majesties left Prag, for a place called Chlumetz, southwestward thirty miles off, in the Elbe region, where they have a pretty Hunting Castle; Kaiser intending "sylvan sport for a few days," says the old rag of a Newspaper, "and then to return to Prag." It is here that Grumkow, after a pleasant morning's drive of thirty miles with the sun on his back, finds Kaiser Karl VI.; and makes his announcements, and diplomatic inquiries what next.

Had Friedrich Wilhelm been in Potsdam or Wusterhausen, and heard that Kaiser Karl was within thirty miles of him, Friedrich Wilhelm would have cried, with open arms, Come, come! But the Imperial Majesty is otherwise hampered; has his rhadamanthine Aulic Counsellors, in vast amplitude of wig, sternly engaged in study of the etiquettes: they have settled that the meeting cannot be in Chlumetz; lest it might lead to night's lodgings, and to intricacies. "Let it be at Kladrup," say the Ample-wigged; Kladrup, an Imperial Stud, or Horse-Farm, half-a-dozen miles from this; where there is room for nothing more than dinner. There let the meeting be, tomorrow at a set hour; and, in the mean time, we will take precautions for the etiquettes. So it is settled, and Grumkow returns with the decision in a complimentary form.

Through Königgrätz, down the right bank of the Upper Elbe, on the morrow morning, Thursday, 31st July 1732, Friedrich Wilhelm rushes on towards Kladrup; finds that little village, with the Horse Edifices, looking snug enough in the valley of Elbe; — alights, welcomed by Prince Eugenio von Savoye, with word that the Kaiser is not come, but steadily expected soon. Prince Eugenio von Savoye: Ach Gott, it is another thing, your Highness, than when we met in the Flanders Wars, long since; — at Malplaquet that morning, when your Highness had been to Brussels, visiting your Lady Mother in case of the worst! Slightly grayer your Highness is grown; I too am nothing like so nimble; the great Duke, poor man, is dead! — Prince Eugenio von Savoye, we need not doubt, took snuff, and answered in a sprightly appropriate manner.

Kladrup is a Country House as well as a Horse Farm: a square court is the interior, as I gather, the Horse-buildings at a reverent distance forming the fourth side. In the centre of this court, — see what a contrivance the Aulic Councillors have hit upon, — there is a wooden stand built, with three staircases leading up to it, one for each person, and three galleries leading off from it into suites of rooms: no question of precedence here, where each of you has his own staircase and own gallery to his apartment! Friedrich Wilhelm looks down like a rhinoceros on all those cobwebberies. No sooner are the Kaiser's carriage-wheels heard within the court, than Friedrich Wilhelm rushes down, by what staircase is readiest; forward to the very carriage-door; and flings his arms about the Kaiser, embracing and embraced, like mere human friends glad to see one another. On these terms, they mount their wooden-stand, Majesty of Prussia, Kaiser, Kaiserinn, each by his own staircase; see, for a space of two hours, the Kaiser's foals and horses led about, — which at least fills up any gap in conversation that may threaten to occur. The Kaiser, a little man of high and humane air, is not bright in talk; the Empress, a Brunswick Princess of fine carriage, Granddaughter of old Anton Ulrich who wrote the Novels, if likewise of mute humour in public life: but old Nord-Teutschland, cradle of one's existence; Brunswick reminiscences; news of your Imperial Majesty's serene Father, serene Sister, Brother-in-Law the Feldmarschall, and Insipid Niece whom we have had the satisfaction to betroth lately, — furnish small-talk where needful.

Dinner being near, you go by your own gallery to dress. From the drawing-room, Friedrich Wilhelm leads out the Kaiserinn; the Kaiser, as Head of the world, walks first, though without any lady. How they drank the healths, gave and received the ewers nd towels, is written duly in the old Books, but was s indifferent to Friedrich Wilhelm as it is to us; what heir conversation was, let no man presume to ask. Dullish, re should apprehend, — and perhaps better lost to us? but where there are tongues, there are topics: the Loom f Time wags always, and with it the tongues of men. Kaiser and Kaiserinn have both been in Karlsbad ately; Kaiser and Kaiserinn both have sailed to Spain, a old days, and been in sieges and things memorable: riedrich Wilhelm, solid Squire Western of the North, oes not want for topics, and talks as a solid rustic entleman will. Native politeness he knows on ccasion; to etiquette, so far as concerns his own retensions, he feels callous altogether, — dimly ensible that the Eighteenth Century is setting in, and hat solid musketeers and not goldsticks are now the mportant thing. “I felt mad to see him so humiliate himself,” said Grumkow afterwards to Wilhelmina, penrageais dans ma peau:” why not?

Dinner lasted two hours; the Empress rising, Friedrich Wilhelm leads her to her room; then retires to his wn, and “in a quarter of an hour” is visited there by he Kaiser; “who conducts him,” in so many minutes xact by the watch, “back to the Empress,” — for a ip of coffee, as one hopes; which may wind up the nterview well. The sun is still a good space from etting, when Friedrich Wilhelm, after cordial adieus, eglectful of etiquette, is rolling rapidly towards Nim-urg, thirty miles off on the Prag Highway; and Kaiser Karl with his Spouse move deliberately towards Chlumetz to hunt again. In Nimburg Friedrich Wilhelm sleeps, that night; — Imperial Majesties, in a much-tumbled world, of wild horses, ceremonial ewers, and Eugenios of Savoy and Malplaquet, probably peopling his dreams. If it please Heaven, there may be another private meeting, a day or two hence.

Nimburg, ah your Majesty, Son Fritz will have a night in Nimburg too; — riding slowly thither amid the wrecks of Kolin Battle, not to sleep well; — but that happily is hidden from your Majesty. Kolin, Ozaslau (Chotusitz), Elbe Teinitz, — here in this Kladrup region, your Majesty is driving amid poor Villages which will be very famous by and by. And Prag itself will be doubly famed in war, if your Majesty knew it, and the Ziscaberg be of bloodier memory than the Weissenberg itself! — His Majesty, the morrow's sun having risen upon Nimburg, rolls into Prag successfully about eleven A. M., Hill of Zisca not disturbing him; goes to the Klein-Seite Quarter, where an Aulic Councillor with fine Palace is ready; all the cannon thundering from the walls at his Majesty's advent; and Prince Eugenio, the ever-present, being there to receive his Majesty, — and in fact to invite him to dinner this day at half-past twelve. It is Friday, 1st of August 1732.

By a singular chance, there is preserved for us in Fassmann's Book, what we may call an Excerpt from the old Morning Post of Prag, bringing that extinct Day into clear light again; recalling the vanished Dinner-Party from the realms of Hades, as a thing that once actually was. The List of the Dinner-guests is given complete; vanished ghosts, whom, in studying the old History-Books, you can, with a kind of interest, fish up into visibility at will. There is Prince Eugenio von Savoye at the bottom of the table, in the Thurn-and-Taxis Palace where he lodges; there bodily, the little man, in gold-laced coat of unknown cut; the eyes and the temper bright and rapid, as usual, or more; nose not unprovided with snuff, and lips in consequence rather open. Be seated, your Majesty, high gentlemen all.

A big chair of state stands for his Majesty, at the upper end of the table: his Majesty will none of it; sits down close by Prince Eugene at the very bottom, and opposite Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, whom we had at Berlin lately, a General of note in the Turkish and other wars: here probably there will be better talk; and the big chair may preside over us in vacancy. Which it does. Prince Alexander, Imperial General against the Turks, and Heir-Apparent of Würtemberg withal, can speak of many things, — hardly much of his serene Cousin the reigning Duke; whose health is in a too interesting state, the good though unlucky man. Of the Grävenitz sitting now in limbo, or travelling about disowned, toujours un lavement à ses trousses, let there be deep silence. But the Prince Alexander can answer abundantly on other heads. He comes to his inheritance a few months hence; actual reigning Duke, the poor serene Cousin having died: and perhaps we shall meet him transiently again.

He is Ancestor of the Czars of Russia, this Prince Alexander, who is now dining here in the body, along with Friedrich Wilhelm and Prince Eugene: Paul of Russia, unbeautiful Paul, married the second time, from Mümpelgard (what the French call Montbeillard, in Alsace), a serene Granddaughter of his, from whom come the Czars, — thanks to her or not. Prince Alexander is Ancestor withal of our present "Kings of Würtemberg," if that mean anything: Father (what will mean something) to the serene Duke, still in swaddling-clothes,* who will be Son-in-law to Princess Wilhelmina of Baireuth (could your Majesty foresee it); and will do strange pranks in the world, upon Poet Schiller and others. Him too, and Brothers of his, were they born and become of size, we shall meet. A noticeable man, and not without sense, this Prince Alexander; who is now of a surety eating with us, — as we find by the extinct Morning Post in Fassmann's old Book.

Of the other eating figures, Stahrenbergs, Sternbergs, Kinsky Ambassador to England, Kinsky Ambassador to France, high Austrian dignitaries, we shall say nothing: — who would listen to us? Hardly can the Hof-Kanzler Count von Sinzendorf, supreme of Aulic men, who holds the rudder of Austrian State-Policy, and probably feels himself loaded with importance beyond most mortals now eating here or elsewhere, — gain the smallest recognition from oblivious

* Born, 31st January 1732; Karl Eugen the name of him (Michaelis, iii. 450).

English readers of our time. It is certain he eats here on this occasion; and to his Majesty he does not want for importance. His Majesty, intent on Jülich and Berg and other high matters, spends many hours next day, in earnest private dialogue with him. We mention farther, with satisfaction, that Grumkow and Ordnance-Master Seckendorf are both on the list, and all our Prussian party, down to Hacke of the Potsdam grenadiers, friend Schulenburg visibly eating among the others. Also that the dinner was glorious (herrlich), and ended about five.* After which his Majesty went to two evening parties, of a high order, in the Hradschin Quarter or elsewhere; cards in the one (unless you liked to dance, or grin idle talk from you), and supper in the other.

His Majesty amused himself for four other days in Prag, interspersing long earnest dialogues with Sinzen-dorf, with whom he spent the greater part of Saturday, — results as to Jülich and Berg of a rather cloudy nature. On Saturday came the Kaiser, too, and Kaiserinn to their high House, the Schloss in Prag; and there occurred, in the incognito form, “as if by accident,” three visits or counter-visits, two of them of some length. The King went dashing about; saw, deliberately or in glimpses, all manner of things, — from “the Military Hospital” to “the Tongue of St. Nepomuk” again. Nepomuk, an imaginary Saint of those parts; pitched into the Moldau, as is fancied and fabled, by wicked King Wenzel (King and Deposed-Kaiser, whom we have heard of), for speaking and refusing to speak; Nepomuk is now become the Patron of Bridges, in consequence; stands there in bronze on the Bridge of Prag; and still shows a dried Tongue in the world:* this latter, we expressly find, his Majesty saw.

* Fassmann, p. 474.

 Pöllnitz, II. 411.

On Sunday, his Majesty, nothing of a straitlaced man, attended divine or quasi-divine worship in the Cathedral Church, — where high Prince Bishops delivered palliums, did histrionisms; “manifested the absurditāt of Papistry” more or less. Coming out of the Church, he was induced to step in and see the rooms of the Schloss, or Imperial Palace. In one of the rooms, as if by accident, the Kaiser was found lounging: “Extremely delighted to see your Majesty!” — and they had the first of their long or considerable dialogues together; purport has not transpired. The second considerable dialogue was on the morrow, when Imperial Majesty, as if by accident, found himself in the Count-Nostitz Palace, where Friedrich Wilhelm lodges. Delighted to be so fortunate again! Hope your Majesty likes Prag? Eternal friendship, Oh ja: — and as to Jülich and Berg? Particulars have not transpired.

Prag is a place full of sights: his Majesty, dashing about in all quarters, has a busy time; affairs of state (Jülich and Berg principally) alternating with what we now call the lions. Zisca's drum, for instance, in the

* Die Legende vom heiligen Johann von Nepomuk, von D. Otto Abel (Berlin, 1855); an acute bit of Historical Criticism.

Arsenal here? Would your Majesty wish to see Zisca's own skin, which he bequeathed to be a drum when he had done with it? "Narrenpossen!" — for indeed the thing is fabulous, though in character with Zisca. Or the Council-Chamber window, out of which "the Three Prag Projectiles fell into the Night of things," as a modern Historian expresses it? Three Official Gentlemen, flung out one morning,* 70 feet, but fell on "sewerage," and did not die, but set the whole world on fire? That is too certain, as his Majesty knows: that brought the crowning of the Winter-King, Battle of the Weissenberg, Thirty-Years War; and lost us Jägerndorf and much else.

Or Wallenstein's Palace, — did your Majesty look at that? A thing worth glancing at, on the score of History and even of Natural-History. That rugged son of steel and gunpowder could not endure the least noise in his sleeping-room or even sitting-room, — a difficulty in the soldiering way of life; — and had, if I remember, one hundred and thirty houses torn away in Prag, and sentries posted all round in the distance, to secure silence for his much-meditating indignant soul. And yonder is the Weissenberg, conspicuous in the western suburban region: and here in the eastern, close by, is the Ziscaberg; — O Heaven, your Majesty, on this Zisca-Hill will be a new "Battle of Prag," which will throw the Weissenberg into eclipse; and there is awful fighting coming on in these parts again! —

* 13th (23d) May 1618 (Köhler, p. 507).

The third of the considerable dialogues in Prag was on this same Monday night; when his Majesty went to wait upon the Kaiserinn, and the Kaiser soon accidentally joined them. Precious gracious words passed; — on Berg and Jülich nothing particular, that we hear; — and the High Personages, with assurances of everlasting friendship, said adieu; and met no more in this world. On his toilet-table Friedrich Wilhelm found a gold Tobacco-box, sent by the highest Lady extant; gold Tobacco-box, item gold Tobacco-stopper or Pipe-picker: such the parting gifts of her Imperial Majesty. Very precious indeed, and grateful to the honest heart; — yet testifying too (as was afterwards suggested to the royal mind) what these high people think of a rustic Orson King; and how they fling their nose into the air over his Tabagies and him.

On the morrow morning early, Friedrich Wilhelm rolls away again homewards, by Karlsbad, by Baireuth; all the cannon of Prag saying thrice, Good speed to him. “He has had a glorious time,” said the Berlin Court-lady to Queen Sophie one evening; “no end of “kindness from the Imperial Majesties: but has he “brought Berg and Jülich in his pocket?” — Alas, not a fragment of them; nor of any solid thing whatever, except it be the gold Tobacco-box; and the confirmation of our Claims on East Friesland (cheap liberty to let us vindicate them if we can), if you reckon that a solid thing. These two Imperial gifts, such as they are, he has consciously brought back with him; — and perhaps, though as yet unconsciously a third gift, of much more value, once it is developed into clearness: some dim trace of insight into the no-meaning of these high people; and how they consider us as mere Orsons, and wild Bisons, whom they will do the honour to consume as provision, if we behave well!

The great King Friedrich, now Crown-Prince at Ruppin, writing of this Journey long afterwards, — hastily, incorrectly, as his wont is, in regard to all manner of minute outward particulars; and somewhat maltreating, or at least misplacing, even the inward meaning, which was well known to him without investigation, but which he is at no trouble to date for himself, and has dated at random, — says, in his thin rapid way, with much polished bitterness:

“His” (King Friedrich Wilhelm’s) “experience on this occasion served to prove that good-faith and the virtues, so contrary to the corruption of the age, do not succeed in it. Politicians have banished sincerity (la candeur) into private life: they look upon themselves as raised quite above the laws which they enjoin on other people; and give way without reserve to the dictates of their own depraved mind.

“The guaranty of Jülich and Berg, which Seckendorf had formally promised in the name of the Emperor, went off in smoke; and the Imperial Ministers were in a disposition so opposed to Prussia, the King saw clearly” (not for some years yet) “that if there was a Court in Europe intending to cross his interests, it was certainly that of Vienna. This Visit of his to the Emperor was like that of Solon to Croesus” (Solon not recognisable, in the grenadier costume, amid the tobacco-smoke, and dim accompaniments!) — “and he returned to Berlin, rich still in his own virtue. The most “punctilious censors could find no fault in his conduct, except “a probity carried to excess. The Interview ended as those “of Kings often do: it cooled” (not for some time yet), “or to “say better, it extinguished the friendship there had been “between the two Courts. Friedrich Wilhelm left Prag full “of contempt” (dimly, altogether unconsciously, tending to have some contempt, and in the end to be full of it) “for the “deceitfulness and pride of the Imperial Court: and the Em“peror’s Ministers disdained a Sovereign who looked without “interest on frivolous ceremonials and precedences. Him they “considered too ambitious in aiming at the Berg and Jülich “succession: them he regarded” (came to regard) “as a pack

“of knaves, who had broken their word, and were not punished “for it.”

Very bitter, your Majesty; and, in all but the dates, true enough. But what a drop of concentrated absynth follows next, by way of finish, — which might itself have corrected the dating!

“In spite of so many subjects of discontent, the King “wedded his Eldest Son” (my not too fortunate self), “out of “complaisance to the Vienna Court, with a Princess of “Brunswick-Bevern, Niece to the Empress:” — bitter fact; necessitating change of date in the paragraphs just written.*

Friedrich Wilhelm, good soul, cherishes the Imperial gifts, Tobacco-box included; — claps the Arms of East-Friesland on his escutcheon; will take possession of Friesland, if the present Dûke die heirless, let George of England say what he will. And so he rolls

* Œuvres de Frédéric (Mémoires de Brandebourg), i. 162, 163.

omeward, by way of Baireuth. He staid but a short while in Karlsbad; has warned his Wilhelmina that he will be at Baireuth on the 9th of the month.*

Wilhelmina is very poorly; "near her time," as wives say; rusticating in "the Hermitage," a Country-house in the vicinity of Baireuth; Husband and Father-in-law gone away, towards the Bohemian frontier, to hunt boars. Oh, the bustle and the bother that high lady had; getting her little Country-House stretched out to the due pitch to accommodate everybody, — specially her foolish Sister of Anspach and foolish brother-in-law and suite, — with whom, by negligence of servants and otherwise, there had like to have risen a curable quarrel on the matter. But the dextrous young Wife, gladdest, busiest and weakliest of hopeful creatures, contrived to manage everything, like a female field-marshal, as she was. Papa was delighted; rallied the foolish Anspach people, — or would have done so, had not I intervened, that the matter might die. Papa was gracious, happy; very anxious about me in my interesting state. "Thou hast lodged me to perfection, good Wilhelmina. Here I find my wooden stools, tubs to wash in; all things as if I were at Potsdam: — a good girl; and thou must take care of thyself, my child (mein Kind)."

At dinner, his Majesty, dreading no ill, but intent only on the practical, got into a quiet, but to me most dreadful, lecture to the old Margraf (my Father-in-law) upon debt and money and arrears: How he, the Margraf, was cheated at every turn, and led about by the nose, and kept weltering in debt: how he should let the young Margraf go into the Offices, to supervise, and withal to learn tax-matters and economics betimes. How he (Friedrich Wilhelm) would send him a fellow from Berlin who understood such things, and would drill his scoundrels for him! To which the old Margraf, somewhat flushed in the face, made some embarrassed assent, knowing it in fact to be true; and accepted the Berlin man: — but he made me (his poor Daughter-in-law) smart for it afterwards: “Not quite dead yet, Madam; you will have to wait a little!” — and other foolish speech; which required to be tempered down again by a judicious female mind.

* Wilhelmina, li. 55.

Grumkow himself was pleasant on this occasion; told us of Kladrup, the Prag etiquettes; and how he was like to go mad seeing his Majesty so humiliate himself. Fräulein Grumkow, a niece of his, belonging to the Austrian Court, who is over here with the rest, a satirical intriguing baggage, she, I privately perceive, has made a conquest of my foolish Brother-in-law the Anspach Margraf here; — and there will be jealousies, and a cat-and-dog life over yonder, worse than ever! Tush, why should we talk? — These are the phenomena at Baireuth; Husband and Father-in-law having quitted their boar-hunt and hurried home.

After three days, Friedrich Wilhelm rolled away again; lodged, once more, at Meuselwitz, with abstruse Seckendorf and his good old Wife, who do the hospi-talities well when they must, in spite of the single candle once visible. On the morrow after which, 14th August 1732, his Majesty is off again, "at four in the morning," towards Leipzig, intending to be home that night, though it is a long drive. At Leipzig, not to waste time, he declines entering the Town; positively will not, though the cannon-salvoes are booming all round; — "breakfasts, in the suburbs, with a certain "Horse-dealer (Ross-Händler) now deceased:" respectable Centaur, capable, no doubt, of bargaining a little about cavalry mountings, while one eats, with appetite and at one's ease. Which done, Majesty darts off again, the cannon-salvoes booming out a second time; and by assiduous driving gets home to Potsdam about eight at night. And so has happily ended this Journey to Kladrup.*

* Fassmann, pp. 474-479; Wilhelmina, ii. 46-55; Pöllnitz, ii. 407-412; Förster, i. 328-334.

CHAPTER V.

GHOST OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE RISES; TO NO PURPOSE.

WE little expected to see the "Double-Marriage" start up into vitality again, at this advanced stage; or, of all men, Seckendorf, after riding 25,000 miles to kill the Double-Marriage, engaged in resuscitating it! But so it is: by endless intriguing, matchless in History or Romance, the Austrian Court had, at such expense to the parties and to itself, achieved the first problem of stifling the harmless Double-Marriage; and now, the wind having changed, it is actually trying its hand the opposite way.

Wind is changed: consummate Robinson has managed to do his thrice-salutary "Treaty of Vienna;"* to clout up all differences between the Sea-Powers and the Kaiser, and restore the old Law of Nature, — Kaiser to fight the French, Sea-Powers to feed and pay him while engaged in that necessary job. And now it would be gratifying to the Kaiser, if there remained, on this side of the matter, no rent anywhere; if between his chief Sea ally and his chief Land one, the Britannic Majesty and the Prussian, there prevailed a complete understanding, with no grudge left.

The honour of this fine resuscitation project is ascribed to Robinson by the Vienna people: "Robinson's suggestion," they always say: how far it was, or whether at all it was or not, nobody at present knows. Guess rather, if necessary, it had been the Kaiser's own! Robinson, as the thing proceeds, is instructed from St. James's to "look on and not interfere;"* Prince Eugene too, we can observe, is privately against it, though officially urgent, and doing his best. Who knows, — or need know?

* 16th March 1731, the tail of it (accession of the Dutch, of Spain, &c.) not quite coiled up till 20th February 1732: Schöll, i. 218-222.

Enough that High Heads are set upon it; that the diplomatic wigs are all wagging with it, from about the beginning of October 1732; and rumours are rife and eager, occasionally spurting out into the Newspapers: Double-Marriage after all, hint the old Rumours: Double-Marriage somehow or other; Crown-Prince to have his English Princess, Prince Fred of England to console the Brunswick one for loss of her Crown-Prince; or else Prince Karl of Brunswick to — And half-a-dozen other ways; which Rumour cannot settle to its satisfaction. The whispers upon it, from Hanover, from Vienna, at Berlin, and from the Diplomatic world in general, occasionally whistling through the Newspapers, are manifold and incessant, — not worthy of the least attention from us here. What is certain is, Seckendorf, in the end of October, is corresponding on it with Prince Eugene; has got instructions to propose the matter in Tobacco-Parliament; and does not like it at all. Grumkow, who perhaps has seen dangerous clouds threatening to mount upon him, and never been quite himself again in the Royal Mind since that questionable Nosti business, dissuades earnestly, constantly. "Nothing but mischief will come of such a proposal," says Grumkow steadily; and for his own share absolutely declines concern in it.

* Despatches, in State-Paper Office.

 Förster, iii. 111, 120, 108, 113, 122.

But Prince Eugene's orders are express; remonstrances, cunctations only strengthen the determination of the High Heads or Head: Forward with this beautiful scheme! Seckendorf, puckered into dangerous anxieties, but summoning all his cunning, has at length, after six-weeks hesitation, to open it, as if casually, in some favourable hour, to his Prussian Majesty. December 5th, 1732, as we compute; — a kind of epoch in his Majesty's life. Prussian Majesty stares wide-eyed; the breath as if struck out of him; repeats, "Jülich and Berg absolutely secured, say you? But — hm, na!" — and has not yet taken-in the unspeakable dimensions of the occurrence. "What? Imperial Majesty will make me break my word before all the world? Imperial Majesty has been whirling me about, face now to the east, face straightway round to the west: Imperial Majesty does not feel that I am a man and king at all; takes me for a mere machine, to be seesawed and whirled hither and thither, like a rotatory Clothes-horse, to dry his Imperial Majesty's linen upon. Tausend Himmel — ! —"

The full dimensions of all this did not rise clear upon the intellect of Prussian Majesty, — a slow intellect, but a true and deep, with terrible earthquakes and poetic fires lying under it, — not at once, or for months, perhaps years to come. But they had begun to dawn upon him painfully here; they rose gradually into perfect clearness: all things seen at last as what they were: — with huge submarine earthquake for consequence, and total change of mind towards Imperial Majesty and the drying of his Pragmatic linen, in Friedrich Wilhelm. Amiable Orson, true to the heart; amiable, though terrible when too much put upon!

This dawning process went on for above two years to come, painfully, reluctantly, with explosions, even with tears. But here, directly on the back of Seckendorf's proposal, and recorded from a sure hand, is what we may call the peep-of-day in that matter: First Session of Tobacco-Parliament, close after that event. Event is on the 5th December 1732; Tobacco Session is of the 6th; — glimpse of it is given by Speaker Grumkow himself; authentic to the bone.

Session of Tobacco-Parliament, 6th December 1732.

Grumkow, shattered into "headache" by this Session, writes Report of it to Seckendorf before going to bed. Look, reader, into one of the strangest Political Establishments; and how a strange Majesty comports himself there, directly after such Proposal from Vienna to marry with England still — "Schwerin" is incidentally in from Frankfurt on the Oder, where his Regiment and business usually lie: the other Honourable Members we sufficiently know. Majesty has been a little out of health lately; perceptibly worse the last two days. "Syberg" is a Gold-Cook (Alchemical gentleman, of very high professions), come to Berlin some time ago; whom his Majesty, after due investigation, took the liberty to hang.* Readers can now understand what Speaker Grumkow writes, and despatches by his lackey, in such haste:

"I never saw such a scene as this evening. Derschau, Schwerin, Buddenbrock, Rochow, Flanz were present. We had been about an hour in the Red Room" (languidly doing our tobacco off and on), when he" (the King) "had us shifted into the Little Room; drove out the servants; and cried, looking fixedly at me: 'No, I cannot endure it any longer! "Es stosset mir das Herz ab,' cried he, breaking into German: "It crushes the heart out of me; to make me do a bit of scoundrelism, me, me! No, I say; no, never! Those damned intrigues; may the Devil take them!" —

"Ego (Grumkow). 'Of course, I know of nothing. But I do not comprehend your Majesty's inquietude, coming thus on the sudden, after our common indifferent mood.'

"King. 'What, make me a villain! I will tell it right out. Certain damned scoundrels have been about betraying me. People that should have known me better have been trying to lead me into a dishonourable scrape' — ("Here I called in the hounds, Je rompis les chiens," reports Grumkow, "for he was going to blab everything; I interrupted, saying):

"Ego. 'But, your Majesty, what is it ruffles you so? I know not what you talk of. Your Majesty has honourable people about you; and the man who lets himself be employed in things against your Majesty must be a traitor.'

* Förster, iii. 126.

“King. ‘Yes, ja, ja. I will do things that will surprise “‘them! I’ —

“And, in short, a torrent of exclamations: which I strove
“to soften by all manner of incidents and contrivances; suc“ceeding at last,” — by dexterity and time (but, at this point, the light is now blown-out, and we see no more): — “so that “he grew quite calm again, and the rest of the evening passed “gently enough.

“Well, you see what the effect of your fine Proposal is,
“which you said he would like! I can tell you, it is the most “detestable incident that could have turned up. I know, you “had your orders: but you may believe and depend on it, he “has got his heart driven rabid by the business, and says, “‘Who knows now whether that villain Syberg’ Gold-cook, that was hanged the other day, ‘was not set-on by some “‘people to poison me?’ In a word, he was like a madman.

“What struck me most was when he repeated, ‘Only think!
“‘Think! Who would have expected it of people that should “‘have known me; and whom I know, and have known, better “‘than they fancy!’” — Pleasant passage for Seckendorf to chew the cud upon, through the night-watches!

“In fine, as I was somewhat confused; and anxious, above
“all, to keep him from exploding with the secret, I cannot re“member everything. But Derschau, who was more at his “ease, will be able to give you a full account. He” (the King)
“said more than once: ‘This was his sickness; the thing that “‘ailed him, this: it gnawed his heart, and would be the death
“‘of him!’ He certainly did not affect; he was in a very con“vulsive condition.” — (Jarni-Bleu, here is a piece of work, Herr Seckendorf!) — “Adieu, I have a headache.” Whereupon to bed. — “GRUMKOW.”*

This Hansard Report went off direct to Prince Eugene; and ought to have been a warning to the high Vienna heads and him. But they persisted not the less, to please Robinson or themselves; considering his Prussian Majesty to be, in fact, a mere rotatory Clothes-horse for drying the Imperial linen on, and to have no intellect at all, because he was without guile, and had no vulpinism at all. In which they were very much ~~mistaken~~ indeed. History is proud to report that the guileless Prussian Majesty, steadily attending to his own affairs in a wise manner, though hoodwinked and led about by Black-Artists as he had been, turned out, when Fact and Nature subsequently pronounced upon it, to have had more intellect than the whole of them together, — to have been, in a manner, the only one of them that had any real “intellect,” or insight into Fact and Nature, at all. Consummate Black-art Diplomacies overnetting the Universe, went entirely to water, running down the gutters to the last drop; and a prosperous Drilled Prussia, compact, organic in every part, from diligent plough-sock to shining bayonet and iron ramrod, remained standing. “A full Treasury and “200,000 well-drilled men would be the one guarantee “to your Pragmatic Sanction,” Prince Eugene had said. But that bit of insight was not accepted at Vienna; Black-art, and Diplomatic spiderwebs from pole to pole, being thought the preferable method.

Enough, Seckendorf was ordered to manipulate and soothe-down the Prussian Majesty, as surely would be easy; to continue his galvanic operations on the Double

Match, or produce a rotation in the purposes of the royal breast. Which he diligently strove to do, when once admitted to speech again; — Grumkow steadily declining to meddle, and only Queen Sophie, as we can fancy, auguring joyfully of it. Seckendorf, admitted to speech the third day after that explosive Session, snuffles his softest, his cunningest; — continues to ride diligently, the concluding portion (such it proved) of his 25,000 miles, with the Prussian Majesty up and down through winter and spring; but makes not the least progress, the reverse rather.

Their dialogues and arguings on the matter, here and elsewhere, are lost in air: or gone wholly to a single point unexpectedly preserved for us. One day, riding through some village, Priort some say his Majesty calls it, some give another name, — advocate Seckendorf, in the fervour of pleading and arguing, said some word, which went like a sudden flash of lightning through the dark places of his Majesty's mind, and never would go out of it again while he lived after. In passionate moments, his Majesty spoke of it sometimes, a clangorous pathos in his tones, as of a thing hideous, horrible, never to be forgotten, which had killed him, — death from a friend's hand. "It was the 17th of April 1733,* riding through Priort, "a man said something to me; it was as if you had

* All the Books (Förster, li. 142, for one) mention this utterance of his Majesty, on what occasion we shall see farther on; and give the date "1732," not 1733: but except as amended above, it refuses to have any sense visible at this distance. The Village of Priort is in the Potsdam region.

"turned a dagger about in my heart. That man
"was he that killed me; there and then I got my
"death!"

A strange passion in that utterance; the deep dumb soul of his Majesty, of dumb-poetic nature, suddenly brought to a fatal clearness about certain things. "Oh Kaiser, Kaiser of the Holy Roman Empire; and this is your return for my loyal faith in you? I had nearly killed my Fritz, my Wilhelmina, broken my Feeke's heart and my own, and reduced the world to ruins for your sake. And because I was of faith more than human, you took me for a dog? Oh Kaiser, Kaiser!" — Poor Friedrich Wilhelm, he spoke of this often, in excited moments, in his later years; the tears running down his cheeks, and the whole man melted into tragic emotion: but if Fritz were there, the precious Fritz whom he had almost killed for their sake, he would say, flashing out into proud rage, "There is one that will avenge me, though; that one! Da steht Einer, der mich rächen wird!"* Yes, your Majesty; perhaps that one. And it will be seen whether you were a rotatory Clothes-horse to dry their Pragmatic linen upon, or something different a good deal.

* Förster, ii. 153.

END OF VOL. IV.

COLLECTION
OF
BRITISH AUTHORS.
VOL. CCCCXLVIII.

FREDERICK THE GREAT BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

VOL. V.

CONTENTS

OF VOLUME V.

BOOK IX.

LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP: LIFE IN RUPPIN. 1732-1736.

(Continued.)

CHAPTER	PAGE
VI. KING AUGUST MEDITATING GREAT THINGS FOR PO- LAND	1
VII. CROWN-PRINCE'S MARRIAGE	8
VIII. KING AUGUST DIES, AND POLAND TAKES FIRE	20
Poland has to find a new King, p. 22.
Of the Candidates; of the Conditions. How the Election went, 26.
Poland on Fire; Dantzic stands Siege, 32.
IX. KAISER'S SHADOW-HUNT HAS CAUGHT FIRE	35
Subsequent course of the War, in the Italian part of it, p. 39.
Course of the War, in the German part of it, 42.
X. CROWN-PRINCE GOES TO THE RHINE CAMPAIGN	45
Glimpse of Lieutenant Chasot, and of other acquisitions, p. 84.
Crown-Prince's visit to Baireuth on the way home, 88.
XI. IN PAPA'S SICK-ROOM; PRUSSIAN INSPECTIONS: END OF WAR	94

BOOK X.

AT REINSBERG. 1736-1740.

I. MANSION OF REINSBERG	121
Of Monsieur Jordan and the Literary Set, p. 135.
II. OF VOLTAIRE AND THE LITERARY CORRESPONDENCES	143
III. CROWN-PRINCE MAKES A MORNING CALL.	184
IV. NEWS OF THE DAY	195
Of Bonn and Jülich again; and of Luisius with the One Star, p. 203.
V. VISIT AT LOO	210
Crown-Prince becomes a Freemason; and is harangued by Monsieur de Bielfeld, p. 214. Seckendorf gets lodged in Grätz, 224. The Ear of Jenkins reëmerges, 228.
VI. LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG; JOURNEY TO PREUSSEN	230
Pine's Horace, and the Anti-Macchiavel, p. 233. Friedrich in Preussen again; at the Stud of Trakehnen. A tragically great Event coming on, 240.
VII. LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG: TRANSIT OF BALTI-MORE AND OTHER PERSONS AND THINGS	248
Bielfeld, what he saw at Reinsberg and around, p. 254. Turk War ends; Spanish War begins. A Wedding in Petersburg, 259.
VIII. DEATH OF FRIEDRICH WILHELM	266

MAP.

PHILIPSBURG	80
-----------------------	----

HISTORY
OF FRIEDRICH II. OF PRUSSIA,
CALLED FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

COPYRIGHT EDITION.

VOL. V.

LEIPZIG
BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ
1858.

The Right of Translation is reserved.

BOOK IX.

LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP:

LIFE IN RUPPIN.

(Continued.)

CHAPTER VI.

KING AUGUST MEDITATING GREAT THINGS FOR POLAND.

IN the Newyear's days of 1733, the topic among diplomatic gentlemen, which set many big wigs wagging, and even tremulously came out in the gray leaves of gazetteers and garretteers of the period, was a royal drama dimly supposed to be getting itself up in Poland at this time. Nothing known about it for certain; much guessed. "Something in the rumour!" nods this wig; "Nothing!" wags that, slightly oscillating; and gazetteers, who would earn their wages, and have a peck of coals apiece to glad them in the cold weather, had to watch with all eagerness the movements of King August, our poor old friend, the Dilapidated-Strong, who is in Saxony at present; but bound for Warsaw shortly, — just about lifting the curtain on important events, it is thought and not thought. Here are the certainties of it, now clear enough, so far as they deserve a glance from us.

January 10th, 1733, August the Dilapidated-Strong of Poland has been in Saxony, looking after his poor Electorate a little; and is on the road from Dresden homewards again; — will cross a corner of the Prussian Dominions, as his wont is on such occasions. Prussian Majesty, if not appearing in person, will as usual, by some Official of rank, send a polite Well-speed-you as the brother Majesty passes. This time, however, it was more than politeness; the Polish Majesty having, as was thought, such intricate affairs in the wind. Let Grumkow, the fittest man in all ways, go, and do the greeting to his old Patroon: greeting, or whatever else may be needed.

Patroon left Dresden, — “having just opened the Carnival” or fashionable Season there, opened and nothing more, — January 10th, 1733;* being in haste home for a Polish Diet close at hand. On which same day Grumkow, we suppose, drives forth from Berlin, to intersect him, in the Neumark, about Crossen; and have a friendly word again, in those localities, over jolly wine. Intersection took place duly; — there was exuberant joy on the part of the Patroon; and such a dinner and night of drinking, as has seldom been. Abstruse things lie close ahead of August the Dilapidated-Strong, important to Prussia, and for which Prussia is important; let Grumkow try if he can fish the matter into clearness out of these wine-cups. And then August, on his side, wishes to know what the

* Fasmann: Leben Friedrich Augusti des Grossen, p. 994.

Kaiser said at Kladrup lately: there is much to be fished into clearness.

Many are the times August the Strong has made this journey; many are the carousals, on such and other occasions, Grumkow and he have had. But there comes an end to all things. This was their last meeting, over flowing liquor or otherwise, in the world. Satirical History says, they drank all night, endeavouring to pump one another, and with such enthusiasm that they never recovered it; drank themselves to death at Crossen on that occasion.* It is certain, August died within three weeks; and people said of Grumkow, who lived six years longer, he was never well after this bout. — Is it worth any human creature's while to look into the plans of this precious pair of individuals? Without the least expense of drinking, the secrets they were pumping out of each other are now accessible enough, — if it were of importance now. One glance I may perhaps commend to the reader, out of these multifarious Notebooks in my possession.

“August, by change of his religion, and other sad operations, got to be what they called the King of Poland, thirty-five years ago; but, though looking glorious to the idle public, it has been a crown of stinging-nettles to the poor man, — a sedan-chair running on rapidly, with the bottom broken out! To say nothing of the scourgings he got, and poor Saxony along with him, from Charles XII., on account of this Sovereignty so-called, what has the thing itself been to him? In Poland, for these thirty-five years, the individual

* Œuvres de Frédéric (Mémoires de Brandebourg), .i. 163.

“who had least of his real will done in public matters, has “been, with infinite management, and display of such good-“humour as at least deserves credit, the nominal Sovereign “Majesty of Poland. Anarchic Grandees have been kings “over him; ambitious, contentious, unmanageable; — very “fanatical too, and never persuaded that August's Apostasy
“was more than a sham one, not even when he made his Prince “apostatise too. Their Sovereignty has been a mere peck of “troubles, disgraces and vexations: for those thirty-five years, “an ever-boiling pot of mutiny, contradiction, insolence, hardly “tolerable even to such nerves as August's.

“August, for a long time back, has been thinking of “schemes to clap some lid upon all that. To make the “Sovereignty hereditary in his House: that, with the good “Saxon troops we have, would be a remedy; — and in fact it “is the only remedy. John Casimir (who abdicated long ago,
“in the Great Elector's time, and went to Paris, — much “charmed with Ninon de l'Enclos there) told the Polish Diets, “With their liberum veto, and ‘right of confederation’ and “rebellion, they would bring the Country down under the feet “of mankind, and reduce their Republic to zero one day, if “they persisted. They have not failed to persist. With some “Hereditary King over it, and a regulated Saxony to lean “upon: truly might it not be a change to the better? To the “worse, it could hardly be, thinks August the Strong; and “goes intent upon that method, this long while back; — and “at length hopes now, in few days longer, at the Diet just “assembling, to see fruits appear, and the thing actually “begin.

“The difficulties truly are many; internal and external:
“— but there are calculated methods, too. For the internal:
“Get up, by bribery, persuasion, some visible Minority to “countenance you; with these manoeuvre in the Diets; on the “back of these, the 30,000 Saxon troops. But then what will “the neighbouring Kings say? The neighbouring Kings, “with their big-mouthed manifestoes, pities for an oppressed “Republic, overwhelming forces, and invitations to ‘con“federate’ and revolt: without their tolerance first had, “nothing can be done. That is the external difficulty. For “which too there is a remedy. Cut off sufficient outlying “slices of Poland; fling these to the neighbouring Kings to “produce consent: Partition of Poland, in fact; large sections

“of its Territory sliced away: that will be the method, thinks “King August.

“Neighbouring Kings, Kaiser, Prussia, Russia, to them it “is not grievous that Poland should remain in perennial “anarchy, in perennial impotence; the reverse rather: a dead “horse, or a dying, in the next stall, — he at least will not “kick upon us, think the neighbouring Kings. And yet, — “under another similitude, — you do not like your next-door “neighbour to be always on the point of catching fire; smoke “issuing, thicker or thinner, through the slates of his roof, as “a perennial phenomenon? August will conciliate the neigh“bouring Kings. Russia, big-cheeked Anne Czarina there, “shall have not only Courland peaceably henceforth, but the “Ukraine, Lithuania, and other large outlying slices; that “surely will conciliate Russia. To Austria on its Hungarian “Border, let us give the Country of Zips; — nay there are “other sops we have for Austria. Pragmatic Sanction, hitherto “refused as contrary to plain rights of ours, — that, if “conceded to a spectre-hunting Kaiser? To Friedrich Wil“helm we could give West-Prussen; West-Prussen torn “away three hundred years ago, and leaving a hiatus in the “very continuity of Friedrich Wilhelm: would not that “conciliate him? Of all enemies or friends, Friedrich Wil“helm, close at hand with 80,000 men capable of fighting at a “week’s notice, is by far the most important.

“These are August’s plans: West-Prussen for the nearest “Neighbour; Zips for Austria; Ukraine, Lithuania and ap“pendages for the Russian Czarina: handsome Sections to be “sliced off, and flung to good neighbours; as it were, all the “outlying limbs and wings of the Polish Territory sliced off;
“compact body to remain, and become, by means of August “and Saxon troops, a Kingdom with government, not an “imaginary Republic without government any longer. In “fact, it was the ‘Partition of Poland,’ such as took effect
“forty years after, and has kept the Newspapers weeping ever “since. Partition of Poland, — minus the compact interior “held under government, by a King with Saxon troops or “otherwise. Compact interior, in that effective Partition, forty “years after, was left as anarchic as ever; and had to be again “partitioned, and cut away altogether, — with new torrents
“of loud tears from the Newspapers, refusing to be comforted “to this day.

“It is not said that Friedrich Wilhelm had the least in“tention of countenancing August in these dangerous “operations, still less of going shares with August: but he “wished much, through Grumkow, to have some glimpse into
“the dim program of them; and August wished much to know “Friedrich Wilhelm’s and Grumkow’s humour towards them.
“Grumkow and August drank copiously, or copiously pressed “drink on one another, all night (11th- 12th January 1733, as “I compute; some say at Crossen, some say at Frauendorf a “royal domain near by), with the view of mutually fishing out “those secrets; — and killed one another in the business, as is “rumoured.”

What were Grumkow's news at home-coming, I did not hear; but he continues very low and shaky; — refuses, almost with horror, to have the least hand in Seckendorf's mad project of resuscitating the English Double-Marriage, and breaking off the Brunswick one, at the eleventh hour and after word pledged. Seckendorf himself continues to dislike and dissuade: but the High Heads at Vienna are bent on it; and command new strenuous attempts, — literally at the last moment; which is now come.

CHAPTER VII.

CROWN-PRINCE'S MARRIAGE.

SINCE November last, Wilhelmina is on visit at Berlin, — first visit since her marriage; — she stays there for almost ten months; not under the happiest auspices, poor child. Mamma's reception of her, just off the long winter journey, and extenuated with fatigues and sickly chagrins, was of the most cutting cruelty: "What do you want here? What is a mendicant like you come hither for?" And next night, when Papa himself came home, it was little better. "Ha, ha," said he, "here you are; I am glad to see you." Then holding up a light, to take view of me: "How changed you are!" said he: "What is little Fredericka" (my little Baby at Baireuth) "doing?" And on my answering, continued: "I am sorry for you, on my word. You have not bread to eat; and but for me you might go begging. I am a poor man myself, not able to give you much; but I will do what I can. I will give you now and then a twenty or a thirty shillings (par dix ou douze florins), as my affairs permit: it will always be something to assuage your want. And you, Madam," said he, turning to the Queen, "You will sometimes give her an old dress; for the poor child hasn't a shift to her back."* This rugged paternal banter was taken too literally by Wilhelmina, in her weak state; and she was like "to burst in her skin," poor Princess.

* Wilhelmina, II. 85.

So that, — except her own good Hereditary Prince, who was here, "over from Pasewalk" and his regimental duties, waiting to welcome her; in whose true heart, full of honest human sunshine towards her, she could always find shelter and defence, — native Country and Court offer little to the brave Wilhelmina. Chagrins enough are here: chagrins also were there. At Baireuth our old Father Margraf has his crotchets, his infirmities and outbreaks; takes more and more to liquor; and does always keep us frightfully bare in money. No help from Papa here, either, on the finance side; no real hope anywhere (thinks Seckendorf, when we consult him) except only in the Margraf's death: "old Margraf will soon drink himself dead," thinks Seckendorf; "and in the mean while there is Vienna, and a noble Kaiserinn who knows her friends in case of extremity!" thinks he.* Poor Princess, in her weak shattered state, she has a heavy time of it; but there is a tough spirit in her; bright, sharp, like a swift sabre, not to be quenched in any coil; but always cutting its way, and emerging unsubdued.

One of the blessings reserved for her here, which most of all concerns us, was the occasional sight of her Brother. Brother in a day or two ran over from

* Wilhelmina, ii. 81-111.

 "18th November," she says; which date is wrong, if it were of moment (see Ceuvres de Frédéric, xxvii part 1st, where their Correspondence is).

Ruppin, on short leave, and had his first interview. Very kind and affectionate; quite the old Brother again; and "blushed" when, at supper, Mamma and the Princesses, especially that wicked Charlotte (Papa not present), tore up his poor Bride at such a rate. "Has not a word to answer you, but Yes or No," said they; "stupid as a block." "But were you ever at her toilette?" said the wicked Charlotte: "Out of shape, completely: considerable waddings, I promise you: and then" — still worse features, from that wicked Charlotte, in presence of the domestics here. Wicked Charlotte; who is to be her Sister-in-law soon; — and who is always flirting with my Husband, as if she liked that better! — Crown-Prince retired, directly after supper; as did I, to my apartment, where in a minute or two he joined me.

"To the question, How with the King and you? he answered, 'That his situation was changing every moment; that sometimes he was in favour, sometimes in disgrace; — that his chief happiness consisted in absence. That he led a soft and tranquil life with his Regiment at Ruppin; study and music his principal occupations; he had built himself a House there, and laid out a Garden, where he could read, and walk about.' Then as to his Bride, I begged him to tell me candidly if the portrait the Queen and my Sister had been making of her was the true one. 'We are alone,' replied he, 'and I will conceal nothing from you. The Queen, by her miserable intrigues, has been the source of our misfortunes. Scarcely were you gone when she began again with England; wished to substitute our Sister Char“lotte for you; would have had me undertake to contradict

“the King’s will again, and flatly refuse the Brunswick “Match; — which I declined. That is the source of her venom “against this poor Princess. As to the young Lady herself, “I do not hate her so much as I pretend; I affect complete “dislike, that the King may value my obedience more. She “is pretty, a complexion lily-and-rose; her features delicate;
“face altogether of a beautiful person. True, she has no “breeding, and dresses very ill: but I flatter myself, when “she comes hither, you will have the goodness to take her
“in hand. I recommend her to you, my dear Sister; and beg “your protection for her.’ It is easy to judge, my answer “would be such as he desired.”*

For which small glimpse of the fact itself, at first-hand, across a whirlwind of distracted rumours new and old about the fact, let us be thankful to Wilhelmina. Seckendorf’s hopeless attempts to resuscitate extinct English things, and make the Prussian Majesty break his word, continue to the very last; but are worth no notice from us. Grumkow’s Drinking-bout with the Dilapidated-Strong at Crossen, which follows now in January, has been already noticed by us. And the Dilapidated-Strong’s farewell next morning, “Adieu, dear Grumkow; I think, I shall not see you again!” as he rolled off towards Warsaw and the Diet, — will require farther notice; but must stand over till this Marriage be got done. Of which latter Event, — Wilhelmina once more kindling the old dark Books into some light for us, — the essential particulars are briefly as follows.

* Wilhelmina, ii. 89.

Monday, 8th June 1733, the Crown-Prince is again over from Ruppín: King, Queen and Crown-Prince are rendezvoused at Potsdam; and they set off with due retinues towards Wolfenbüttel, towards Salzdahlum the Ducal Schloss there, — Sister Wilhelmina sending blessings, if she had them, on a poor Brother in such interesting circumstances. Mamma was “plunged in black melancholy;” King not the least; in the Crown-Prince nothing particular to be remarked. They reached Salzdahlum, Duke Ludwig Rudolf the Grandfather's Palace, — one of the finest Palaces, with Gardens, with Antiques, with Picture-Galleries no-end; a mile or two from Wolfenbüttel; built by old Anton Ulrich, and still the ornament of those parts: — reached Salzdahlum, Wednesday the 10th; where Bride, with Father, Mother, much more Grandfather, Grandmother, and all the sublimities interested, are waiting in the highest gala; Wedding to be on Friday next.

Friday morning, this incident fell out, notable and somewhat contemptible: Seckendorf, who is of the retinue, following his bad trade, visits his Majesty who is still in bed: — “Pardon, your Majesty: what shall I say for excuse? Here is a Letter just come from Vienna; in Prince Eugene's hand; — Prince Eugene, or a Higher, will say something, while it is still time!” Majesty, not in impatience, reads the little Prince's and the Kaiser's Letter, “Give up this, we entreat you for the last time; marry with England after all!” Majesty reads, quiet as a lamb; lays the Letter under his pillow; will himself answer it; — and does straightway, with much simple dignity, to the effect, “For certain, Never, my always respected Prince!”* Seckendorf, having thus shot his last bolt, does not stay many hours longer at Salzdahlum; — may as well quit Friedrich Wilhelm altogether, for any good he will henceforth do upon him. This is the one incident between the Arrival at Salzdahlum and the Wedding there.

Same Friday, 12th June 1733, at a more advanced hour, the Wedding^d itself took effect: Wedding which, in spite of the mad rumours and whispers, in the Newspapers, Diplomatic Despatches and elsewhere, went off, in all respects, precisely as other weddings do; a quite human Wedding now and afterwards. Officiating Clergyman was the Reverend Herr Mosheim: readers know with approval the Ecclesiastical History of Mosheim: he, in the beautiful Chapel of the Schloss, with Majesties and Brunswick Sublimities looking on, performed the ceremony: and Crown-Prince Friedrich of Prussia has fairly wedded the Serene Princess Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern, age eighteen coming, manners rather awkward, complexion lily-and-rose; — and History is right glad to have done with the wearisome affair, and know it settled on any tolerable terms whatever. Here is a Note of Friedrich's to his dear Sister, which has been preserved:

* Account of the Interview by Seckendorf, in Förster, iii. 148-55; Copy of the Answer itself is in the State-Paper Office here.

To Princess Wilhelmina of Baireuth, at Berlin.

"Salzdahlum, Noon, 12th June 1733.

"My dear Sister, — A minute since, the whole Ceremony "was got finished; and God be praised it is over! I hope you "will take it as a mark of my friendship that I give you the "first news of it.

"I hope I shall have the honour to see you again soon;
"and to assure you, my dear Sister, that I am wholly yours
"(tout à vous). I write in great haste; and add nothing "that is merely formal. Adieu.*

"FRÉDÉRIC."

One Keyserling, the Prince's favourite gentleman, came over express, with this Letter, and the more private news; Wilhelmina being full of anxieties. Keyserling said, The Prince was inwardly "well content with his lot; though he had kept up the old farce to the last; and pretended to be in frightful humour, on the very morning; bursting out upon his valets in the King's presence, who reproved him, and looked rather pensive," — recognising, one hopes, what a sacrifice it was. The Queen's Majesty, Keyserling reported, "was charmed with the style and ways of the Brunswick Court; but could not endure the Princess-Royal" (new Wife), "and treated the two Duchesses like dogs (comme des chiens)."

 Reverend Abbot Mosheim (such his title; Head Churchman, theological chief of Helmstädt University in those parts, with a couple of extinct little Abbacies near by, to help his stipend) preached

* Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 9.

 Wilhelmina, ii. 114.

27th June 1783.

next Sunday, "On the Marriage of the Righteous," — felicitous appropriate Sermon, said a grateful Public;* — and in short, at Salzdahlum all goes, if not as merry as some marriage-bells, yet without jarring to the ear.

On Tuesday, both the Majesties set out towards Potsdam again; "where his Majesty," having business waiting, "arrived some time before the Queen." Thither also, before the week ends, Crown-Prince Friedrich, with his Bride, and all the Serenities of Brunswick escorting, are upon the road, — duly detained by complimentary harangues, tedious scenic evolutions, at Magdeburg and the intervening Towns; — grand entrance of the Princess-Royal into Berlin is not till the 27th, last day of the week following. That was such a day as Wilhelmina never saw: no sleep the night before; no breakfast can one taste: between Charlottenburg and Berlin, there is a Review of unexampled splendour; "above eighty carriages of us," and only a tent or two against the flaming June sun: think of it! Review begins at four A.M.; — poor Wilhelmina thought she would verily have died, of heat and thirst and hunger, in the crowded tent, under the flaming June sun; before the Review could end itself, and march into Berlin, trumpeting and salvoing, with the Princess-Royal at the head of it.

Of which grand flaming day, and of the unexampled balls and effulgent festivities that followed, "all Berlin

* Text, Psalm xcii. 12; "Sermon printed in Mosheim's Works."

 Wilhelmina, ii. 127-129.

ruining itself in dresses and equipages," we will say nothing farther; but give only, what may still have some significance for readers, Wilhelmina's Portrait of the Princess-Royal, on their first meeting, which had taken place at Potsdam two days before. The Princess-Royal had arrived at Potsdam too, on that occasion, across a grand Review; Majesty himself riding out, Majesty and Crown-Prince, who had preceded her a little, to usher-in the poor young creature; — Thursday, June 25th, 1733:

"The King led her into the Queen's Apartment; then
"seeing, after she had saluted us all, that she was much "heated and dispowdered (dépoudrée), he bade my Brother
"take her to her own room. I followed them thither. My "Brother said to her, introducing me: 'This is a Sister I "adore, and am obliged to beyond measure. She has had "the goodness to promise me that she will take care of you,
"and help you with her good counsel; I wish you to respect
"her beyond even the King and Queen, and not to take the "least step without her advice: do you understand?' I embraced the Princess-Royal, and gave her every assurance "of my attachment; but she remained like a statue, not answering a word. Her people not being come, I repowdered
"her myself, and readjusted her dress a little; without the "least sign of thanks from her, or any answer to all my "caressings. My Brother got impatient at last; and said
"aloud: 'Devil's in the blockhead (Peste soit de la bête):
"thank my Sister then!' She made me a curtsy, on the "model of that of Agnès in the Ecole des Femmes. I took her "back to the Queen's Apartment; little edified by such a display of talent.

“The Princess-Royal is tall; her figure is not fine; stooping slightly, or hanging forward, as she walks or stands, which gives her an awkward air. Her complexion is of dazzling whiteness, heightened by the liveliest colours: her eyes are pale blue, and not of much promise for spiritual gifts. Mouth small; features generally small, — dainty (mignons) rather than beautiful: — and the countenance altogether is so innocent and infantine, you would think this head belonged to a child of twelve. Her hair is blond, plentiful, curling in natural locks. Teeth are unhappily very bad, black and ill-set; which are a disfigurement in this fine face. She has no manners, nor the least vestige of tact; has much difficulty in speaking, and making herself understood: for most part you are obliged to guess what she means; which is very embarrassing.”*

The Berlin gaieties, — for Karl, Heir-Apparent of Brunswick, brother to this Princess-Royal, wedded his Charlotte, too, about a week hence, — did not end, and the serene Guests disappear, till far on in July. After which an Inspection with Papa; and then Friedrich got back to Ruppin, and his old way of life there. Intrinsically the old studious, quietly diligent way of life; varied by more frequent excursions to Berlin; — where as yet the Princess-Royal usually resides, till some fit residence be got ready in the Ruppin Country for a wedded Crown-Prince and her.

The young Wife had an honest guileless heart, if little articulate intellect; considerable inarticulate sense; did not fail to learn tact, perpendicular attitude, speech enough; — and I hope kept well clear of pouting (faire la fâchée), a much more dangerous rock for her. With the gay temper of eighteen, and her native loyalty of mind, she seems to have shaped herself successfully to the Prince's taste; and growing yearly gracefuller and better-looking, was an ornament and pleasant addition to his Ruppín existence. These first seven years, spent at Berlin or in the Ruppín quarter, she always regarded as the flower of her life.*

* Wilhelmina, ii. 119-121.

 2d July 1782.

Papa, according to promise, has faithfully provided a Crown-Prince Palace at Berlin; all trimmed and furnished, for occasional residences there; the late "Government House" (originally Schomberg House), new-built, — which is, to this day, one of the distinguished Palaces of Berlin. Princess-Royal had Schönhausen ~~garden~~; a pleasant royal Mansion some miles out of Berlin on the Ruppín side. Furthermore, the Prince-Royal, being now a wedded man, has, as is customary in such case, a special Amt (Government District) set apart for his support; the "Amt of Ruppín," where his business lies. What the exact revenues of Ruppín are, is not communicated; but we can justly fear they were far too frugal, — and excused the underhand borrowing, which is evident enough as a painful shadow in the Prince's life henceforth. He does not seem to have been wasteful; but he borrows all round, under seven-fold secrecy, from benevolent Courts, from Austria, Russia, England: and the only pleasant certainty we notice in such painful business is, that, on his Accession, he pays with exactitude, — sends his Uncle George of England, for example, the complete amount in rouleaus of new coin, by the first courier that goes.*

* Büsching (Autobiography, Beyträge, vi.) heard her say so, in advanced years.

A thought too frugal, his Prussian Majesty: but he means to be kind, bountiful; and occasionally launches out into handsome munificence. This very Autumn, hearing that the Crown-Prince and his Princess fancied Reinsberg, an old Castle in their Amt Ruppín, some miles north of them, — his Majesty, without word spoken, straight-way purchased Reinsberg, Schloss and Territory, from the owner; gave it to his Crown-Prince, and gave him money to new-build it according to his mind. Which the Crown-Prince did, with much interest, under very wise architectural advice, for the next three years; then went into it, to reside; — yet did not cease new-building, improving, artistically adorning, till it became in all points the image of his taste.

A really handsome princely kind of residence, that of Reinsberg; — got up with a thrift that most of all astonishes us. In which improved locality we shall by and by look in upon him again. For the present we must to Warsaw, where tragedies and troubles are in the wind, which turn out to be not quite without importance to the Crown-Prince and us.

* Despatch (of adjacent date) in the State-Paper Office here.

 23d Oct. 1733-16th March 1734 (Preuss, i. 75).

CHAPTER VIII.

KING AUGUST DIES; AND POLAND TAKES FIRE.

MEANWHILE, over at Warsaw, there has an Event fallen out. Friedrich, writing rapidly from vague reminiscence, as he often does, records it as "during the marriage festivities;"* but it was four good months earlier. Event which we must now look at for a moment.

In the end of January last, we left Grumkow in a ~~1~~ ~~and~~ hypochondriacal state, much shaken by that ~~about~~ ~~at~~ Crossen, when the Polish Majesty and he ~~were~~ so anxious to pump one another, by copious priming with Hungary wine. About a fortnight after, in the first days of February following (day is not given), Grumkow reported something curious. "In my presence," says Wilhelmina, "and that of forty persons," for the thing was much talked about, "Grumkow said to the King one morning: Ah Sire, I am in despair; the poor Patroon is dead! I was lying broad awake, last night; all on a sudden, the curtains of my bed flew asunder: I saw him; he was in a shroud: he gazed fixedly at me: I tried to start up, being dreadfully taken; but the phantom disappeared!" Here was an illustrious ghost-story for Berlin, in a day or two when the Courier came. "Died at the very time * (Œuvres (Mém. de Brandebourg), 1. 163.

1st Feb.-5th Oct. 1733.

“of the phantom; Death and phantom were the same “night,” say Wilhelmina and the miraculous Berlin public, — but do not say what night for either of them it was.* By help of which latter circumstance the phantom becomes reasonably unmiraculous again, in a nervous system tremulous from drink. “They had been “sad at parting,” Wilhelmina says, “having drank im-“mensities of Hungary wine; the Patroon almost weep“ing over his Grumkow: ‘Adieu, my dear Grumkow,’
“said he, ‘I shall never see you more!’”

Miraculous or not, the catastrophe is true: August, the once Physically Strong, lies dead; — and there will be no Partition of Poland for the present. He had the Diet ready to assemble; waiting for him, at Warsaw; and good trains laid in the Diet, capable of fortunate explosion under a good engineer. Engineer, alas! The Grumkow drinking-bout had awakened that old sore in his foot: he came to Warsaw, eager enough for business; but with his stock of strength all out, and Death now close upon him. The Diet met, 26-27th January; engineer all alert about the good trains laid, and the fortunate exploding of them; when, almost on the morrow, — “Inflammation has come on!” said the Doctors, and were futile to help farther. The strong body, and its life, was done; and nothing remained but to call-in the Archbishop, with his extreme unctions and soul-apparatus.

August made no moaning or recalcitrating; took, on the prescribed terms, the inevitable that had come. Has been a very great sinner, he confesses to the Archbishop: "I have not at present strength to name my "many and great sins to your Reverence," said he; "I "hope for mercy on the" — on the usual rash terms. Terms perhaps known to August to be rash; to have been frightfully rash: but what can he now do? Archbishop thereupon gives absolution of his sins; Archbishop does, — a baddish, unlikely kind of man, as August well knows. August "laid his hand on his eyes," during such sad absolution-mummery; and in that posture had breathed his last, before it was well over.* Unhappy soul; who shall judge him? — transcendent King of edacious Flunkeys; not without fine qualities, which he turned to such a use amid the temptations of this world!

* Wilhelmina, ii. 98: event happened, 1st February; news of it came to Berlin, 4th February: Fassmann (p. 485); Buchholz; &c.

Poland has to find a new King.

His death brought vast miseries on Poland; kindled foolish Europe generally into fighting, and gave our Crown-Prince his first actual sight and experience of the facts of War. For which reason, hardly for another, the thing having otherwise little memorability at present, let us give some brief synopsis of it, the briefer the better. Here, excerpted from multifarious old Note-books, are some main heads of the affair:

* "Sunday, 1st February 1733, quarter past 4 A.M." (Fassmann: Leben Frederici Augusti Königs in Pohlen, pp. 994-997).

1st Feb.-5th Oct. 1733.

“On the disappearance of August the Strong, his plans of “Partitioning Poland disappeared too, and his fine trains in “the Diet abolished themselves. The Diet had now nothing “to do, but proclaim the coming Election, giving a date to “it; and go home to consider a little whom they would elect.*
 “A question weighty to Poland. And not likely to be settled
 “by Poland alone or chiefly; the sublime Republic, with “liberum veto, and Diets capable only of anarchic noise, “having now reached such a stage that its Neighbours every“where stood upon its skirts; asking, ‘Whitherward, then,
 “‘with your anarchy? Not this way; — we say, that way!’
 “— and were apt to get to battle about it, before such a thing “could be settled. A house, in your street, with perpetual “smoke coming through the slates of it, is not a pleasant “house to be neighbour to! One honest interest the neigh“bours have, in an Election Crisis there, That the house
 “do not get on fire, and kindle them. Dishonest interests, “in the way of theft and otherwise, they may have with“out limit.

“The poor house, during last Election Crisis, — when Au“gust the Strong was flung out, and Stanislaus brought in; “Crisis presided over by Charles XII., with Czar Peter and “others hanging on the outskirts, as Opposition party, — “fairly got into flame; but was quenched down again by “that stout Swede; and his Stanislaus, a native Pole, was “left peaceably as King for the years then running. Years “ran; and Stanislaus was thrown out, Charles himself being “thrown out; and had to make way for August the Strong

* “Interregnum proclaimed,” 11th February; Preliminary Diet to meet, 21st April; — meets; settles, before May is done, that the Election shall begin 25th August: it must end in six weeks thereafter, by law of the land.

 Description of it in Köhler: Münzbelustigungen, vi. 228-230.

"again: — an ejected Stanislaus; King only in title; known "to most readers of this time.*

"Poor man, he has been living in Zweibrück, in Weissen-
"burg and such places, in that Debateable French-German "region, — which the French are more and more getting "stolen to themselves, in late centuries: — generally on the "outskirts of France he lives; having now connexions of the "highest quality with France. He has had fine Country-
"houses in that Zweibrück (Two-Bridge, Deux-Ponts) region;
"had always the ghost of a Court there; plenty of money, —
"a sinecure Country-gentleman life; — and no complaints "have been heard from him. Charles XII., as proprietor of "Deux-Ponts, had first of all sent him into those parts for "refuge; and in general, easy days have been the lot of "Stanislaus there.

"Nor has History spoken of him since, except on one "small occasion: when the French Politician Gentlemen, at "a certain crisis of their game, chose a Daughter of his to be
"Wife for young Louis XV., and bring royal progeny, of "which they were scarce. This was in 1724-5; Duc de "Bourbon, and other Politicians male and female, finding "that the best move. A thing wonderful to the then Ga"zetteers, for nine days; but not now worth much talk.
"The good young Lady, it is well known, a very pious crea"ture, and sore tried in her new station, did bring royal
"progeny enough, — and might as well have held her hand,
"had she foreseen what would become of them, poor souls!
"This was a great event for Stanislaus, the sinecure Country-

* Stanislaus Lesczinsky, "Woywode of Posen," born 1677: King of Poland, Charles XII. superintending, 1704 (age then 27); driven out 1709, went to Charles XII. at Bender; to Zweibrück, 1714; thence, on Charles's death, to Weissenburg (Alsace, or Strasburg Country): Daughter married to Louis XV., 1725. Age now 56. — Hübner, t. 97; Histoire de Stanislas I, Roi de Pologne (English Translation, London, 1741), pp. 96-126; &c.

1st Feb.—5th Oct. 1733.

“gentleman, in his French-German rustication. One other “thing I have read of him, infinitely smaller, out of those ten “years: in Zweibrück Country, or somewhere in that French-“German region, he ‘built a pleasure-cottage,’ conceivable
 “‘to the mind, ‘and called it Schuhflick (Shoe-Patch),’* — a “name that touches one’s fancy on behalf of the innocent “soul. Other fact I will not remember of him. He is now
 “to quit Shoe-Patch and his pleasant Weissenburg Castle;
 “to come on the public stage again, poor man; and suffer a “second season of mischances and disgraces still worse than “the first. As we shall see presently; — a new Polish Election “Crisis having come! —

“What individual the Polish Grandees would have chosen
 “for King if entirely left alone to do it? is a question not im“portant; and indeed was never asked, in this or in late “Elections. Not the individual who could have been a King “among them were they, for a long time back, in the habit “of seeking after; not him, but another and indeed reverse “kind of individual, — the one in whom there lay most nourish- “ment, nourishment of any kind, even of the cash kind, for “a practical Polish Grandee. So that the question was no “longer of the least importance, to Poland or the Universe;
 “and in point of fact, the frugal Destinies had ceased to have “it put, in that quarter. Not Grandees of Poland; but In“trusive Neighbours, carrying Grandees of Poland ‘in their “breeches-pocket’ (as our phrase is), were the voting parties.
 “To that pass it was come. Under such stern penalty had “Poland and its Grandees fallen, by dint of false voting:
 “the frugal Destinies had ceased to ask about their vote; and “they were become machines for voting with, or pistols for “fighting with, by bad Neighbours who cared to vote! Nor

* Büsching: Erdbeschreibung, v. 1194.

“did the frugal Destinies consider that the proper method, “either; but had, as we shall see, determined to abolish that “too, in about forty years more.”

Of the Candidates; of the Conditions. How the Election went.

It was under such omens that the Polish Election of 1733 had to transact itself. Austria, Russia, Prussia, as next Neighbours, were the chief voting parties, if they cared to intrude; — which Austria and Russia were clear for doing; Prussia not clear, or not beyond the indispensable or evidently profitable. Seckendorf, and one Löwenwolde the Russian Ambassador at Berlin, had, some time ago, in foresight of this event, done their utmost to bring Friedrich Wilhelm into coöperation, — offering fine baits, “Berg and-Jülich” again, among others; — but nothing definite came of it: peaceable, reasonably safe Election in Poland, other interest Friedrich Wilhelm has not in the matter; and compliance, not coöperation, is what can be expected of him by the Kaiser and Czarina. Coöperating or even complying, these Three could have settled it; and would, — had no other Neighbour interfered. But other neighbours can interfere; any neighbour that has money to spend, or likes to bully in such a matter! And that proved to be the case, in this unlucky instance.

Austria and Russia, with Prussia complying, had, — a year ago, before the late August's decease, his life seeming then an extremely uncertain one, and foresight being always good, — privately come to an understanding,* “in case of a Polish Election:

1st Feb.-5th Oct. 1733.

“1^o. That France was to have no hand in it what-ever — no tool of France to be King; or as they more “politely expressed it, having their eye upon Stanislaus, “No Piast or native Pole could be eligible.

“2^o. That neither could August’s Son, the new “August, who would then be Kurfürst of Saxony, be “admitted King of Poland. — And, on the whole,

“3^o. That an Emanuel Prince of Portugal would “be the eligible man.” Emanuel of Portugal, King of Portugal’s Brother; a gentleman without employment, as his very Title tells us; gentleman never heard of before or since, in those parts or elsewhere; but doubtless of the due harmless quality, as Portugal itself was: he is to be the Polish King, — vote these Intrusive Neighbours. What the vote of Poland itself may be, the Destinies do not, of late, ask; finding it a superfluous question.

So had the Three Neighbours settled this matter; — or rather, I should say, so had Two of them; for Friedrich Wilhelm wanted, now or afterwards, nothing in this Election, but that it should not take fire and kindle him. Two of the Neighbours: and of these two, perhaps we might guess the Kaiser was the principal contriver and suggester; France and Saxony being both hateful to him, — obstinate refusers of the Pragmatic Sanction, to say nothing more. What the Czarina, * 31st December 1731, “Treaty of Löwenwolde” (which never got completed or became valid): Schöll, II. 223.

Anne with the big cheek, specially wanted, I do not learn, — unless it were peaceable hold of Courland; or perhaps merely to produce herself in these parts, as a kind of regulating Pallas, along with the Jupiter Kaiser of Western Europe; — which might have effects by and by.

Emanuel of Portugal was not elected, nor so much as spoken of in the Diet. Nor did one of these Three Regulations take effect; but much the contrary, — other Neighbours having the power to interfere. France saw good to interfere, a rather distant Neighbour: Austria, Russia, could not endure the French vote at all; and so the whole world got on fire by the business.

France is not a near Neighbour; but it has a Stanislaus much concerned, who is eminently under the protection of France: — who may be called the "Father of France," in a sense, or even the "Grandfather;" his Daughter being Mother of a young creature they call Dauphin, or "Child of France"? Fleury and the French Court decide that Stanislaus, Grandfather of France, was once King of Poland; that it will behove, for various reasons, he be King again. Some say, old Fleury did not care for Stanislaus; merely wanted a quarrel with the Kaiser, — having got himself in readiness, "with Lorraine in his eye;" and seeing the Kaiser not ready. It is likelier the hot young spirits, Belleisle and others, controlled old Fleury into it. At all events, Stanislaus is summoned from his rustication; the French Ambassador at Warsaw gets his instructions. French Ambassador opens himself largely, at Warsaw, by eloquent speech, by copious money, on the subject of Stanislaus; finds large audience, enthusiastic receptivity; — and readers will now understand the following chronological phenomena of the Polish Election:

“August 25th, 1733. This day the Polish Election begins. “So has the Preliminary Diet (kind of Polish Caucus) ordered “it; — Preliminary Diet itself a very stormy matter; minority “like to be ‘thrown out of window,’ to be ‘shot through the “head,’ on some occasions.* Actual Election begins; con- “tinues sub dio, ‘in the Field of Wola,’ in a very tempestuous “fashion; bound to conclude within six weeks. Kaiser has “his troops assembled over the border, in Silesia, ‘to protect “‘the freedom of election;’ Czarina has 30,000 under Marshal “Lacy, lying on the edge of Lithuania, bent on a like object; “will increase them to 50,000, as the plot thickens.

“So that Emanuel of Portugal is not heard of; and French “interference is, with a vengeance, — and Stanislaus, a born “Piast, is overwhelmingly the favourite. Intolerable to “Austria, to Russia; the reverse to Friedrich Wilhelm, who “privately thinks him the right man. And Kurfürst Au- “gust of Saxony is the other Candidate, — with troops of “his own in the distance, but without support in Poland; “and depending wholly on the Kaiser and Czarina for his “chance, And our ‘three settled points’ are gone to water “in this manner!

“August seeing there was not the least hope in Poland’s “own vote, judiciously went to the Kaiser first of all: ‘Im- “perial Majesty, I will accept your Pragmatic Sanction root “and branch, swallow it whole; make me King of Poland!’ “‘Done!’ answers Imperial Majesty;  brings the Czarina over,

* History of Stanislaus (cited above), p. 136.

 16th July 1733: Treaty in Schöll, II. 224-231.

“by good offers of August’s and his; — and now there is an “effective Opposition Candidate in the field, with strength of his “own, and good backing close at hand. Austrian, Russian “Ambassadors at Warsaw lift up their voice, like the French
“one; open their purse, and bestir themselves; but with no “success in the Field of Wola, except to the stirring up of “noise and tumult there. They must look to other fields for “success. The voice of Wola, and of Poland, if it had now
“a voice, is enthusiastic for Stanislaus.

“September 7th. A couple of quiet-looking Merchants “arrive in Warsaw, — one of whom is Stanislaus in person.
“Newspapers say he is in the French Fleet of War, which is “sailing minatory towards these Coasts: and there is in truth
“a Gentleman in Stanislaus’s Clothes on board there; — to “make the Newspapers believe. Stanislaus himself drove “through Berlin, a day or two ago; gave the sentry a ducat
“at the Gate, to be speedy with the passports, — whom “Friedrich Wilhelm affected to put under arrest for such “negligent speed. And so, on the 10th of the month, Stanis“laus being now rested and trimmed, makes his appearance “on the Field of Wola itself; and captivates all hearts by “the kind look of him. So that, on the second day after,
“12th September 1733, he is, as it were, unanimously “elected: with acclamation, with enthusiasm; and sees him“self actual King of Poland, — if France send proper back“ing to continue him there. As, surely, she will not fail?
“— But there are alarming news that the Russians are ad“vancing: Marshal Lacy with 30,000; and reinforcements in “the rear of him.

“September 22d. Russians advancing more and more,
“no French help arrived yet, and the enthusiastic Polish “Chivalry being good for nothing against regular musketry, “— King Stanislaus finds that he will have to quit Warsaw,

“and seek covert somewhere. Quits Warsaw this day; gets “covert in Dantzic. And, in fact, from this 22d of Sep“tember, day of the autumnal equinox, 1733, is a fugi“tive, blockaded, besieged Stanislaus: an Imaginary King “thenceforth. His Real Kingship had lasted precisely ten “days.

“October 3d. Lacy and his Russians arrive in the suburbs
“of Warsaw, intent upon ‘protecting freedom of election.’
“Bridges being broken, they do not yet cross the River, but “invite the free electors to come across, and vote: ‘A real “King is very necessary, — Stanislaus being an imaginary
“one, brought in by compulsion, by threats of flinging people “out of window, and the like.’ The free electors do not “cross. Whereupon a small handful, now free enough, and “not to be thrown out of window, whom Lacy had about him, “proceed to elect August of Saxony: he, on the 5th of Octo“ber, still one day within the legal six weeks, is chosen and “declared the real King; — ‘twelve senators and about six “hundred gentlemen’ voting for him there, free they in “Lacy’s quarters, the rest of Poland having lain under com“pulsion when voting for Stanislaus. That is the Polish “Election, so far as Poland can settle it. We said the Destinies “had ceased, some time since, to ask Poland for its vote; it “is other people who have now got the real power of voting.
“But that is the correct state of the poll at Warsaw, if im“portant to anybody.”

August is crowned in Cracow before long; “August III.,” whom we shall meet again in important circumstances. Lacy and his Russians have voted for August; able, they, to disperse all manner of enthusiastic Polish Chivalry; which indeed, we observe, usually stands but one volley from the Russian musketry; and flies elsewhere, to burn and plunder its own domestic enemies. Far and wide, robbery and arson are prevalent in Poland; Stanislaus lying under covert in Dantzic, — an imaginary King ever since the equinox, but well trusting that the French will give him a plumper vote. French War-fleet is surely under way hither.

Poland on fire; Dantzic stands Siege.

These are the news our Crown-Prince hears at Ruppin, in the first months of his wedded life there. With what interest we may fancy. Brandenburg is next neighbour; and these Polish troubles reach far enough; — the ever-smoking house having taken fire; and all the street threatening to get on blaze. Friedrich Wilhelm, nearest neighbour, stands anxious to quench, carefully sweeping the hot coals across again from his own borders; and will not interfere on one or the other side, for any persuasion.

Dantzic, strong in confidence of French help, refuses to give up Stanislaus when summoned; will stand siege rather. Stands siege; furious lengthy siege, — with enthusiastic defence; “a Lady of Rank firing off the first gun,” against the Russian batteries. Of the Siege of Dantzic, which made the next Spring and Summer loud for mankind (February — June 1734) we shall say nothing, — our own poor field, which also grows loud enough, lying far away from Dantzic, — except:

First, That no French help came, or as good as none; the minatory War-fleet having landed a poor 1,500 men, headed by the Comte de Plelo, who had volunteered along with them; that they attempted one onslaught on the Russian lines, and that Plelo was shot, and the rest were blown to miscellaneous ruin, and had to disappear, not once getting into Dantzig. Secondly, That the Saxons, under Weissenfels, our poor old friend, with proper siege-artillery, though not with enough, did, by effort (end of May), get upon the scene; in which this is to be remarked, that Weissenfels's siege-artillery "came by post;" two big mortars expressly passing through Berlin, marked as part of the Duke of Weissenfels's Luggage. And thirdly, That Münnich, who had succeeded Lacy as Besieging General, and was in hot haste, and had not artillery enough, made unheard-of assaults (2,000 men, some say 4,000, lost in one night-attack upon a post they call the Hagelberg; rash attack, much blamed by military men);* — but nevertheless, having now (by Russian Fleet, middle of June) got siege-artillery enough, advances irrepressibly day by day.

So that at length, things being now desperate, Stanislaus, disguised as a cattle-dealer, privately quitted Dantzig, night of 27th June 1734; got across the intricate mud-and-water difficulties of the Weichsel and its mouths, flying perilously towards Preussen and Friedrich Wilhelm's protection. Whereby the Siege of Dantzig ended in chamade, and levying of penalties; penalties severe to a degree, though Friedrich Wilhelm interceded what he could. And with the Siege of Dantzic, the blazing Polish Election went out in like manner;* — having already kindled, in quarters far away from it, conflagrations quite otherwise interesting to us. Whitherward we now hasten.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 31.

 Narrative by himself, in History, pp. 235-248.

* Clear account, especially of Siege, in Mannstein (pp. 71-83), who was there as Münnich's Aide-de- Camp.

CHAPTER IX.

KAISER'S SHADOW-HUNT HAS CAUGHT FIRE.

FRANZ of Lorraine, the young favourite of Fortune, whom we once saw at Berlin on an interesting occasion, was about this time to have married his Imperial Archduchess; Kaiser's consent to be formally demanded and given; nothing but joy and splendour looked for in the Court of Vienna at present. Nothing to prevent it, — had there been no Polish Election; had not the Kaiser, in his Shadow-Hunt (coursing the Pragmatic Sanction chiefly, as he has done these twenty years past), gone rashly into that combustible foreign element. But so it is: this was the fatal limit. The poor Kaiser's Shadow-Hunt, going scot-free this long while, and merely tormenting other people, has, at this point, by contact with inflammable Poland, unexpectedly itself caught fire; goes now plunging, all in mad flame, over precipices one knows not how deep: and there will be a lamentable singeing and smashing before the Kaiser get out of this, if he ever get! Kaiser Karl, from this point, plunges down and down, all his days; and except in that Shadow of a Pragmatic Sanction, if he can still save that, has no comfort left. Marriages are not the thing to be thought of at present! —

Scarcely had the news of August's Election, and Stanislaus's flight to Dantzic, reached France, when France, all in a state of readiness, informed the Kaiser, ready for nothing, his force lying in Silesia, doing the Election functions on the Polish borders there, "That he the Kaiser had, by such treatment of the Grandfather of France and the Polish Kingdom fairly fallen to him, insulted the most Christian Majesty; that in consequence the most Christian Majesty did hereby declare War against the said Kaiser," — and in fact had, that very day (14th October 1733), begun it. Had marched over into Lorraine, namely, secured Lorraine against accidents; and, more specially, gone across from Strasburg to the German side of the Rhine, and laid siege to Kehl. Kehl Fortress; a dilapidated outpost of the Reich there, which cannot resist many hours. Here is news for the Kaiser, with his few troops all on the Polish borders; minding his neighbour's business, or chasing Pragmatic Sanction, in those inflammable localities!

Pacific Fleury, it must be owned, if he wanted a quarrel with the Kaiser, could not have managed it on more advantageous terms. Generals, a Duc de Berwick, a Noailles, Belleisle; generals, troops, artillery, munitions, nothing is wanting to Fleury; to the Kaiser all things. It is surmised, the French had their eye on Lorraine, not on Stanislaus, from the first. For many centuries, especially for these last two, — ever since that Siege of Metz, which we once saw, under Kaiser Karl V. and Albert Alcibiades, — France has been wrenching and screwing at this Lorraine, wriggling it off bit by bit; till now, as we perceived on Lyttelton junior of Hagley's visit, Lorraine seems all lying unscrewed; and France, by any good opportunity, could stick it in her pocket. Such opportunity sly Fleury contrived, they say; — or more likely it might be Belleisle and the other adventurous spirits that urged it on pacific Fleury; but at all events, he has got it. Dilapidated Kehl yields straightway:* Sardinia, Spain declare alliance with Fleury; and not Lorraine only, and the Swabian Provinces, but Italy itself lies at his discretion, — owing to your treatment of the Grandfather of France, and these Polish Elective methods.

The astonished Kaiser rushes forward to fling himself into the arms of the Sea-Powers, his one resource left: "Help! Moneys, subsidies, ye Sea-Powers!" But the Sea-Powers stand obtuse, arms not open at all, hands buttoning their pockets: "Sorry we cannot, your Imperial Majesty. Fleury engages not to touch the Netherlands, the Barrier Treaty; Polish Elections are not our concern!" and callously decline. The Kaiser's astonishment is extreme; his big heart swelling even with a martyr-feeling; and he passionately appeals: "Ungrateful, blind Sea-Powers! No money to fight France, say you? Are the Laws of Nature fallen void?" Imperial astonishment, sublime martyr-feeling, passionate appeals to the Laws of Nature, avail nothing with the blind Sea-Powers: "No money in us," answer they: "we will help you to negotiate." — "Ne-

* 29th October 1733. Mémoires du Maréchal de Berwick (in Petitot's Collection, Paris, 1828), II. 303.

"gotiate!" answers he; and will have to pay his own Election broken-glass, with a sublime martyr-feeling, without money from the Sea-Powers.

Fleury has got the Sardinian Majesty; "Sardinian doorkeeper of the Alps," who opens them now this way, now that, for a consideration: "A slice of the Milanese, your Majesty!" bargains Fleury. Fleury has got the Spanish Majesty (our violent old friend the Termagant of Spain) persuaded to join: "Your infant Carlos, made Duke of Parma and Piacenza, with such difficulty; what is that? Naples itself, crown of the Two Sicilies, lies in the wind for Carlos; — and your junior infant, great Madam, has he no need of apanages?" The Termagant of Spain, "offended by Pragmatic Sanction" (she says), is ready on those terms; the Sardinian Majesty is ready: and Fleury, this same October, with an overwhelming force, Spaniards and Sardinians to join, invades Italy; great Marshal Villars himself taking the command. Marshal Villars, an extremely eminent old military gentleman, somewhat of a friend, or husband of a lady-friend, to M. de Voltaire, for one thing; — and capable of slicing Italy to pieces at a fine rate, in the condition it was in.

Never had Kaiser such a bill of broken glass to pay for meddling in neighbours' elections before. The year was not yet ended, when Villars and the Sardinian Majesty had done their stroke on Lombardy; taken Milan Citadel, taken Pizzighetone, the Milanese in whole, and appropriated it; swept the poor unprepared Kaiser clear out of those parts. Baby Carlos and the Spaniards are to do the Two Sicilies, Naples or the land one to begin with, were the Winter gone. For the present, Louis XV. "sings Te-deum at Paris, 23d December 1733"* — a merry Christmas there. Villars, now above fourscore, soon died of those fatigues; various Marshals, Broglie, Coigny, Noailles, succeeding him, some of whom are slightly notable to us; and there was one Maillebois, still a subordinate under them, whose name also may reappear in this History.

Subsequent Course of the War, in the Italian part of it.

The French-Austrian War, which had now broken out, lasted a couple of years; the Kaiser steadily losing, though he did his utmost; not so much a War, on his part, as a Being Beaten and Being Stript. The scene was Italy and the Upper-Rhine Country of Germany; Italy the deciding scene; where, except as it bears on Germany, our interest is nothing, as indeed in Germany too it is not much. The principal events, on both stages, are chronologically somewhat as follows; — beginning with Italy:

"March 29th, 1734. Baby Carlos with a Duke of Montemar
"for General, a difficult impetuous gentleman, very haughty
"to the French allies and others, lands in Naples Territory;
"intending to seize the Two Sicilies, according to bargain.
"They find the Kaiser quite unprepared, and their enterprise
"extremely feasible.

"May 10th, Baby Carlos, — whom we ought to call Don "Carlos, who is now eighteen gone, and able to ride the

* Fastes du Règne de Louis XV (Paris, 1766), i. 248.

“great horse, — makes triumphant entry into Naples, having “easily swept the road clear; styles himself ‘King of the Two “Sicilies’ (Papa having surrendered him his ‘right’ there); “whom Naples, in all ranks of it, willingly homages as “such. Wrecks of Kaiser’s forces intrench themselves, rather “strongly, at a place called Bitonto, in Apulia, not far off.

“May 25th. Montemar, in an impetuous manner, storms
“them there; — which feat procures for him the title, Duke “of Bitonto; and finishes off the First of the Sicilies. And “indeed, we may say, finishes Both the Sicilies; our poor “Kaiser having no considerable force in either, nor means “of sending any; the Sea-Powers having buttoned their “pockets, and the Combined Fleet of France and Spain being “on the waters there.

“We need only add, on this head, that, for ten months
“more Baby Carlos and Montemar went about besieging, “Gaeta, Messina, Syracuse; and making triumphal entries;
“— and that, on the 30th of June 1735, Baby Carlos had him“self fairly crowned at Palermo: * ‘King of the Two Sicilies’ “de facto; in which eminent post he and his continue, not with “much success, to this day.

“That will suffice for the Two Sicilies. As to Lombardy “again, now that Villars is out of it, and the Coignys and “Broglies have succeeded:

“June 29th, 1734. Kaiser, rallying desperately for reco“very of the Milanese, has sent an Army thither, Graf von “Mercy leader of it: Battle of Parma between the French
“and it (29th June); — totally lost by the Kaiser’s people, “after furious fighting; Graf von Mercy himself killed in “the action. Graf von Mercy, and what comes nearer us,
“a Prince of Culmbach, amiable Uncle of our Wilhelmina’s “Husband, a brave man and Austrian soldier, who was

* Fastes de Louis XV, i. 276.

“much regretted by Wilhelmina and the rest; his death and “obsequies making a melancholy Court of Baireuth in this “agitated year. The Kaiser, doing his utmost, is beaten at “every point.

“September 15th. Surprisal of the Secchia. Kaiser's people “rally, — under a General Graf von Königseck worth noting
“by us, — and after some manœuvring, in the Guastalla-“Modena region, on the Secchia and Po rivers there, dex-“trously steal across the Secchia that night (15th September), “cutting off the small guard-party at the ford of the Secchia,
“then wading silently; and burst in upon the French Camp
“in a truly alarming manner.* So that Broglio, in command
“there, had to gallop with only one boot on, some say ‘in his “‘shirt,’ — till he got some force rallied, and managed to “retreat more Parthian-like upon his brother Maréchal's Di“vision. Artillery, war-chest, secret correspondence, ‘King “‘of Sardinia's tent,’ and much cheering plunder beside Bro“glio's odd boot, were the consequences; the Kaiser's one “success in this War; abolished, unluckily, in four days! —
“The Broglio who here gallops is the second French Maréchal “of the name, son of the first; a military gentleman whom “we shall but too often meet in subsequent stages. A son of “this one's, a third Maréchal Broglio, present at the Secchia
“that bad night, is the famous War-god of the Bastille-time, “fifty-five years hence, — unfortunate old War-god, the Ti“tans being all up about him. As to Broglio with the one boot, “it is but a triumph over him till —

“September 19th. Battle of Guastalla, that day. Battle “lost by the Kaiser's people, after eight hours hot fighting;
“who are then obliged to hurry across the Secchia again; —
“and in fact do not succeed in fighting any more in that “quarter, this year or afterwards. For, next year (1785),

* Hormayr, xx. 84; Fastes, as it is liable to do, misdates.

"Montemar is so advanced with the Two Sicilies, he can "assist in these Northern operations; and Noailles, a better
"Maréchal, replaces the Broglio and Coigny there; who,
"with learned strategic movements, sieges, threatenings of
"siege, sweeps the wrecks of Austria, to a satisfactory degree,
"into the Tyrol, without fighting, or event mentionable
"thenceforth.

"This is the Kaiser's War of two Campaigns, in the Italian,
"which was the decisive, part of it: a continual Being Beaten,
"as the reader sees; a Being Stript, till one was nearly bare
"in that quarter."

Course of the War, in the German part of it.

In Germany the mentionable events are still fewer;
and indeed, but for one small circumstance binding on us, we might skip them altogether. For there is nothing comfortable in it to the human memory otherwise.

Maréchal Duc de Berwick, a cautious considerable General (Marlborough's Nephew, on what terms is known to readers), having taken Kehl and plundered the Swabian outskirts last Winter, had extensive plans of operating in the heart of Germany, and ruining the Kaiser there. But first he needs, and the Kaiser is aware of it, a "basis on the Rhine;" free bridge over the Rhine, not by Strasburg and Kehl alone: and for this reason, he will have to besiege and capture Philipsburg first of all. Strong Town of Philipsburg, well down towards Speyer-and-Heidelberg quarter on the German side of the Rhine:* here will be our bridge.
Lorraine is already occupied, since the first day of the

* Map at p. 80.

War; Trarbach, strong-place of the Moselle and Electorate of Trier, cannot be difficult to get. Thus were the Rhine Country, on the French side, secure to France; and so Berwick calculates he will have a basis on the Rhine, from which to shoot forth into the very heart of the Kaiser.

Berwick besieged Philipsburg accordingly (Summer and Autumn 1734); Kaiser doing his feeble best to hinder: at the Siege, Berwick lost his life, but Philipsburg surrendered to his successor, all the same; — Kaiser striving to hinder; but in a most paralysed manner, and to no purpose whatever. And — and this properly was the German War; the sum of all done in it during those two years.

Seizure of Nanci (that is, of Lorraine), seizure of Kehl we already heard of; then, prior to Philipsburg, there was siege or seizure of Trarbach by the French; and, posterior to it, seizure of Worms by them; — and by the Germans, there was “burning of a magazine in Speyer by bombs.” And, in brief, on both sides, there was marching and manœuvring under various generals (our old rusty Seckendorf one of them), till the end of 1735, when the Italian decision arrived, and Truce and Peace along with it; but there was no other action worth naming, even in the Newspapers as a wonder of nine days. The Siege of Philipsburg, and what hung flickering round that operation, before and after, was the sum-total of the German War.

Philipsburg, key of the Rhine in those parts, has had many sieges; nor would this one merit the least history from us, were it not for one circumstance: That our Crown-Prince was of the Opposing Army, and made his first experience of arms there. A Siege of Philipsburg slightly memorable to us, on that one account. What Friedrich did there, which in the military way was as good as nothing; what he saw and experienced there, which, with some "eighty Princes of the Reich," a Prince Eugene for General, and three months under canvas on the field, may have been something: this, in outline, by such obscure indications as remain, we would fain make conceivable to the reader. Indications, in the History Books, we have as good as none; but must gather what there is from Wilhelmina and the Crown-Prince's Letters, — much studying to be brief, were it possible!

CHAPTER X.

CROWN-PRINCE GOES TO THE RHINE CAMPAIGN.

THE Kaiser, — with Kehl snatched from him, the Rhine open, and Louis XV. singing Te-deum in the Christmas-time for what Villars in Italy had done, — applied, in passionate haste, to the Reich. The Reich, though Fleury tried to cajole it, and apologise for taking Kehl from it, declares for the Kaiser's quarrel; War against France on his behalf;* — it was in this way that Friedrich Wilhelm and our Crown-Prince came to be concerned in the Rhine Campaign. The Kaiser will have a Reichs-Army (were it good for much, as is not likely) to join to his own Austrian one. And if Prince Eugene, who is Reichs-Feldmarschall, one of the two Feldmarschalls, get the Generalship as men hope, it is not doubted but there will be great work on the Rhine, this summer of 1734.

Unhappily the Reichs-Army, raised from multifarious contingents, and guided and provided for by many heads, is usually good for little. Not to say that old Kur-Pfalz, with an eye to French help in the Berg-and-Jülich matter; old Kur-Pfalz, and the Bavarian set (Kur-Baiern and Kur-Köln, Bavaria and Cologne, who are Brothers, and of old cousinship to Kur-Pfalz), — quite refuse their contingents; protest in the Diet, and openly have French leanings. These are bad omens for the Reichs-Army. And in regard to the Reichs-Feldmarschall Office, there also is a difficulty. The Reich, as we hinted, keeps two supreme Feldmarschalls; one Catholic, one Protestant, for equilibrium's sake: illustrious Prince Eugenio von Savoye is the Catholic; — but as to the Protestant, it is a difficulty worth observing for a moment.

* 13th March 1734 (Buchholz, i. 131).

Old Duke Eberhard Ludwig of Würtemberg, the unfortunate old gentleman bewitched by the Grävenitz "Deliver us from evil," used to be the Reichs-Feldmarschall of Protestant persuasion; — Commander-in-Chief for the Reich, when it tried fighting. Old Eberhard had been at Blenheim, and had marched up and down: I never heard he was much of a General; perhaps good enough for the Reich, whose troops were always bad. But now that poor Duke, as we intimated once or more, is dead; there must be, of Protestant type, a new Reichs-Feldmarschall had. One Catholic, unequalled among Captains, we already have; but where is the Protestant, Duke Eberhard being dead?

Duke Eberhard's Successor in Würtemberg, Karl Alexander by name, whom we once dined with at Prag on the Kladrup journey, he, a General of some worth, would be a natural person. Unluckily Duke Karl Alexander had, while an Austrian Officer and without outlooks upon Protestant Würtemberg, gone over to Papacy, and is now Catholic. "Two Catholic Feldmarschalls!" cries the Corpus Evangelicorum; "that will never do!"

Feb.-June 1734.

Well, on the other or Protestant side, there appear two Candidates; one of them not much expected by the reader: no other than Ferdinand Duke of Brunswick-Bevern, our Crown-Prince's Father-in-law; whom we knew to be a worthy man, but did not know to be much of a soldier, or capable of these ambitious views. He is Candidate First. Then there is a Second, much more entitled: our gunpowder friend the Old Dessauer; who, to say nothing of his soldier qualities, has promises from the Kaiser, — he surely were the man, if it did not hurt other people's feelings. But it surely does and will. There is Ferdinand of Bevern applying, upon the score of old promises too. How can people's feelings be saved? Protestants these two last: but they cannot both have it; and what will Würtemberg say to either of them? The Reich was in very great affliction about this preliminary matter. But Friedrich Wilhelm steps in with a healing recipe: "Let there be Four Reichs-Feldmarschalls," said Friedrich Wilhelm; "Two Protestant and two Catholic: won't that do?" — Excellent! answers the Reich: and there are Four Feldmarschalls for the time being; no lack of commanders to the Reichs-Army. Brunswick-Bevern tried it first; but only till Prince Eugene were ready, and indeed he had of himself come to nothing before that date. Prince Eugene next; then Karl Alexander next; and in fact they all might have had a stroke at commanding, and at coming to nothing or little, — only the Old Dessauer sulked at the office in this its fourfold state, and never would fairly have it, till, by decease of occupants, it came to be twofold again. This glimpse into the distracted effete interior of the poor old Reich and its Politics, with friends of ours concerned there, let it be welcome to the reader.*

Friedrich Wilhelm was without concern in this War, or in what had led to it. Practical share in the Polish Election (after that preliminary theoretic program of the Kaiser's and Czarina's went to smoke) Friedrich Wilhelm steadily refused to take; though considerable offers were made him on both sides, — offer of West Preussen (Polish part of Prussia, which once was known to us) on the French side. But his primary fixed resolution was to stand out of the quarrel: and he abides by that; suppresses any wishes of his own in regard to the Polish Election; — keeps ward on his own frontiers, with good military besom in hand, to sweep it out again if it intruded there. "What King you like, in God's name; only don't come over my threshold with his brabbles and him!"

But seeing the Kaiser got into actual French War, with the Reich consenting, he is bound, by Treaty of old date (date older than Wusterhausen, though it was confirmed on that famous occasion), "To assist the Kaiser with ten thousand men;" and this engagement he intends amply to fulfil. No sooner, therefore, had the Reich given sure signs of assenting ("Reich's assent" is the condition of the ten thousand), than Friedrich Wilhelm's orders were out, "Be in readiness!" Friedrich Wilhelm, by the time of the Reich's actual assent, or Declaration of War on the Kaiser's behalf, has but to lift his finger: squadrons and battalions, out of Pommern, out of Magdeburg, out of Preussen, to the due amount, will get on march whitherward you bid, and be with you there at the day you indicate, almost at the hour. Captains, not of an imaginary nature, these are always busy; and the King himself is busy over them. From big guns and wagon-horses down to gun-flints and gaiter-straps, all is marked in registers; nothing is wanting, nothing out of its place at any time, in Friedrich Wilhelm's Army.

* Leopoldi von Anhalt-Dessau Leben (by Ranfft), p. 127; Buchholz, i. 131.

 By De la Chétardie, French Ambassador at Berlin (Buchholz, i. 130).

From an early period, the French intentions upon Philipsburg might be foreseen or guessed: and in the end of March, Maréchal Berwick, "in three divisions," fairly appears in that quarter; his purpose evident. So that the Reichs-Army, were it in the least ready, ought to rendezvous, and reinforce the handful of Austrians there. Friedrich Wilhelm's part of the Reichs-Army does accordingly straightway get on march; leaves Berlin, after the due reviewing, "8th April: "* eight regiments of it, three of Horse and five of Foot, Goltz Foot-regiment one of them; — a General Röder, unexceptionable General, to command in chief; — and will arrive, though the farthest off, "first of all the Reich's Contingents;" 7th of June, namely. The march, straight south, must be some four hundred miles.

* Fassmann, p. 495.

Besides the Official Generals, certain high military dignitaries, Schulenburg, Bredow, Majesty himself at their head, propose to go as volunteers; — especially the Crown-Prince, whose eagerness is very great, has got liberty to go. “As volunteer” he too: as Colonel of Goltz, it might have had its unsuitabilities, in etiquette and otherwise. Few volunteers are more interested than the Crown-Prince. Watching the great War-theatre uncurtain itself in this manner, from Dantzic down to Naples; and what his own share in it shall be: this, much more than his Marriage, I suppose, has occupied his thoughts since that event. Here out of Ruppin, dating six or seven weeks before the march of the Ten Thousand, is a small sign, one among many, of his outlooks in this matter. Small Note to his Cousin, Margraf Heinrich, — the ill-behaved Margraf, much his comrade, who is always falling into scrapes; and whom he has just, not without difficulty, got delivered out of something of the kind.* He writes in German, and in the intimate style of Thou:

“Ruppin, 23d February 1734. My dear Brother, — I can “with pleasure answer that the King has spoken of thee altogether favourably to me” (scrape now abolished, for the time): — “and I think it would not have an ill effect, wert thou to apply for leave to go with the Ten Thousand whom he is sending to the Rhine, and do the Campaign with them as volunteer. I am myself going with that Corps; so I doubt not the King would allow thee.

* (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, pp. 8, 9.

"I take the freedom to send herewith a few bottles of "Champagne; and wish" all manner of good things.

"FRIDERICH."*

This Margraf Heinrich goes; also his elder Brother, Margraf Friedrich Wilhelm, — who long persecuted Wilhelmina with his hopes; and who is now about getting Sophie Dorothee, a junior Princess, much better than he merits: Betrothal is the week after these Ten Thousand march;  he thirty, she fifteen. He too will go; as will the other pair of Cousin Margraves, — Karl, who was once our neighbour in Cüstrin; and the Younger Friedrich Wilhelm, whose fate lies at Prag if he knew it. Majesty himself will go as volunteer. Are not great things to be done, with Eugene for General? — To understand the insignificant Siege of Philipsburg, sum-total of the Rhine Campaign, which filled the Crown-Prince's and so many other minds brimful, that Summer, and is now wholly out of every mind, the following Excerpt may be admissible:

"The unlucky little Town of Philipsburg, key of the "Rhine in that quarter, fortified under difficulties by old Bi"shops of Speyer, who sometimes resided there,  has been "dismantled and refortified, has had its Rhine-bridge torn "down and set up again; been garrisoned now by this party,
"now by that, 'having right of garrison there;' nay France
"has sometimes had 'the right of garrison;' — and the poor
"little Town has suffered much, and been tumbled sadly

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 10.

 16th April 1734 (Ib. part 1st, p. 14n).

 Köhler: Münzbelastigungen, vi. 169.

“about in the Succession-Wars and perpetual controversies “between France and Germany in that quarter. In the time “we are speaking of, it has a ‘flying-bridge’ (of I know not “what structure), with fortified ‘bridge-head (tête-de-pont)’,
“on the western or France-ward side of the River. Town’s “Bulwarks, and complex engineering defences, are of good “strength, all put in repair for this occasion: ~~Reich~~ and Kai“ser have an effective garrison there, and a commandant “determined on defence to the uttermost: — what the un“fortunate Inhabitants, perhaps a thousand or so in number, “thought or did under such a visitation of ruin and bomb-“shells, History gives not the least hint anywhere. ‘Quite “used to it!’ thinks History, and attends to other points.

“The Rhine Valley here is not of great breadth: eastward
“the heights rise to be mountainous in not many miles. By “way of defence to this Valley, in the Eugene-Marlborough “Wars, there was, about forty miles southward, or higher “up the River than Philipsburg, a military line or chain of “posts; going from Stollhofen, a boggy hamlet on the Rhine,
“with cunning indentations, and learned concatenation of bog
“and bluff, up into the inaccessibilities, — Lines of Stollhofen,
“the name of it, — which well-devised barrier did good service
“for certain years. It was not till, I think, the fourth year
“of their existence, year 1707, that Villars, the same Villars “who is now in Italy, ‘stormed the Lines of Stollhofen;’ which “made him famous that year.

“The Lines of Stollhofen have now, in 1734, fallen flat
“again; but Eugene remembers them, and, I could guess,
“it was he who suggests a similar expedient. At all events,
“there is a similar expedient fallen upon; Lines of Ettlingen
“this time; one half nearer Philipsburg; running from Mühl-“burg on the Rhine-brink up to Ettlingen in the Hills.*

* Map at p. 80.

“Nearer, by twenty miles; and, I guess, much more slightly “done. We shall see these Lines of Ettlingen, one point of “them, for a moment: — and they would not be worth men“tioning at all, except that in careless Books they too are “called Lines of Stollhofen,* and the ingenuous reader is sent “wandering on his map to no purpose.”

“Lines of Ettlingen” they are; related, as now said, to the Stollhofen set. Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick-Bevern, one of the Four Feldmarschalls, has some ineffectual handful of Imperial troops dotted about, within these Lines and on the skirts of Philipsburg; — eagerly waiting till the Reichs-Army gather to him; otherwise he must come to nothing. Will at any rate, I should think, be happy to resign in favour of Prince Eugene, were that little hero once on the ground.

On Mayday, Maréchal Berwick, who has been awake in this quarter, “in three divisions,” for a month past, — very impatient till Belleisle with the first division should have taken Trarbach, and made the Western interior parts secure, — did actually cross the Rhine, with his second division, “at Fort Louis,” well up the River, well south of Philipsburg; intending to attack the Lines of Ettlingen, and so get in upon the Town.
There is a third division, about to lay pontoons for itself a good way farther down, which shall attack the Lines simultaneously from within, — that is to say, shall come upon the back of poor Bevern and his de-

* Wilhelmina (ii. 206), for instance; who, or whose Printer, calls them “Lines of Stokoff” even.

fensive handful of troops, and astonish him there. All prospers to Berwick in this matter: Noailles his lieutenant (not yet gone to Italy till next year), with whom is Maurice Comte de Saxe (afterwards Maréchal de Saxe), an excellent observant Officer, marches up to Ettlingen, May 3d; bivouacks "at the base of the mountain" (no great things of a mountain); ascends the same in two columns, horse and foot, by the first sunlight next morning; forms on a little plain on the top; issues through a thin wood, — and actually beholds those same Lines of Ettlingen, the outmost eastern end of them: a somewhat inconsiderable matter after all! Here is Noailles's own account:

"These retrenchments, made in Turk fashion, consisted "of big trees set zigzag (en échequier), twisted together by the "branches; the whole about five fathoms thick. Inside of it "were a small forlorn of Austrians: these steadily await our "grenadiers, and do not give their volley till we are close.
 "Our grenadiers receive their volley; clear the intertwisted "trees, after receiving a second volley (total loss seventy-five "killed and wounded); and — the enemy quits his post; and
 "the Lines of Ettlingen *are stormed! This is not like storm-
 "ing the Lines of Stollhofen; a thing to make Noailles famous "in the Newspapers for a year. But it was a useful small "feat, and well enough performed on his part. The truth is,
 "Berwick was about attacking the Lines simultaneously on "the other or Mühlburg end of them (had not Noailles, now
 "victorious, galloped to forbid); and what was far more con"siderable, those other French, to the northward, 'upon

* Noailles, Mémoires (in Petitot's Collection), iii. 207.

“pontoons,’ are fairly across; like to be upon the back of “Duke Ferdinand and his handful of defenders. Duke Fer“dinand perceives that he is come to nothing; hastily collects “his people from their various posts; retreats with them that “same night, unpursued, to Heilbronn; and gives up the “command to Prince Eugene, who is just arrived there, — “who took quietly two pinches of snuff on hearing this news of “Ettlingen, and said, ‘No matter, after all!’”

Berwick now forms the Siege, at his discretion; invests Philipsburg, 13th May;* begins firing, night of the 3d-4th June; — Eugene waiting at Heilbronn till the Reichs-Army come up. The Prussian Ten Thousand do come, all in order, on the 7th; the rest by degrees, all later, and all not quite in order. Eugene, the Prussians having joined him, moves down towards Philipsburg and its cannonading; encamps, close to rearward of the besieging French. “Camp of Wiesenthal” they call it; Village of Wiesenthal with bogs, on the left, being his head-quarters; Village of Waghäusel, down near the River, a two-miles distance, being his limit on the right. Berwick, in front, industriously battering Philipsburg into the River, has thrown up strong lines behind him, strongly manned, to defend himself from Eugene; across the River, Berwick has one Bridge, and at the farther end one battery with which he plays upon the rear of Philipsburg. He is much criticised by unoccupied people, “Eugene’s attack will ruin us on those terms!” — and much incommoded by overflowings of the Rhine; Rhine swoln by melting of the mountain-

* Berwick, ii. 312; 23d, says Noailles’s Editor (iii. 210).

snows, as is usual there. Which inundations Berwick had well foreseen, though the War-minister at Paris would not: "Haste?" answered the War-minister always "We shall be in right time. I tell you there have fallen no snows this winter: how can inundation be?" — "Depends on the heat," said Berwick; "there are snows enough always in stock up there!"

And so it proves, though the War-minister would not believe; and Berwick has to take the inundations, and to take the circumstances; — and to try if, by his own continual best exertions, he can but get Philipsburg into the bargain. On the 12th of June, visiting his posts, as he daily does, the first thing, Berwick stept out of the trenches, anxious for clear view of something; stept upon "the crest of the sap," a place exposed to both French and Austrian batteries, and which had been forbidden to the soldiers, — and there, as he anxiously scanned matters through his glass, a cannon-ball, unknown whether French or Austrian, shivered away the head of Berwick; left others to deal with the criticisms, and the inundations, and the operations big or little, at Philipsburg and elsewhere! Siege went on, better or worse, under the next in command; "Paris in great anxiety," say the Books.

It is a hot siege, a stiff defence; Prince Eugene looks on, but does not attack in the way apprehended. Southward in Italy, we hear there is marching, strategizing in the Parma Country; Count von Mercy likely to come to an action before long. Northward, Dantzic by this time is all wrapt in fire-whirlwinds; its sallyings and outer defences all driven in; mere torrents of Russian bombs raining on it day and night; French auxiliaries, snapt up at landing, are on board Russian ships; and poor Stanislaus and "the Lady of Quality who shot the first gun" have a bad outlook there. Towards the end of the month, the Berlin volunteer Generals, our Crown-Prince and his Margraves among them, are getting on the road for Philipsburg, — and that is properly the one point we are concerned with. Which took effect in manner following.

Tuesday evening 29th June, there is Ball at Monbijou; the Crown-Prince and others busy dancing there, as if nothing special lay ahead. Nevertheless, at three in the morning, he has changed his ball-dress for a better, he and certain more; and is rushing southward, with his volunteer Generals and Margraves, full speed, saluted by the rising sun, towards Philipsburg and the Seat of War. And the same night, King Stanislaus, if any of us cared for him, is on flight from Dantzic, "disguised as a cattle-dealer;" got out on the night of Sunday last, Town under such a rain of bombshells being palpably too hot for him: got out, but cannot get across the muddy intricacies of the Weichsel; lies painfully squatted up and down, in obscure alehouses, in that Stygian Mud-Delta, — a matter of life and death to get across, and not a boat to be had, such the vigilance of the Russian. Dantzic is capitulating, dreadful penalties exacted, all the heavier as no Stanislaus is to be found in it; and search, all the keener, rises in the Delta after him. Through perils and adventures of the sort usual on such occasions,* Stanislaus does get across; and in time does reach Preussen; where, by Friedrich Wilhelm's order, safe opulent asylum is afforded him, till the Fates (when this War ends) determine what is to become of the poor Imaginary Majesty. We leave him, squatted in the intricacies of the Mud-Delta, to follow our Crown-Prince, who in the same hour is rushing far elsewhither.

Margraves, Generals and he, in their small string of carriages, go on, by extra-post, day and night; no rest till they get to Hof, in the Culmbach neighbourhood, a good two hundred miles off, — near Wilhelmina, and more than half-way to Philipsburg. Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm is himself to follow in about a week: he has given strict order against waste of time: "Not to part company; go together, and not by Anspach or Baireuth," — though they lie almost straight for you.

This latter was a sore clause to Friedrich, who had counted all along on seeing his dear faithful Wilhelmina, as he passed: therefore, as the Papa's Orders, dangerous penalty lying in them, cannot be literally disobeyed, the question rises, How see Wilhelmina and not Baireuth? Wilhelmina, weak as she is and unfit for travelling, will have to meet him in some neutral place, suitablest for both. After various shiftings, it has been settled between them that Berneck, a little Town twelve miles from Baireuth on the Hof road, will do; and that

* Credible modest detail of them, in a Letter from Stanislaus himself (History of Stanislaus, already cited: pp. 235-248).

Friday, probably early, will be the day. Wilhelmina accordingly, is on the road that morning, early enough; Husband with her, and ceremonial attendants, in honour of such a Brother: morning is of sultry windless sort; day hotter and hotter; — at Berneck is no Crown-Prince, in the House appointed for him; hour after hour, Wilhelmina waits there in vain. The truth is, one of the smallest accidents has happened: the Generals “lost a wheel at Gera yesterday;” were left behind there with their smiths, have not yet appeared; and the insoluble question among Friedrich and the Margraves is, “We dare not go on without them, then? We dare; — dare we?” Question like to drive Friedrich mad, while the hours, at any rate, are slipping on! Here are Three Letters of Friedrich, legible at last; which, with Wilhelmina’s account from the other side, represent a small entirely human scene in this French-Austrian War, — nearly all of human we have found in the beggarly affair:

1. To Princess Wilhelmina, at Baireuth, or on the Road to Berneck.

“Hof, 2d July” (not long after 4 A.M.) “1734.”

“My dear Sister, — Here am I within six leagues” (say eight or more, twenty-five miles English) “of a Sister whom “I love; and I have to decide that it will be impossible to see “her after all!” — Does decide so accordingly, for reasons known to us.

“I have never so lamented the misfortune of not depending “on myself as at this moment! The King being but very sour- “sweet on my score, I dare not risk the least thing: Monday

"come a week, when he arrives himself, I should have a pretty "scene (serais joliment traité) in the Camp, if I were found to "have disobeyed orders!

* * "The Queen commands me to give you a thousand "regards from her. She appeared much affected at your illness;
 "ness; but for the rest, I could not warrant you how since
 "it was; for she is totally changed, and I have quite lost
 "reckoning of her (n'y connais rien). That goes so far that she "has done me hurt with the King, all she could: however "that is over now. As to Sophie" (young Sister just betrothed
 "to the eldest Margraf whom you know), "she also is no longer
 "the same; for she approves all that the Queen says or does
 "and she is charmed with her big clown (gros nigaud) of her "Bridegroom.

"The King is more difficult than ever: he is content with "nothing, so as to have lost whatsoever could be called
 "gratitude for all pleasures one can do him," — marrying
 "against one's will, and the like. "As to his health, it is every "day better, another worse; but the legs, they are always "swelled. Judge what my joy must be to get out of this "turpitude, — for the King will only stay a fortnight, at most
 "in the Camp.

"Adieu, my adorable Sister: I am so tired, I cannot stay
 "having left on Tuesday night, or rather Wednesday morning
 "going at three o'clock, from a Ball at Monbijou, and arriving "here this Friday morning at four. I recommend myself to your "gracious remembrance; and am, for my own part, till death
 "dearest Sister," — Your — "FRIEDRICH." *

This is Letter First; written, Friday morning, on the the edge of getting into bed, after such fatigue; and has, as natural in that mood, given up the matter despair. It did not meet Wilhelmina on the road; and she had left Baireuth; — where it met her, I do not know; probably at home, on her return, when all was over. Let Wilhelmina now speak her own lively experiences, of that same Friday:

“I got to Berneck at ten. The heat was excessive; I found “myself quite worn out with the little journey I had done. I “alighted at the House which had been got ready for my “Brother. We waited for him, and in vain waited, till “three in the afternoon. At three we lost patience; had “dinner served without him. Whilst we were at table, there “came on a frightful thunderstorm. I have witnessed nothing “so terrible: the thunder roared and reverberated among “the rocky cliffs which begirdle Berneck; and it seemed as if “the world was going to perish: a deluge of rain succeeded “the thunder.

“It was four o'clock; and I could not understand what had “become of my Brother. I had sent out several persons on “horseback to get tidings of him, and none of them came “back. At length, in spite of all my prayers, the Hereditary “Prince” (my excellent Husband) “himself would go in “search. I remained waiting till nine at night, and nobody “returned. I was in cruel agitations: these cataracts of “rain are very dangerous in the mountain countries; the “roads get suddenly overflowed, and there often happen mis“fortunes. I thought, for certain, there had one happened “to my Brother or to the Hereditary Prince.” Such a 2d of July to poor Wilhelmina!

“At last, about nine, somebody brought word that my “Brother had changed his route, and was gone to Culmbach”
(a House of ours, lying westward, known to readers); “there

“to stay over night. I was for setting out thither, — Culmbach is twenty miles from Berneck; but the roads are frightful,” White Mayn, still a young River, dashing through the rock-labyrinths there, “and full of precipices: — every body rose in opposition; and, whether I would or not, they put me into the carriage for Himmelkron” (partly on the road thither), “which is only about ten miles off. We had like to have got drowned on the road; the waters were so swoln” (White Mayn and its angry brooks), “the horses could not cross but by swimming.

“I arrived at last, about one in the morning. I instantly threw myself on a bed. I was like to die with weariness; and in mortal terrors that something had happened to my Brother or the Hereditary Prince. This latter relieved me on his own score; he arrived at last, about four o’clock, — had still no news farther of my Brother. I was beginning to doze a little, when they came to warn me that ‘M. von Knobelsdorf wished to speak with me from the Prince Royal.’ I darted out of bed, and ran to him. He,” handing me a Letter, “brought word that” —

But let us now give Letter Second, which has turned up lately, and which curiously completes the picture here. Friedrich, on rising refreshed with sleep at Hof, had taken a cheerfuller view; and the Generals still lagging rearward, he thinks it possible to see Wilhelmina after all. Possible; and yet so very dangerous, — perhaps not possible? Here is a second Letter written from Münchberg, some fifteen miles farther on, at an after period of the same Friday: purport still of a perplexed nature, “I will, and I dare not;” — practical outcome, of itself uncertain, is scattered now by torrents and thunderstorms. This is the Letter, which Knobelsdorf now hands to Wilhelmina at that untimely hour of Saturday:

2. To Princess Wilhelmina (by Knobelsdorf).

"Münchberg, 2d July 1734.

"My dearest Sister, — I am in despair that I cannot satisfy
"my impatience and my duty, — to throw myself at your feet
"this day. But alas, dear Sister, it does not depend on me:
"we poor Princes," the Margraves and I, "are obliged to "wait here till our Generals" (Bredow, Schulenburg and Company) "come up; we dare not go along without them. They "broke a wheel in Gera" (fifty miles behind us); "hearing nothing of them since, we are absolutely forced to wait here.
"Judge in what a mood I am, and what sorrow must be mine!
"Express order not to go by Baireuth or Anspach: — forbear,
"dear Sister, to torment me on things not depending on myself at all!

"I waver between hope and fear of paying my court to "you. I hope it might still be at Berneck," this evening, —
"if you could contrive a road into the Nürnberg Highway
"again; avoiding Baireuth: otherwise I dare not go. The "Bearer, who is Captain Knobelsdorf" (excellent judicious man, old acquaintance from the Cüstrin time, who attends upon us, actual Captain once, but now titular merely, given to architecture and the fine arts*), "will apprise you of every "particular: let Knobelsdorf settle something that may be "possible. This is how I stand at present; and instead of "having to expect some favour from the King" (after what I have done by his order), "I get nothing but chagrin. But what "is crueller upon me than all, is that you are ill. God, in "his grace, be pleased to help you, and restore the pre"cious health which I so much wish you!" * *

* Seyfarth (Anonymous): Lebens- und Regierungs-Geschichte Friedrichs des Andern (Leipzig, 1786), II. 200. Œuvres de Frédéric, VII. 33. Preuss: Friedrich mit seinen Verwandten (Berlin, 1838); pp. 8, 11.

"FRIEDRICH."*

Judicious Knobelsdorf settles that the meeting is to be this very morning at eight; Wilhelmina (whose memory a little fails her in the insignificant points) does not tell us where: but, by faint indications, I perceive it was in the Lake-House, pleasant Pavilion in the ancient artificial Lake, or big ornamental Fish-pond, called Brandenburger Weiher, a couple of miles to the north of Baireuth: there Friedrich is to stop, — keeping the Paternal Order from the teeth outwards, in this manner. Eight o'clock: so that Wilhelmina is obliged at once to get upon the road again, — poor Princess, after such a day and night. Her description of the interview is very good:

"My Brother overwhelmed me with caresses; but found
"me in so pitiable a state, he could not restrain his tears. I "was not able to stand on my limbs; and felt like to faint
"every moment, so weak was I. He told me the King was "much angered at the Margraf" (my Father-in-Law) "for "not letting his Son make the Campaign," — concerning which point, said Son, my Husband, being Heir-Apparent, there had been much arguing in Court and Country, here at Baireuth, and endless anxiety on my poor part, lest he should get killed in the Wars. "I told him all the Margraf's reasons;

“and added, that surely they were good, in respect of my “dear Husband. ‘Well,’ said he, ‘let him quit soldiering then,
“and give back his regiment to the King. But for the rest, “quiet yourself as to the fears you may have about him if he “do go; for I know, by certain information, that there will “be no blood spilt.’ — ‘They are at the Siege of Philipsburg, “however.’ — ‘Yes,’ said my Brother; ‘but there will not be “a Battle risked to hinder it.’”

“The Hereditary Prince,” my Husband, “came in while “we were talking so; and earnestly entreated my Brother to “get him away from Baireuth. They went to a window, and “talked a long time together. In the end, my Brother told “me he would write a very obliging Letter to the Margraf,
“and give him such reasons in favour of the Campaign, that “he doubted not it would turn the scale. ‘We will stay to“gether,’ said he, addressing the Hereditary Prince; ‘and “I shall be charmed to have my dear Brother always beside “me.’ He wrote the Letter; gave it to Baron Stein” (Chamberlain or Goldstick of ours), “to deliver to the Margraf. He “promised to obtain the King’s express leave to stop at Bai“reuth on his return; — after which he went away. It was the “last time I saw him on the old footing with me: he has much “changed since then! — We returned to Baireuth; where I “was so ill that, for three days, they did not think I should “get over it.”*

Crown-Prince dashes off, southwestward, through cross country, into the Nürnberg Road again; gets to Nürnberg that same Saturday night; and there, among other Letters, writes the following; which will wind up this little Incident for us, still in a human manner:

* Wilhelmina, ii. 200-202.

3. To Princess Wilhelmina, at Baireuth.

"Nürnberg, 3d July 1734.

"My dearest (très-chère) Sister, — It would be impossible
"to quit this place without signifying, dearest Sister, my "lively gratitude for all the marks of favour you showed me
"in the Weiherhaus" (House on the Lake, today). "The "highest of all that it was possible to do, was that of pro"curing me the satisfaction of paying my court to you. I beg
"millions of pardons for so putting you about, dearest Sister;
"but I could not help it; for you know my sad circumstances
"well enough. In my great joy, I forgot to give you the "Enclosed. I entreat you, write me often, news of your "health! Question the Doctors; and" — and in certain contingencies, the Crown-Prince "would recommend goat's milk" for his poor Sister. Had already, what was noted of him in after-life, a tendency to give medical advice, in cases interesting to him? —

"Adieu, my incomparable and dear Sister. I am always
"the same to you, and will remain so till my death.

"FRIEDRICH." *

Generals with their wheel mended, Margraves,
Prince, and now the Camp-Equipage too, are all at Nürnberg; and start on the morrow; hardly a hundred miles now to be done, — but on slower terms, owing to the Equipage. Heilbronn, place-of-arms or central stronghold of the Reichs-Army, they reach on Monday:
about Eppingen, next night, if the wind is westerly, one may hear the cannon, — not without interest. It was Wednesday forenoon, 7th July 1734, on some

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 57.

hill-top coming down from Eppingen side, that the Prince first saw Philipsburg Siege, blotting the Rhine-Valley yonder with its fire and counterfire; and the Tents of Eugene stretching on this side: first view he ever had of the actualities of war. His account to Papa is so distinct and good, we look through it almost as at first-hand for a moment:

“Camp at Wiesenthal, Wednesday, 7th July 1734.

“Most All-gracious Father, * * We left Nürnberg” (nothing said of our Baireuth affair), “4th early, and did not stop till Heilbronn; where, along with the Equipage, I arrived on the 5th. Yesterday I came with the Equipage to Eppingen” (twenty miles, a slow march, giving the fourgons time); “and this morning we came to the Camp at Wiesenthal. I have dined with General Röder” (our Prussian Commander); “and, after dinner, rode with Prince Eugene while giving the parole. I handed him my All-gracious Father’s Letter, which much rejoiced him. After the Parole, I went to see the relieving of our outposts” (change of sentries there), “and view the French retrenchment.

“We,” your Majesty’s Contingent, “are throwing up three redoubts: at one of them today, three musketeers have been miserably shot” (geschossen, wounded, not quite killed); “two are of Röder’s, and one is of Finckenstein’s regiment.

“Tomorrow I will ride to a village which is on our right wing; Waghäusel is the name of it” * (not a mile off, north of us, near by the Rhine): “there is a steeple there, from which one can see the French Camp; from this point I will

* Büsching, v. 1152.

"ride down, between the two Lines," French and ours, "to see what they are like.

"There are quantities of hurdles and fascines being made ; which, as I hear, are to be employed in one of two different plans. The first plan is, To attack the French retrenchment generally; the ditch which is before it, and the morass which lies on our left wing, to be made passable with these fascines. The other plan is, To amuse the Enemy by a false attack, and throw succour into the Town. — One thing is certain, in a few days we shall have a stroke of work here. Happen what may, my All-gracious Father may be assured that" &c., "and that I will do nothing unworthy of him." —
"FRIEDRICH."*

Neither of those fine plans took effect; nor did anything take effect, as we shall see. But in regard to that "survey from the steeple of Waghäusel, and ride home again between the Lines," — in regard to that, or, at any rate, in the suite of that, — here is an authentic fraction of anecdote, which should be introduced. A certain Herr von Suhm, Saxon Minister at Berlin, occasionally mentioned here, stood in much Correspondence with the Crown-Prince in the years now following: Correspondence which was all published at the due distance of time; Suhm having, at his decease, left the Prince's Letters carefully assorted with that view, and furnished with a Prefatory "Character of the Prince-Royal (Portrait du Prince-Royal, par M. de Suhm)."

Of which Preface this is a small paragraph, relating to the Siege of Philipsburg; offering us a momentary glance into one fibre of the futile War now going on there. Of Suhm, and how exact he was, we shall know a little by and by. Of "Prince von Lichtenstein," an Austrian man and soldier of much distinction afterwards, we have only to say that he came to Berlin next year on Diplomatic business, and that probably enough he had been eye-witness to the little fact, — fact credible perhaps without much proving. We are sorry there is no date to it, no detail to give it whereabouts and fixity in our conception: the poor little Anecdote, though indubitable, has to hang vaguely in the air. However, these words, "Lines of Philipsburg and Crown-Prince" do approximately date it; bring it between 7th July and 18th July, when the Siege ended. Ten days to guess upon: of which this very first, July 7th, the day of the Prince's arrival, is as likely as another. Herr von Suhm writes (not for publication till after Friedrich's death and his own):

* Œuvres, xxvii. part 8d, p. 79.

"It was remarked, in the Rhine Campaign of 1734, that "this Prince has a great deal of intrepidity (beaucoup de valeur). On one occasion, among others" (perhaps this very day, riding home from Waghäusel between the Lines), "when he had gone to reconnoitre the Lines of Philipsburg, "with a good many people about him, — passing, on his return, along a strip of very thin wood, the cannon-shot from "the Lines accompanied him incessantly, and crashed down "several trees at his side; during all which he walked his "horse along, at the old pace, precisely as if nothing were

"happening, nor in his hand upon the bridle was there the least trace of motion perceptible. Those who gave attention to the matter, remarked, on the contrary, that he did not discontinue speaking very tranquilly to some Generals who accompanied him; and who admired his bearing, in a kind of danger with which he had not yet had occasion to familiarise himself. It is from the Prince von Lichtenstein that I have this anecdote."*

On the 15th arrived his Majesty in person, with the Old Dessauer, Buddenbrock, Derschau and a select suite; in hopes of witnessing remarkable feats of war, now that the crisis of Philipsburg was coming on. Many Princes were assembled there, in the like hope: Prince of Orange (honeymoon well ended), a vivacious light gentleman, slightly crooked in the back; Princes of Baden, Darmstadt, Waldeck: all manner of Princes and distinguished personages, Fourscore Princes of them by tale, the eyes of Europe being turned on this matter, and on old Eugene's guidance of it. Prince Fred of England, even he had a notion of coming to learn war.

It was about this time, not many weeks ago, that Fred, now falling into much discrepancy with his Father, and at a loss for a career to himself, appeared

* Correspondance de Frédéric II avec M. de Suhm (Berlin, 1787); Avant-propos, p. xviii. (written 28th April 1740). The Correspondence is all in (Œuvres de Frédéric (xvi. 247-408); but the Suhm Preface not.

 Had wedded Princess Anne, George II.'s eldest, 25th (14th) March 1734; to the joy of self and mankind, in England here.

on a sudden in the Antechamber at St. James's, one day; and solemnly demanded an interview with his Majesty. Which his indignant Majesty, after some conference with Walpole, decided to grant. Prince Fred, when admitted, made three demands: 1°. To be allowed to go upon the Rhine Campaign, by way of a temporary career for himself; 2°. That he might have something definite to live upon, a fixed revenue being suitable in his circumstances; 3°. That, after those sad Prussian disappointments, some suitable Consort might be chosen for him, — heart and household lying in such waste condition. Poor Fred, who of us knows what of sense might be in these demands? Few creatures more absurdly situated are to be found in this world. To go where his equals were, and learn soldiering a little, might really have been useful. Paternal Majesty received Fred and his Three Demands with fulminating look; answered, to the first two, nothing; to the third, about a Consort, "Yes, you shall; but be respectful to the Queen; — and now off with you; away!"*

Poor Fred, he has a circle of hungry Parliamenteers about him; young Pitt, a Cornet of Horse, young Lyttelton of Hagley, our old Soissons friend, not to mention others of worse type; to whom this royal Young Gentleman, with his vanities, ambitions, inexperience, plentiful inflammabilities, is important for exploding Walpole. He may have, and with great justice I should think, the dim consciousness of talents for doing something better than "write madrigals" in this world: infinitude of wishes and appetites he clearly has; — he is full of inflammable materials, poor youth. And he is the Fireship those older hands make use of for blowing Walpole and Company out of their anchorage. What a school of virtue for a young gentleman; — and for the elder ones concerned with him! He did not get to the Rhine Campaign; nor indeed ever to anything, except to writing madrigals, and being very futile, dissolute and miserable with what of talent Nature had given him. Let us pity the poor Constitutional Prince. Our Fritz was only in danger of losing his life; but what is that, to losing your sanity, personal identity almost, and becoming Parliamentary Fireship to his Majesty's Opposition?

* Coxe's Walpole, i. 322.

Friedrich Wilhelm stayed a month campaigning here; graciously declined Prince Eugene's invitation to lodge in Head Quarters, under a roof and within built walls; preferred a tent among his own people, and took the common hardships, — with great hurt to his weak health, as was afterwards found.

In these weeks, the big Czarina, who has set a price (100,000 rubles, say 15,000*l.*) upon the head of poor Stanislaus, hears that his Prussian Majesty protects him; and thereupon signifies, in high terms, That she, by her Feldmarschall Münnich, will come across the frontiers and seize the said Stanislaus. To which his Prussian Majesty answers positively, though in proper Diplomatic tone, "Madam, I will in no wise permit it!" Perhaps his Majesty's remarkablest transaction, here on the Rhine, was this concerning Stanislaus. For Seckendorf the Feldzeugmeister was here also, on military function, not forgetful of the Diplomatics; who busily assailed his Majesty, on the Kaiser's part, in the same direction: "Give up Stanislaus, your Majesty! How ridiculous (lächerlich) to be perhaps ruined for Stanislaus!" But without the least effect, now or afterwards.

Poor Stanislaus, in the beginning of July, got across into Preussen, as we intimated; and there he continued, safe against any amount of rubles and Feldmarschalls, entreaties and menaces. At Angerburg, on the Prussian frontier, he found a steadfast veteran, Lieutenant-General von Katte, Commandant in those parts (Father of a certain poor Lieutenant, whom we tragically knew of long ago!) — which veteran gentleman received the Fugitive Majesty,* with welcome in the King's name, and assurances of an honourable asylum till the times and roads should clear again for his fugitive Majesty. Fugitive Majesty, for whom the roads and times were very dark at present, went to Marienwerder; talked of going "to Pillau, for a sea-passage," of going to various places; went finally to Königsberg, and there, — with a considerable Polish

* Militair-Lexikon, ii. 254.

Suite of Fugitives, very moneyless, and very expensive, most of them, who had accumulated about him, — set up his abode. There for almost two years, in fact till this War ended, the Fugitive Polish Majesty continued; Friedrich Wilhelm punctually protecting him, and even paying him a small Pension (50*l.* a month), — France, the least it could do for the Grandfather of France, allowing a much larger one; larger, though still inadequate. France has left its Grandfather strangely in the lurch here; with “100,000 rubles on his head.” But Friedrich Wilhelm knows the sacred rites, and will do them; continues deaf as a doorpost, alike to the menaces and the entreaties of Kaiser and Czarina; strictly intimating to Münnich what the Laws of Neutrality are, and that they must be observed. Which, by his Majesty's good arrangements, Münnich, willing enough to the contrary had it been feasible, found himself obliged to comply with. Prussian Majesty, like a King and a gentleman, would listen to no terms about dismissing or delivering up, or otherwise failing in the sacred rites to Stanislaus; but honourably kept him there till the times and routes cleared themselves again.* A plain piece of duty; punctually done: the beginning of it falls here in the Camp at Philipsburg, July-August 1734; in May 1736 we shall see some glimpse of the end! —

His Prussian Majesty in Camp at Philipsburg, — so distinguished a volunteer, doing us the honour to encamp here, — “was asked to all the Councils-of-War that were held,” say the Books. And he did attend, the Crown-Prince and he, on important occasions: but, alas, there was, so to speak, nothing to be consulted of. Fascines and hurdles lay useless; no attempt was made to relieve Philipsburg. On the third day after his Majesty’s arrival, July 18th, Philipsburg, after a stiff defence of six weeks, growing hopeless of relief, had to surrender; — French then proceeded to repair Philipsburg, no attempt on Eugene’s part to molest them there. If they try ulterior operations on this side the River, he counter-tries; and that is all.

* Förster, ii. 132, 134-136.

Our Crown-Prince, somewhat of a judge in after years, is maturely of opinion, That the French Lines were by no means inexpugnable; that the French Army might have been ruined under an attack of the proper kind.* Their position was bad; no room to unfold themselves for fight, except with the Town’s cannon playing on them all the while; only one Bridge to get across by, in case of coming to the worse: defeat of them probable, and ruin to them inevitable in case of defeat. But Prince Eugene, with an Army little to his mind (Reichs Contingents not to be depended on, thought Eugene), durst not venture: “Seventeen victorious Battles, and if we should be defeated in the eighteenth and last?”

It is probable the Old Dessauer, had he been Generalissimo, with this same Army, — in which, even in the Reichs part of it, we know Ten Thousand of an effective character, — would have done some stroke upon the French: but Prince Eugene would not try. Much dimmed from his former self, this old hero; age now 73; — a good deal wearied with the long march through Time. And this very Summer, his Brother's Son, the last male of his House, had suddenly died of inflammatory fever; left the old man very mournful: "Alone, alone, at the end of one's long march; laurels have no fruit, then?" He stood cautious, on the defensive; and in this capacity is admitted to have shown skilful management.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, 1. 167.

But Philipsburg being taken, there is no longer the least event to be spoken of; the Campaign passed into a series of advancings, retreatings, facings, and then right-about facings, — painful manœuvrings, on both sides of the Rhine and of the Neckar, — without result farther to the French, without memorability to either side. About the middle of August, Friedrich Wilhelm went away; — health much hurt by his month under canvas, amid Rhine inundations, and mere distressing phenomena. Crown-Prince Friedrich and a select party escorted his Majesty to Maintz, where was a Dinner of unusual sublimity by the Kurfürst there;* — Dinner done, his Majesty stept on board "the Electoral Yacht;" and in this fine hospitable vehicle, went sweeping through the Binger Loch, rapidly down towards Wesel; and the Crown-Prince and party returned to their Camp, which is upon the Neckar at this time.

* 15th August (Fassmann, p. 511).

Camp shifts about, and Crown-Prince in it: to Heidelberg, to Waiblingen, Weinheim; close to Maintz at one time: but it is not worth following: nor in Friedrich's own Letters, or in other documents, is there, on the best examination, anything considerable to be gleaned respecting his procedures there. He hears of the ill-success in Italy, Battle of Parma, at the due date, with the natural feelings; speaks, with a sorrowful gaiety, of the muddy fatigues, futilities here on the Rhine; — has the sense, however, not to blame his superiors unreasonably. Here, from one of his Letters to Colonel Camas, is a passage worth quoting for the credit of the writer. With Camas, a distinguished Prussian Frenchman, whom we mentioned elsewhere, still more with Madam Camas in time coming, he corresponded much, often in a fine filial manner:

“The present Campaign is a school, where profit may be “reaped from observing the confusion and disorder which “reigns in this Army: it has been a field very barren in laurels;
“and those who have been used, all their life, to gather such,
“and on Seventeen distinguished occasions have done so, can “get none this time.” Next year, we all hope to be on the Moselle, and to find that a fruitfuller field. * * * “I am “afraid, dear Camas, you think I am going to put on the “cothurnus; to set up for a small Eugene, and, pronouncing “with a doctoral tone what each should have done and not “have done, condemn and blame to right and left. No, my “dear Camas; far from carrying my arrogance to that point,

 “I admire the conduct of our Chief, and do not disapprove “that of his worthy Adversary; and far from forgetting the “esteem and consideration due to persons who, scarred with “wounds, have by years and long service gained a consum-“mate experience, I shall hear them more willingly than ever
 “as my teachers, and try to learn from them how to arrive at “honour, and what is the shortest road into the secret of this “Profession.”*

This other, to Lieutenant Gröben, three weeks earlier in date, shows us a different aspect; which is at least equally authentic; and may be worth taking with us. Gröben is Lieutenant, — I suppose still of the Regiment Goltz, though he is left there behind; — at any rate, he is much a familiar with the Prince at Ruppin; was ring-leader, it is thought, in those midnight pranks upon parsons, and the other escapades there;  a merry man, eight years older than the Prince, — with whom it is clear enough he stands on a very free footing. Philipsburg was lost a month ago; French are busy repairing it; and manœuvring, with no effect, to get into the interior of Germany a little. Weinheim is a little Town on the north side of the Neckar, a dozen miles or so from Mannheim; — out of which, and into which, the Prussian Corps goes shifting from time to time, as Prince Eugene and the French manœuvre to no purpose in that Rhine-Neckar Country.

* “Camp at Heidelberg, 11th September 1734” (Œuvres, xvi. 131).

 Büsching, v. 20.

"Herdek Teremtetem," it appears, is a bit of Hungarian swearing; should be Ordek teremtete; and means "The Devil made you!"

"Weinheim, 17th August 1784.

"Herdek Teremtetem! 'Went with them, got hanged with "them,'* said the Bielefeld Innkeeper! So will it be with "me, poor devil; for I go dawdling about with this Army
"here; and the French will have the better of us. We want "to be over the Neckar again" (to the South or Philipsburg side), "and the rogues won't let us. What most provokes
"me in the matter is, that while we are here in such a wilder"ness of trouble, doing our utmost, by military labours and
"endurances, to make ourselves heroic, thou sittest, thou
"devil, at home!

"Duc de Bouillon has lost his equipage; our Hussars took
"it at Landau" (other side the Rhine, a while ago). "Here
"we stand in mud to the ears; fifteen of the Regiment Alt-
"Baden have sunk altogether in the mud. Mud comes of a "waterspout, or sudden cataract of rain, there was in these "Heidelberg Countries; two villages, Fuhrenheim and "Sandhausen, it swam away, every stick of them (ganz
"und gar).

"Captain von Stojentin, of Regiment Flans," one of our eight Regiments here, "has got wounded in the head, in an "affair of honour; he is still alive, and it is hoped he will get "through it.

"The Drill-Demon has now got into the Kaiser's people "too: Prince Eugene is grown heavier with his drills than we "ourselves. He is often three hours at it; — and the Kaiser's

* "Mitgegangen, mitgehangen;" Letter is in German.

"people curse us for the same, at a frightful rate. Adieu.
"If the Devil don't get thee, he ought. Therefore vale.*

"FRIEDRICH."

No laurels to be gained here; but plenty of mud, and laborious hardship, — met, as we perceive, with youthful stoicism, of the derisive, and perhaps of better

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 181.

forms. Friedrich is Twenty-two and some months, when he makes his first Campaign. The general physiognomy of his behaviour in it we have to guess from these few indications. No doubt he profited by it, on the military side; and would study with quite new light and vivacity after such contact with the fact studied of. Very didactic to witness even "the confusions of this Army," and what comes of them to Armies! For the rest, the society of Eugene, Lichtenstein, and so many Princes of the Reich, and Chiefs of existing mankind, could not but be entertaining to the young man; and silently, if he wished to read the actual Time, as sure enough he, with human and with royal eagerness, did wish, — they were here as the alphabet of it to him: important for years coming. Nay it is not doubted, the insight he here got into the condition of the Austrian Army and its management, — "Army left seven days without bread," for one instance, — gave him afterwards the highly important notion, that such Army could be beaten if, necessary! —

Wilhelmina says, his chief comrade was Margraf Heinrich; — the Ill Margraf; who was cut by Friedrich, in after years, for some unknown bad behaviour. Margraf Heinrich "led him into all manner of excesses," says Wilhelmina, — probably in the language of exaggeration. He himself tells her, in one of his Letters, a day or two before Papa's departure: "The Camp is soon to be close on Maintz, nothing but the Rhine between Maintz and our right wing where my place is; and so soon as Serenissimus goes" (Le Sérénissime, so he irreverently names Papa), "I mean to be across "for some sport,"* — no doubt the Ill Margraf with me! With the Elder Margraf, little Sophie's Betrothed, whom he called "big clown" in a Letter we read, he is at this date in open quarrel, — "brouillé à toute "outrance with the mad Son-in-law, who is the wildest "wild-beast of all this Camp."

Wilhelmina's Husband had come, in the beginning of August; but was not so happy as he expected. Considerably cut out by the Ill Heinrich. Here is a small adventure they had; mentioned by Friedrich, and copiously recorded by Wilhelmina: adventure on some River, — which we could guess, if it were worth guessing, to have been the Neckar, not the Rhine. French had a fortified post on the farther side of this River; Crown-Prince, Ill Margraf, and Wilhelmina's Husband were quietly looking about them, riding up the other side: Wilhelmina's Husband decided to take a pencil-drawing of the French post, and paused for that object. Drawing was proceeding unmolested, when his foolish Baireuth Hussar, having an excellent rifle (arquebuse rayée) with him, took it into his head to have a shot at the French sentries at long range. His shot hit nothing; but it awakened the French animosity, as was natural; the French began diligently firing; and might easily have done mischief. My Husband, volleying out some rebuke upon the blockhead of a Hussar, finished his drawing, in spite of the French bullets; then rode up to the Crown-Prince and Ill Mar-graf, who had got their share of what was going, and were in no good humour with him. Ill Margraf rounded things into the Crown-Prince's ear, in an unmannerly way, with glances at my Husband; — who understood it well enough; and promptly coerced such ill-bred procedures, intimating, in a polite impressive way, that they would be dangerous if persisted in. Which reduced the Ill Margraf to a spiteful but silent condition. No other harm was done, at that time; the French bullets all went awry, or "even fell short, being sucked in by the river," thinks Wilhelmina.*

* Ceuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 4 (10th Aug.). Ib.

14th Sept. 1734.

A more important feature of the Crown-Prince's life in these latter weeks is the news he gets of his Father. Friedrich Wilhelm, after quitting the Electoral Yacht, did his reviewing at Wesel, at Bielefeld, all his reviewing in those Rhine and Weser Countries; then turned aside to pay a promised visit to Ginkel the Berlin Dutch Ambassador, who has a fine House in those parts; and there his Majesty has fallen seriously ill. Obligated to pause at Ginkel's, and then at his own Schloss of Moyland, for some time; does not reach Potsdam till the 14th September, and then in a weak, worsening, and altogether dangerous condition, which lasts for months to come. Wrecks of gout, they say, and of all manner of nosological mischief; falling to dropsy. Case desperate, think all the Newspapers, in a cautious form; which is Friedrich Wilhelm's own opinion pretty much, and that of those better informed.

* Wilhelmina, ii. 208, 209; Ceuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 19.

 Fassmann, pp. 512-533: September 1734-January 1735.

Here are thoughts for a Crown-Prince; well affected to his Father, yet suffering much from him which is grievous. To bystanders, one now makes a different figure: "A Crown-Prince who may be King one of these days, — whom a little adulation were well spent upon!" From within and from without, come agitating influences; thoughts which must be rigorously repressed, and which are not wholly repressible. The soldiering Crown-Prince, from about the end of September, for the last week or two of this Campaign, is secretly no longer quite the same to himself or to others.

Glimpse of Lieutenant Chasot, and of other Acquisitions.

We have still two little points to specify, or to bring up from the rearward whither they are fallen, in regard to this Campaign. After which the wearisome Campaign shall terminate; Crown-Prince leading his Ten thousand to Frankfurt, towards their winter-quarters in Westphalia; and then himself running across from Frankfurt (October 5th), to see Wilhelmina for a day or two on the way homewards: — with much pleasure to all parties, my readers and me included!

First point is, That, some time in this Campaign, probably towards the end of it, the Crown-Prince, Old Dessauer and some others with them, "procured passports," went across, and "saw the French Camp," and what new phenomena were in it for them. Where, when, how, or with what impression left on either side, we do not learn. It was not much of a Camp for military admiration, this of the French.* There were old soldiers of distinction in it here and there; a few young soldiers diligently studious of their art; and a great many young fops of high birth and high ways, strutting about "in redheeled shoes," with "Commissions got from Court" for this War, and nothing of the soldier but the epaulettes and plumages, — apt to be "insolent" among their poorer comrades. From all parties, young and old, even from that insolent redheel party, nothing but the highest finish of politeness could be visible on this particular occasion. Doubtless all passed in the usual satisfactory manner; and the Crown-Prince got his pleasant excursion, and materials, more or less, for after thought and comparison. But as there is nothing whatever of it on record for us but the bare fact, we leave it to the reader's imagination, — fact being indubitable, and details not inconceivable to lively readers. Among the French dignitaries doing the honours of their Camp on this occasion, he was struck by the General's Adjutant, a "Count de Rottembourg" (properly von Rothenburg, of German birth, kinsman to the Rothenburg whom we have seen as French Ambassador at Berlin long since); a promising young Soldier; whom he did not lose sight of again, but acquired in due time to his own service, and found to be of eminent worth there. A Count von Schmettau, two Brothers von Schmettau, here in the Austrian service; superior men, Prussian by birth, and very fit to be acquired by and by; these the Crown-Prince had already noticed in this Rhine Campaign, — having always his eyes open to phenomena of that kind.

* Mémoires de Noailles (passim).

The second little point is of date perhaps two months anterior to that of the French Camp; and is marked sufficiently in this Excerpt from our confused Manuscripts:

Before quitting Philipsburg, there befel one slight adventure, which, though it seemed to be nothing, is worth recording here. One day, date not given, a young French Officer, of ingenuous prepossessing look, though much flurried at the moment, came across as involuntary deserter; flying from a great peril in his own camp. The name of him is Chasot, Lieutenant of such and such a Regiment: 'Take me to Prince Eugene!' he entreats; which is done. Peril was this: A high young gentleman, one of those fops in red heels, ignorant, and capable of insolence to a poorer comrade of studious turn, had fixed a duel upon Chasot. Chasot ran him through, in fair duel; dead, and is thought to have deserved it. 'But Duc de Boufflers is his kinsman: run, or you are lost!' cried everybody. The Officers of his Regiment hastily redacted some certificate for Chasot, hastily signed it; and Chasot ran, scarcely waiting to pack his baggage.

'Will not your Serene Highness protect me?' — 'Certainly!' said Eugene; — gave Chasot a lodging among his own people; and appointed one of them, Herr Brender by name, to show him about, and teach him the nature of his new quarters. Chasot, a brisk, ingenuous young fellow, soon became a favourite; eager to be useful where possible; and very pleasant in discourse, said everybody.

By and by, — still at Philipsburg, as would seem, though it is not said, — the Crown-Prince heard of Chasot; asked Brender to bring him over. Here is Chasot's own account; through which, as through a small eylet-hole, we peep once more, and for the last time, direct into the Crown-Prince's Campaign-life on this occasion:

"Next morning, at ten o'clock the appointed hour, "Brender having ordered out one of his horses for me, I accompanied him to the Prince; who received us in his Tent, "— behind which he had, hollowed out to the depth of three "or four feet, a large Dining-room, with windows, and a roof," I hope of good height, "thatched with straw. His Royal "Highness, after two hours conversation, in which he had put "a hundred questions to me" (a Prince desirous of knowing the facts), "dismissed us; and, at parting, bade me return "often to him in the evenings.

"It was in this Dining-room, at the end of a great dinner, "the day after next, that the Prussian guard introduced a "Trumpet from Monsieur d'Asfeld" (French Commander-in-Chief since Berwick's death), "with my three horses, sent over "from the French Army. Prince Eugene, who was present, "and in good humour, said, 'We must sell those horses, they "don't speak German; Brender will take care to mount you "some way or other.' Prince Lichtenstein immediately put "a price on my horses; and they were sold on the spot at three "times their worth. The Prince of Orange, who was of this "Dinner" (slightly crookbacked witty gentleman, English honey-moon well over), "said to me in a half-whisper, 'Mon- "sieur, there is nothing like selling horses to people who "have dined well.'

"After this sale, I found myself richer than I had ever "been in my life. The Prince Royal sent me, almost daily, "a groom and led horse, that I might come to him, and some- "times follow him in his excursions. At last, he had it pro- "posed to me, by M. de Brender, and even by Prince Eugene,

"to accompany him to Berlin." Which, of course, I did; taking Ruppín first. "I arrived at Berlin from Ruppín, in 1734, two days after the marriage of Friedrich Wilhelm "Margraf of Schwedt" (Ill Margraf's elder Brother, wildest wild-beast of this Camp) "with the Princess Sophie," — that is to say, 12th of November; Marriage having been on the 10th, as the Books teach us. Chasot remembers that on the 14th, "the Crown-Prince gave, in his Berlin mansion, a "dinner to all the Royal Family," in honour of that auspicious wedding.*

Thus is Chasot established with the Crown-Prince. He will turn up fighting well in subsequent parts of this History; and again duelling fatally, though nothing of a quarrelsome man, as he asserts.

Crown-Prince's Visit to Baireuth on the way home.

October 4th, the Crown-Prince has parted with Prince Eugene, — not to meet again in this world; "an old hero gone to the shadow of himself," says the Crown-Prince; — and is giving his Prussian War-Captains a farewell dinner at Frankfurt on the Mayn; having himself led the Ten Thousand so far, towards Winter-quarters, and handing them over now to their usual commanders. They are to winter in Westphalia, these Ten Thousand, in the Paderborn-Münster Country; where they are nothing like welcome to the Ruling

* Kurd von Schlözer: Chasot (Berlin, 1856), pp. 20-22. A pleasant little Book; tolerably accurate, and of very readable quality.

 Œuvres (Mém. de Brandebourg), i. 167.

5th Oct. 1784.

Powers; nor are intended to be so, — Kur-Köln (proprietor there) and his Brother of Bavaria having openly French leanings. The Prussian Ten Thousand will have to help themselves to the essential, therefore, without welcome; — and things are not pleasant. And the Ruling Powers, by protocolling, still more the Commonalty if it try at mobbing,* can only make them worse. Indeed it is said the Ten Thousand, though their bearing was so perfect otherwise, generally behaved rather ill in their marches over Germany, during this War, — and always worst, it was remarked by observant persons, in the countries (Bamberg and Würzburg, for instance) where their Officers had in past years been in recruiting troubles. Whereby observant persons explained the phenomenon to themselves. But we omit all that; our concern lying elsewhere. “Directly after dinner at Frankfurt,” the Crown-Prince drives off, rapidly as his wont is, towards Baireuth. He arrives there on the morrow; “October 5th,” says Wilhelmina, — who again illuminates him to us, though with oblique lights, for an instant.

Wilhelmina was in low spirits: — weak health; add funeral of the Prince of Culmbach (killed in the Battle of Parma), illness of Papa, and other sombre events: — and was by no means content with the Crown-Prince, on this occasion. Strangely altered since we met him in July last! It may be, the Crown-Prince, looking, with an airy buoyancy of mind, towards a certain Event probably near, has got his young head inflated a little, and carries himself with a height new to this beloved Sister; — but probably the sad humour of the Princess herself has a good deal to do with it. Alas, the contrast between a heart knowing secretly its own bitterness, and a friend's heart conscious of joy and triumph, is harsh and shocking to the former of the two! Here is the Princess's account, — with the subtrahend, twenty-five or seventy-five per cent, not deducted from it:

* “28th March 1785” (Fassmann, p. 547); Buchholz, l. 136.

“My Brother arrived, the 5th of October. He seemed to “me put-out (décontenancé); and to break off conversation “with me, he said he had to write to the King and Queen. “I ordered him pen and paper. He wrote in my room; and “spent more than a good hour in writing a couple of Letters, “of a line or two each. He then had all the Court, one after “the other, introduced to him; said nothing to any of them, “looked merely with a mocking air at them; after which we “went to dinner.

“Here his whole conversation consisted in quizzing (turlu- “piner) whatever he saw; and repeating to me, above a hundred times over, the words ‘little Prince,’ ‘little Court.’ “I was shocked; and could not understand how he had “changed so suddenly towards me. The etiquette of all “Courts in the Empire is, that nobody who has not at the “least the rank of Captain can sit at a Prince's table: my “Brother put a Lieutenant there, who was in his suite; “saying to me, ‘A King's Lieutenants are as good as a “Margraf's Ministers.’ I swallowed this incivility, and “showed no sign.

“After dinner, being alone with me, he said,” — turning up the flippant side of his thoughts, truly, in a questionable way: — “‘Our Sire is going to end (tire à sa fin); he will not “‘live out this month. I know I have made you great promises;

“‘but I am not in a condition to keep them. I will leave you
“‘the Half of the sum which my predecessor (feu Roi) lent you;
“‘I think you will have every reason to be satisfied with that.’
“I answered, That my regard for him had never been of an “interested nature; that I would never ask anything of him,
“but the continuance of his friendship; and did not wish one “sou, if it would in the least inconvenience him. ‘No, no,’
“said he, ‘you shall have those 100,000 thalers; I have de“‘stined them for you. — People will be much surprised,’ “continued he, ‘to see me act quite differently from what they “‘had expected. They imagine I am going to lavish all my “‘treasures, and that money will become as common as “‘pebbles at Berlin: but they will find I know better. I mean “‘to increase my Army, and to leave all other things on the “‘old footing. I will have every consideration for the Queen
“‘my Mother, and will sate her (rassasierai) with honours;
“‘but I do not mean that she shall meddle in my affairs; and “‘if she try it, she will find so.’” What a speech; what an outbreak of candour in the young man, preoccupied with his own great thoughts and difficulties, — to the exclusion of any other person’s!

“I fell from the clouds, on hearing all that; and knew not “if I was sleeping or waking. He then questioned me on the “affairs of this Country. I gave him the detail of them. He “said to me: ‘When your goose (benêt) of a Father-in-Law “‘dies, I advise you to break up the whole Court, and reduce “‘yourselves to the footing of a private gentleman’s establish“‘ment, in order to pay your debts. In real truth, you have “‘no need of so many people; and you must try also to re“‘duce the wages of those whom you cannot help keeping.

“‘You have been accustomed to live at Berlin with a table of “‘four dishes; that is all you want here: and I will invite you “‘now and then to Berlin; which will spare table and house“‘keeping.’

“‘For a long while my heart had been getting big; I could “‘not restrain my tears, at hearing all these indignities. ‘Why “‘do you cry?’ said he: ‘Ah, ah, you are in low spirits, I see.
“‘We must dissipate that dark humour. The music waits us;
“‘I will drive that fit out of you by an air or two on the flute.’
“‘He gave me his hand, and led me into the other room. I sat “‘down to the harpsichord; which I inundated (inondai) with “‘my tears. Marwitz” (my artful Demoiselle d’Atours, perhaps too artful in time coming) “placed herself opposite me, so as “to hide from the others what disorder I was in.”*

For the last two days of the visit, Wilhelmina admits her Brother was a little kinder. But on the fourth day there came, by estafette, a Letter from the Queen, conjuring him to return without delay, the King growing worse and worse. Wilhelmina, who loved her Father, and whose outlooks in case of his decease appeared to be so little flattering, was overwhelmed with sorrow. Of her Brother, however, she strove to forget that strange outbreak of candour; and parted with him as if all were mended between them again. Nay, the day after his departure, there goes a beautifully affectionate Letter to him; which we could give, if there were room: “the happiest time I ever in my life had;”
“my heart so full of gratitude and so sensibly touched;”
“every one repeating the words ‘dear Brother’ and

* Wilhelmina, ii. 216-218.

 Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 23.

“‘charming Prince-Royal:’” — a Letter in very lively contrast to what we have just been reading. A Prince-Royal not without charm, in spite of the hard practicalities he is meditating, obliged to meditate! —

As to the outbreak of candour, offensive to Wilhelmina and us, we suppose her report of it to be in substance true, though of exaggerated, perhaps perverted tone; and it is worth the reader's notice, with these deductions. The truth is, our charming Princess is always liable to a certain subtrahend. In 1744, when she wrote those Mémoires, “in a Summerhouse at Baireuth,” her Brother and she, owing mainly to go-betweens acting on the susceptible female heart, were again in temporary quarrel (the longest and worst they ever had), and hardly on speaking terms; which of itself made her heart very heavy; — not to say that Marwitz, the too artful Demoiselle, seemed to have stolen her Husband's affections from the poor Princess, and made the world look all a little grim to her. These circumstances have given their colour to parts of her Narrative, and are not to be forgotten by readers.

The Crown-Prince, — who goes by Dessau, lodging for a night with the Old Dessauer, and writes affectionately to his Sister from that place, their Letters crossing on the road, — gets home on the 12th to Potsdam. October 12th, 1734, he has ended his Rhine Campaign, in that manner; — and sees his poor Father, with a great many other feelings besides those expressed in the dialogue at Baireuth.

CHAPTER XI.

IN PAPA'S SICK-ROOM; PRUSSIAN INSPECTIONS; END OF WAR.

It appears, Friedrich met a cordial reception in the sick-room at Potsdam; and, in spite of his levities to Wilhelmina, was struck to the heart by what he saw there. For months to come, he seems to be continually running between Potsdam and Ruppin, eager to minister to his sick Father, when military leave is procurable. Other fact about him, other aspect of him, in those months, is not on record for us.

Of his young Madam, or Princess-Royal, peaceably resident at Berlin or at Schönhausen, and doing the vacant officialities, formal visitings and the like, we hear nothing; of Queen Sophie and the others, nothing: — anxious, all of them, no doubt, about the event at Potsdam, and otherwise silent to us. His Majesty's illness comes and goes; now hope, and again almost none. Margraf of Schwedt and his young Bride, we already know, were married in November; and Lieutenant Chasot (two days old in Berlin) told us, there was Dinner by the Crown-Prince to all the Royal Family on that occasion; — poor Majesty out at Potsdam languishing in the background, meanwhile.

His Carnival the Crown-Prince passes naturally at Berlin. We find he takes a good deal to the French Ambassador, one Marquis de la Chétardie; a showy restless character, of fame in the Gazettes of that time; who did much intriguing at Petersburg some years hence, first in a signally triumphant way, and then in a signally untriumphant; and is not now worth any knowledge but a transient accidental one. Chétardie came hither about Stanislaus and his affairs; tried hard, but in vain, to tempt Friedrich Wilhelm into interference; — is naturally anxious to captivate the Crown-Prince, in present circumstances.

Friedrich Wilhelm lay at Potsdam, between death and life, for almost four months to come; the Newspapers speculating much on his situation; political people extremely anxious what would become of him, — or in fact, when he would die; for that was considered the likely issue. Fassmann gives dolorous clippings from the Leyden Gazette, all in a blubber of tears, according to the then fashion, but full of impertinent curiosity withal. And from the Seckendorf private Papers there are Extracts of a still more inquisitive and notable character; Seckendorf and the Kaiser having an intense interest in this painful occurrence.

Seckendorf is not now himself at Berlin; but running much about, on other errands; can only see Friedrich Wilhelm, if at all, in a passing way. And even this will soon cease; — and in fact, to us, it is 'by far the most excellent result of this French-Austrian War, that it carries Seckendorf clear away; who now quits Berlin and the Diplomatic line, and obligingly goes out of our sight henceforth. The Old Ordnance-

Master, as an Imperial General of rank, is needed now for War-service, if he has any skill that way. In those late months, he was duly in attendance at Philipsburg and the Rhine-Campaign, in a subaltern torpid capacity, like Brunswick-Bevern and the others; ready for work, had there been any: but next season, he expects to have a Division of his own, and to do something considerable. — In regard to Berlin and the Diplomacies, he has appointed a Nephew of his, a Seckendorf Junior, to take his place there; to keep the old machinery in gear, if nothing more; and furnish copious reports during the present crisis. These Reports of Seckendorf Junior, — full of eavesdroppings, got from a Kammermohr (Nigger Lackey), who waits in the sick-room at Potsdam, and is sensible to bribes, — have been printed; and we mean to glance slightly into them. But as to Seckendorf Senior, readers can entertain the fixed hope that they have at length done with him; that, in these our premises, we shall never see him again; — nay shall see him, on extraneous dim fields, far enough away, smarting and suffering, till even we are almost sorry for the old knave! —

Friedrich Wilhelm's own prevailing opinion is, that he cannot recover. His bodily sufferings are great: dropsically swollen, sometimes like to be choked: no bed that he can bear to lie on; — oftenest rolls about in a Bath-chair; very heavy-laden indeed; and I think of tenderer humour than in former sicknesses. To the Old Dessauer he writes, few days after getting home to Potsdam: "I am ready to quit the world, as Your Di-

"lection knows, and has various times heard me say. "One ship sails faster, another slower; but they come "all to one haven. Let it be with me, then, as the "Most High has determined for me."* He has settled his affairs, Fassmann says, so far as possible; settled the order of his funeral, How he is to be buried, in the Garrison Church of Potsdam, without pomp or fuss, like a Prussian Soldier; and what regiment or regiments it is that are to do the triple volley over him, by way of finis and long farewell. His soul's interests too, — we need not doubt, he is in deep conference, in deep consideration about these; though nothing is said on that point. A serious man always, much feeling what immense facts he was surrounded with; and here is now the summing-up of all facts. Occasionally, again, he has hopes; orders up "two hundred of his Potsdam Giants to march through the sick-room," since he cannot get out to them; or old Generals, Buddenbrock, Waldau, come and take their pipe there, in reminiscence of a Tabagie. Here, direct from the fountain-head, or Nigger Lackey bribed by Seckendorf Junior, is a notice or two:

"Potsdam, September 30th, 1734. Yesterday, for half an "hour, the King could get no breath: he keeps them con- "tinually rolling him about" in his Bath-chair, "over the "room, and cries: 'Luft, Luft (Air, air)!"

"October 2d. The King is not going to die just yet; but "will scarcely see Christmas. He gets on his clothes; argues

* Orlich: Geschichte der Schlesischen Kriege (Berlin, 1841), i. 14. "From the Dessau Archives; date, 21st September 1734."

"with the Doctors, is impatient; won't have people speak of his illness; — is quite black in the face; drinks nothing but Moll" (which we suppose to be small bitter beer), "takes physic, writes in bed.

"October 5th. The Nigger tells me things are better. The King begins to bring up phlegm; drinks a great deal of oat-meal-water" (Hafergrützwasser, comfortable to the sick); "says to the Nigger: 'Pray diligently, all of you; perhaps I shall not die!'"

October 5th: this is the day the Crown-Prince arrives at Baireuth; to be called away by express four days after. How valuable, at Vienna or elsewhere, our dark friend the Lackey's medical opinion is, may be gathered from this other Entry, three weeks farther on, — enough to suffice us on that head:

"The Nigger tells me he has a bad opinion of the King's health. If you roll the King a little fast in his Bath-chair, "you hear the water jumble in his body," — with astonishment! "King gets into passions; has beaten the pages" (may we hope, our dark friend among the rest?), "so that it was feared apoplexy would take him."

This will suffice for the physiological part; let us now hear our poor friend on the Crown-Prince and his arrival:

"October 12th. Return of the Prince-Royal to Potsdam; tender reception. — October 21st. Things look ill in Potsdam. The other leg is now also begun running; and above a quart (maas) of water has come from it. Without a miracle the King cannot live," — thinks our dark friend. "The “Prince-Royal is truly affected (véritablement attendri) at the “King’s situation; — has his eyes full of water, has wept the “eyes out of his head: has schemed in all ways to contrive a “commodious bed for the King; wouldn’t go away from Pots“dam. King forced him away; he is to return Saturday “afternoon. The Prince-Royal has been heard to say, ‘If “the King will let me live in my own way, I would give an “arm to lengthen his life for twenty years.’ King always “calls him Fritzchen. But Fritzchen,” thinks Seckendorf Junior, “knows nothing about business. The King is aware of “it; and said in the face of him one day: ‘If thou begin at “the wrong end with things, and all go topsy-turvy after I am “gone, I will laugh at thee out of my grave!’”*

So Friedrich Wilhelm; labouring amid the mortal quicksands; looking into the Inevitable, in various moods. But the memorablest speech he made to Fritzchen or to anybody at present, was that covert one about the Kaiser and Seckendorf, and the sudden flash of insight he got, from some word of Seckendorf’s, into what they had been meaning with him all along. Riding through the Village of Priort, in debate about Vienna politics of a strange nature, Seckendorf said something, which illuminated his Majesty, dark for so many years, and showed him where he was. A ghastly horror of a country, yawning indisputable there; revealed to one as if by momentary lightning, in that manner! This is a speech which all the Ambassadors report, and which was already mentioned by us, — in reference to that opprobrious Proposal about the Crown-

* Seckendorf (Baron): Journal Secret; cited in Förster, II. 142.

Prince's Marriage, "Marry with England, after all; never mind breaking your word!" Here is the manner of it, with time and place:

"Sunday last," Sunday 17th October 1734, reports Seckendorf Junior, through the Nigger or some better witness, "the King said to the Prince-Royal: 'My dear Son, I tell thee I "got my death at Priort. I entreat thee, above all things in "the world, don't trust those people (denen Leuten), however "many promises they make. That day, it was April 17th, "1733, there was a man said something to me: it was as if "you had turned a dagger round in my heart.'"* —

Figure that, spoken from amid the dark sick whirlpools, the mortal quicksands, in Friedrich Wilhelm's voice, clangorously plaintive; what a wild sincerity, almost pathos, is in it; and whether Fritzchen, with his eyes all bewept even for what Papa had suffered in that matter, felt lively gratitudes to the House of Austria at this moment! —

It was four months after, "21st January 1735," when the King first got back to Berlin, to enlighten the eyes of the Carnival a little, as his wont had been. The crisis of his Majesty's illness is over, present danger gone; and the Carnival people, not without some real gladness, though probably with less than they pretend, can report him well again. Which is far from being the fact, if they knew it. Friedrich Wilhelm is on his feet again; but he never more was well. Nor has he forgotten that word at Priort, "like the turning of a dagger in one's heart;" — and indeed gets himself continually reminded of it by practical commentaries from the Vienna Quarter.

* Seckendorf (Baron): Journal Secret; cited in Förster, II. 142.

 Fasamann, p. 533.

In April, Prince Lichtenstein arrives on Embassy with three requests or demands from Vienna: "1°. That, "besides the Ten Thousand due by Treaty, his Majesty "would send his Reich's-Contingent," — not comprehended in those Ten Thousand, thinks the Kaiser. "2°. That he would have the goodness to dismiss Marquis de la Chétardie the French Ambassador, as a "plainly superfluous person at a well-affected German "Court in present circumstances;" — person excessively dangerous, should the present Majesty die, Crown-Prince being so fond of that Chétardie. "3°. That his "Prussian Majesty do give up the false Polish Majesty "Stanislaus, and no longer harbour him in East Preussen or elsewhere." The whole of which demands his Prussian Majesty refuses; the latter two especially, as something notably high on the Kaiser's part, or on any mortal's, to a free Sovereign and Gentleman. Prince Lichtenstein is eloquent, conciliatory; but it avails not. He has to go home empty-handed; — manages to leave with Herr von Suhm, who took care of it for us, that Anecdote of the Crown-Prince's behaviour under cannon-shot from Philipsburg last year; and does nothing else recordable, in Berlin.

The Crown-Prince's hopes were set, with all eagerness, on getting to the Rhine-Campaign next ensuing; nor did the King refuse, for a long while, but still less did he consent; and in the end there came nothing of it. From an early period of the year, Friedrich Wilhelm sees too well what kind of campaigning the Kaiser will now make; at a certain Wedding-dinner where his Majesty was, — precisely a fortnight after his Majesty's arrival in Berlin, — Seckendorf Junior has got, by eavesdropping, this utterance of his Majesty's: "The Kaiser has not a groschen of money. His Army in Lombardy is gone to Twenty-four thousand men, will have to retire into the Mountains. Next campaign" (just coming), "he will lose Mantua and the Tyrol. God's righteous judgment it is: a War like this! Comes of flinging old principles overboard, — of meddling in business that was none of yours;" and more, of a plangent alarming nature.*

Friedrich Wilhelm sends back his Ten Thousand, according to contracts; sends, over and above, a beautiful stock of "copper pontoons" to help the Imperial Majesty in that River Country, says Fassmann; — sends also a super-numerary Troop of Hussars, who are worth mentioning, "Six-score horse of Hussar type," under one Captain Ziethen, a taciturn, much-enduring, much observing man, whom we shall see again: these are to be diligently helpful, as is natural; but they are also, for their own behoof, to be diligently observant, and learn the Austrian Hussar methods, which his Majesty last year saw to be much superior. Nobody that knows Ziethen doubts but he learnt; Hussar-Colonel Baronay, his Austrian teacher here, became too well convinced of it when they met on a future occasion.* All this his Majesty did for the ensuing campaign: but as to the Crown-Prince's going thither, after repeated requests on his part, it is at last signified to him, deep in the season, that it cannot be: "Won't answer for a Crown-Prince to be sharer in such a Campaign; — be patient, my good Fritzchen, I will find other work for thee." Fritzchen is sent into Preussen, to do the Reviewings and Inspections there; Papa not being able for them this season; and strict manifold Inspection, in those parts, being more than usually necessary, owing to the Russian-Polish troubles. On this errand, which is clearly a promotion, though in present circumstances not a welcome one for the Crown-Prince, he sets out without delay; and passes there the equinoctial and autumnal season, in a much more useful way than he could have done in the Rhine-Campaign.

* Förster, II. 144 (and date it from Militair-Lexikon, II. 54).

In the Rhine-Moselle Country and elsewhere, the poor Kaiser does exert himself to make a Campaign of it; but without the least success. Having not a groschen of money, how could he succeed? Noailles, as foreseen, manœuvres him, hitch after hitch, out of Italy; French are greatly superior, more especially when Montemar, having once got Carlos crowned in Naples and put secure, comes to assist the French:

* Life of Ziethen (veridical but inexact, by the Frau von Blumenthal, a kinswoman of his; English Translation, very ill printed, Berlin, 1808), p. 54.

 Friedrich's Letter, 5th September 1735; Friedrich Wilhelm's Answer next day (Cœuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, 93-95).

Kaiser has to lean for shelter on the Tyrol Alps, as predicted. Italy, all but some sieging of strong places, may be considered as lost for the present.

Nor on the Rhine did things go better. Old Eugene, "the shadow of himself," had no more effect this year than last: nor, though Lacy and Ten Thousand Russians came as allies, Poland being all settled now, could the least good be done. Reichs-Feldmarschall Karl Alexander of Württemberg did "burn a Magazine," (probably of hay among better provender), by his bomb-shells, on one occasion. Also the Prussian Ten Thousand, — Old Dessauer leading them, General Röder having fallen ill, — burnt something: an Islet in the Rhine, if I recollect, "Islet of Lorch near Bingen," where the French had a post; which and whom the Old Dessauer burnt away. And then Seckendorf, at the head of Thirty Thousand, he, after long delays, marched to Trarbach in the interior Moselle Country; and got into some explosive sputter of battle with Belleisle, one afternoon, — some say, rather beating Belleisle; but a good judge says, it was a mutual flurry and terror they threw one another into.* Seckendorf meant to try again on the morrow: but there came an estafette that night: "Preliminaries signed (Vienna, 3d October 1735); — try no farther!" And this was the second Rhine-Campaign, and the end of the Kaiser's French War. The Sea-Powers, steadily

* Œuvres de Frédéric, i. 168.

 "Cessation" is to be, 5th November for Germany, 15th for Italy; "Preliminaries" were, Vienna, "3d October" 1735 (Schöll, ii. 245).

refusing money, diligently run about, offering terms of arbitration; and the Kaiser, beaten at every point, and reduced to his last groschen, is obliged to comply. He will have a pretty bill to pay for his Polish-Election frolic, were the settlement done! Fleury is pacific, full of bland candour to the Sea-Powers; the Kaiser, after long higgling upon articles, will have to accept the bill.

The Crown-Prince, meanwhile, has a successful journey into Preussen; sees new interesting scenes, Salzburg Emigrants, exiled Polish Majesties; inspects the soldiering, the schooling, the tax-gathering, the domain-farming, with a perspicacity, a dexterity and completeness that much pleases Papa. Fractions of the Reports sent home exist for us; let the reader take a glance of one only; the first of the series; dated Marienwerder (just across the Weichsel, fairly out of Polish Preussen and into our own), 27th September 1735, and addressed to the "Most All-gracious King and Father;" — abridged for the reader's behoof:

* * "In Polish Preussen, lately the Seat of War, things "look hideously waste; one sees nothing but women and a "few children; it is said the people are mostly running away," — owing to the Russian-Polish procedures there, in consequence of the blessed Election they have had. King August, whom your Majesty is not in love with, has prevailed at this rate of expense. King Stanislaus, protected by your Majesty, in spite of Kaisers and Czarinas, waits in Königsberg, till the Peace, now supposed to be coming, say what is to become of him: once in Königsberg, I shall have the pleasure to see him. "A detachment of five-and-twenty Saxon Dragoons of "the Regiment Arnstedt, marching towards Dantzic, met me:

"their horses were in tolerable case; but some are piebald,
"some sorrel, and some brown among them," which will be shocking to your Majesty, "and the people did not look
"well." * *

"Got hither to Marienwerder, last night: have inspected
"the two Companies which are here, that is to say, Lieuten"ant-Col. Meier's and Rittmeister Hans's. In very good trim,
"both of them; and though neither the men nor their horses
"are of extraordinary size, they are handsome well-drilled "fellows, and a fine set of stiff-built horses (gedrungenen
"Pferden). The fellows sit them like pictures (reiten wie die
"Puppen); I saw them do their wheelings. Meier has some "fine recruits; in particular two;" — nor has the Rittmeister been wanting in that respect. "Young horses" too are coming well on, sleek of skin. In short, all is right on the military side.*

Civil business, too, of all kinds, the Crown-Prince looked into, with a sharp intelligent eye; — gave praise, gave censure in the right place; put various things on a straight footing, which were awry when he found them. In fact, it is Papa's second self; looks into the bottom of all things quite as Papa would have done, and is fatal to mendacities, practical or vocal, wherever he meets them. What a joy to Papa: "Here, after all, is one that can replace me, in case of accident.
This Apprentice of mine, after all, he has fairly learned the Art; and will continue it when I am gone!" —

Yes, your Majesty, it is a Prince-Royal wise to recognise your Majesty's rough wisdom, on all manner of points; will not be a Devil's-friend, I think, any more than your Majesty was. Here truly are rare talents; like your Majesty and unlike: — and has a steady swiftness in him, as of an eagle, over and above! Such powers of practical judgment, of skilful action, are rare in one's twenty-third year. And still rarer, have readers noted what a power of holding his peace, this young man has? Fruit of his sufferings, of the hard life he has had. Most important power; under which all other useful ones will more and more ripen for him. This Prince already knows his own mind, on a good many points; privately, amid the world's vague clamour jargonizing round him to no purpose, he is capable of having his mind made up into definite Yes and No, — so as will surprise us one day.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 97.

Friedrich Wilhelm, we perceive,* was in a high degree content with this performance of the Prussian Mission: a very great comfort to his sick mind, in those months and afterwards. Here are talents, here are qualities, — visibly the Friedrich-Wilhelm stuff throughout, but cast in an infinitely improved type: — what a blessing we did not cut off that young Head at the Kaiser's dictation in former years! —

At Königsberg, as we learn in a dim indirect manner, the Crown-Prince sees King Stanislaus twice or thrice, — not formally, lest there be political offence taken, but incidentally at the houses of third-parties; — and is much pleased with the old gentleman; who i

* His Letter, 24th Oct. 1735 (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 26)

of cultivated good-natured ways, and has surely many curious things, from Charles XII. downwards, to tell a young man.* Stanislaus has abundance of useless refugee Polish Magnates about him, with their useless crowds of servants, and no money in pocket; Königsberg all on flutter, with their draperies and them, "like a little Warsaw:" so that Stanislaus's big French Pension, moderate Prussian monthly allowance, and all resources, are inadequate; and, in fact, in the end, these Magnates had to vanish, many of them, without settling their accounts in Königsberg. For the present, they wait here, Stanislaus and they, till Fleury and the Kaiser, shaking the urn of doom in abstruse treaty after battle, decide what is to become of them.

Friedrich returned to Dantzic; saw that famous City, and late scene of War; tracing with lively interest the footsteps of Münnich and his Siege operations, — some of which are much blamed by judges, and by this young Soldier among the rest. There is a pretty Letter of his from Dantzic, turning mainly on those points. Letter written to his young Brother-in-law, Karl of Brunswick, who is now become Duke there; Grandfather and Father both dead; and has just been blessed with an Heir, to boot. Congratulation on the birth of this Heir is the formal purport of the Letter, though it runs ever and anon into a military strain. Here are some sentences in a condensed form:

* Came 8th October, went 21st; Œuvres de Frédéric xxvii. part 3d, p. 98.

 History of Stanislaus.

 Grandfather, 1st March 1735; Father (who lost the Lines of Ettlingen lately in our sight), 3d September 1735. Suprà, vol. iv, 219.

“Dantzic, 26th October 1735. * * Thank my dear Sister
“for her services. I am charmed that she has made you papa “with so good a grace. I fear you won’t stop there; but will “go on peopling the world,” — one knows not to what extent,
“— “with your amiable race. Would have written sooner;
“but I am just returning from the depths of the barbarous “Countries; and having been charged with innumerable com“missions which I did not understand too well, had no good “possibility to think or to write.

“I have viewed all the Russian labours in these parts; have “had the assault on the Hagelsberg narrated to me; been on “the grounds; — and own I had a better opinion of Marshal “Münich than to think him capable of so distracted an enter“prise.* * * Adieu, my dear Brother. My compliments to “the amiable young Mother. Tell her, I beg you, that her “proof-essays are masterpieces (coups d’essai sont des coups de maître).” * * “Your most,” &c. — “FRÉDÉRIC.”

The Brunswick Masterpiece, achieved on this occasion, grew to be a man and Duke, famous enough in the Newspapers in time coming: Champagne, 1792; Jena, 1806; George IV.’s Queen Caroline; these and other distracted phenomena (pretty much blotting out the earlier better sort), still keep him hanging painfully in men’s memory. From his birth, now in this Prussian Journey of our Crown-Prince, to his death-stroke on the Field of Jena, what a Seventy-one years! —

* Cœuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 31. Pressed for time, and in want of battering cannon, he attempted to seize this Hagelsberg, one of the outlying defences of Dantzic, by nocturnal storm; lost two thousand men; and retired, without doing “what was flatly impossible,” thinks the Crown-Prince. See Mannstein, pp. 77-79, for an account of it.

Fleury and the Kaiser, though it is long before the signature and last finish can take place, are come to terms of settlement, at the Crown-Prince's return; and it is known, in political circles, what the Kaiser's Polish-Election damages will probably amount to. Here are, in substance, the only conditions that could be got for him:

“1°. Baby Carlos, crowned in Naples, cannot be pulled “out again: Naples, the Two Sicilies, are gone without return.
“That is the first loss; please Heaven it be the worst! On “the other hand, Baby Carlos will, as some faint compensation, “surrender to your Imperial Majesty his Parma and Piacenza “apanages; and you shall get back your Lombardy, — all
“but a scantling which we fling to the Sardinian Majesty;
“who is a good deal huffed, having had possession of the “Milanese, these two years past, in terms of his bargain with “Fleury. Pacific Fleury says to him: ‘Bargain cannot be “kept, your Majesty; please to quit the Milanese again, and “put up with this scantling.”

“2°. The Crown of Poland, August III. has got it, by “Russian bombardings and other measures: Crown shall stay
“with August, — all the rather as there would be no dis-“possessing him, at this stage. He was your Imperial “Majesty's Candidate; let him be the winner there, for your “Imperial Majesty's comfort.

“3°. And then as to poor Stanislaus? Well, let Stanis“laus be Titular Majesty of Poland for life; — which indeed “will do little for him: — but in addition, we propose, That,
“the Dukedom of Lorraine being now in our hands, Majesty “Stanislaus have the life-rent of Lorraine to subsist upon;
“and — and that Lorraine fall to us of France on his decease!

“ — ‘Lorraine?’ exclaim the Kaiser, and the Reich, and the “Kaiser’s intended Son-in-law Franz Duke of Lorraine.
“There is indeed a loss and a disgrace; a heavy item in the “Election damages!

“4^o. As to Duke Franz, there is a remedy. The old “Duke of Florence, last of the Medici, is about to die childless:
“let the now Duke of Lorraine, your Imperial Majesty’s “intended Son-in-law, have Florence instead. — And so it had “to be settled. ‘Lorraine? To Stanislaus, to France?’ ex“claimed the poor Kaiser, still more the poor Reich, and poor “Duke Franz. This was the bitterest cut of all; but there “was no getting past it. This too had to be allowed, this item “for the Election breakages in Poland. And so France, after “nibbling for several centuries, swallows Lorraine whole.
“Duke Franz attempted to stand out; remonstrated much,
“with Kaiser and Hofrath, at Vienna, on this unheard-of “proposal: but they told him it was irremediable; told him at “last (one Bartenstein, a famed Aulic Official, told him), ‘No “‘Lorraine, no Archduchess, your Serenity!’ — and Franz “had to comply. Lorraine is gone; cunning Fleury has “swallowed it whole. ‘That was what he meant in picking “‘this quarrel!’ said Teutschland mournfully. Fleury was “very pacific, candid in aspect to the Sea-Powers and others;
“and did not crow afflictively, did not say what he had meant.

“5^o. One immense consolation for the Kaiser, if for no “other, is: France guarantees the Pragmatic Sanction, — “though with very great difficulty; spending a couple of “years, chiefly on this latter point as was thought.* How it “kept said guarantee, will be seen in the sequel.”

And these were the damages the poor Kaiser had to pay for meddling in Polish Elections; for galloping

* Treaty on it not signed till 18th November 1738 (Schöll, II. 246).

thither in chase of his Shadows. No such account of broken windows was ever presented to a man before. This may be considered as the consummation of the Kaiser's Shadow-Hunt; or at least its igniting and exploding point. His Duel with the Termagant has at last ended; in total defeat to him on every point. Shadow-Hunt does not end; though it is now mostly vanished; exploded in fire. Shadow-Hunt is now gone all to Pragmatic Sanction, as it were: that now is the one thing left in Nature for a Kaiser; and that he will love, and chase, as the summary of all things. From this point he steadily goes down, and at a rapid rate; — getting into disastrous Turk Wars, with as little preparation for War or Fact as a life-long Hunt of Shadows presupposes; Eugene gone from him, and nothing but Seckendorfs to manage for him; — and sinks to a low pitch indeed. We will leave him here; shall hope to see but little more of him.

In the Summer of 1736, in consequence of these arrangements, — which were completed so far, though difficulties on Pragmatic Sanction and other points retarded the final signature for many months longer, — the Titular Majesty Stanislaus, girt himself together for departure towards his new Dominion or Life-rent; quitted Königsberg; traversed Prussian Poland, safe this time, "under escort of Lieutenant-General von Katte" (our poor Katte of Cüstrin's Father) "and fifty cuirassiers;" reached Berlin in the middle of May, under flowerier aspects than usual. He travelled under the title of "Count" Something, and alighted at the French Ambassador's in Berlin: but Friedrich Wilhelm treated him like a real Majesty, almost like a real Brother; had him over to the Palace; rushed out to meet him there, I forget how many steps beyond the proper limits; and was hospitality itself and munificence itself; — and, in fact, that night and all the other nights, "they smoked above thirty pipes together," for one item. May 21st, 1736,* Ex-Majesty Stanislaus went on his way again; towards France, — towards Meudon, a quiet Royal House in France, — till Lunéville, Nanci, and their Lorraine Palaces are quite ready. There, in these latter, he at length does find resting-place, poor innocent insipid mortal, after such tossings to and fro: and M. de Voltaire, and others of mark, having sometimes enlivened the insipid Court there, Titular King Stanislaus has still a kind of remembrance among mankind.

Of his Prussian Majesty we said that, though the Berlin populations reported him well again, it was not so. The truth is, his Majesty was never again well. From this point, age only forty-seven, he continues broken in bodily constitution; clogged more and more with physical impediments; and his History, personal and political withal, is as that of an old man, finishing his day. To the last he pulls steadily, neglecting no business, suffering nothing to go wrong. Building operations go on at Berlin; pushed more than ever, in these years, by the rigorous Derschau, who has got that in charge. No man of money or rank in Berlin but Derschau is upon him, with heavier and heavier compulsion to build: which is felt to be tyrannous; and occasions an ever-deepening grumble among the moneyed classes. At Potsdam his Majesty himself is the Builder; and gives the Houses away to persons of merit. *

* Förster (i. 227), following loose Pöllnitz (ii. 478), dates it 1735: a more considerable error, if looked into, than is usual in Herr Förster; who is not an ill-informed nor inexact man; — though, alas, in respect of method (that is to say, want of visible method, indication, or human arrangement), probably the most confused of all the Germans!

Nor is the Army less an object, perhaps almost more. Nay at one time, old Kur-Pfalz being reckoned in a dying condition, Friedrich Wilhelm is about ranking his men, prepared to fight for his rights in Jülich and Berg; Kaiser having openly gone over, and joined with France against his Majesty in that matter. However, the old Kur-Pfalz did not die, and there came nothing of fight in Friedrich Wilhelm's time. But his History, on the political side, is henceforth mainly a commentary to him on that "word" he heard in Prior, "which was as if you had turned a dagger in my heart!" With the Kaiser he is fallen out: there arise unfriendly passages between them, sometimes sarcastic on Friedrich Wilhelm's part, in reference to this very War now ended. Thus, when complaint rose about the Prussian misbehaviours on their late marches (misbehaviours notable in Countries where their recruiting operations had been troubled), the Kaiser took a high severe tone, not assuaging, rather aggravating the matter; and, for his own share, winded up by a strict prohibition of Prussian recruiting in any and every part of the Imperial Dominions. Which Friedrich Wilhelm took extremely ill. This is from a Letter of his to the Crown-Prince, and after the first gust of wrath had spent itself: "It is a clear disadvantage, this prohibition "of recruiting in the Kaiser's Countries. That is our "thanks for the Ten Thousand men sent him, and for "all the deference I have shown the Kaiser at all "times; and by this you may see that it would be of "no use if one even sacrificed oneself to him. So long "as they need us, they continue to flatter; but no "sooner is the strait thought to be over, and help not "wanted, than they pull off the mask, and have not "the least acknowledgment. The considerations that "will occur to you on this matter may put it in your "power to be prepared against similar occasions in time "coming." *

* Pölnitz, II. 469.

Thus, again, in regard to the winter-quarters of the Ziethen Hussars. Prussian Majesty, we recollect, had sent a Supernumerary Squadron to the last Campaign on the Rhine. They were learning their business, Friedrich Wilhelm knew; but also were fighting for the Kaiser, — that was what the Kaiser knew about them. Somewhat to his surprise, in the course of next year, Friedrich Wilhelm received, from the Vienna War-Office, a little Bill of 10,284 florins (1,028*l.* 8*s.*), charged to him for the winter-quarters of these Hussars. He at once paid the little Bill, with only this observation: "Heartily glad that I can help the Imperial Æra- rium with that 1,028*l.* 8*s.* With the sincerest wishes

* 6th February 1736; Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 102.

 "for hundred thousandfold increase to it in said Æra- rium; otherwise it won't go very far!" *

At a later period, in the course of his disastrous Turk War, the Kaiser, famishing for money, set about borrowing a million gulden (100,000*l.*) from the Banking House Splittgerber and Daun at Berlin. Splittgerber and Daun had not the money, could not raise it: "Advance us that sum, in their name, your Majesty," proposes the Vienna Court: "There shall be three-per-cent bonus, interest six per cent, and security beyond all question!" To which fine offer his Majesty answers, addressing Seckendorf Junior: "Touching the proposal
 "of my lifting the Bankers Splittgerber and Daun up "behind me, with a million gulden, to assist in that loan
 "of theirs, — said proposal, as I am not a merchant "accustomed to deal in profits and percentages, cannot
 "in that form take effect. Out of old friendship, how"ever, I am, on Theiro Imperial Majesty's request, ex"tremely ready to pay down, once and away (à fond perdu), a couple of million gulden, provided the Im"perial Majesty will grant me the conditions known to "your Uncle" (fulfilment of that now oldish Jülich-and-Berg promise, namely!), "which are fair. In such "case the thing shall be rapidly completed!" **

In a word, Friedrich Wilhelm falls out with the Kaiser more and more; experiences more and more

* Letter to Seckendorf (Senior): Förster, II. 150.

 Förster, II. 151 (without date there).

what a Kaiser this has been towards him. Queen Sophie has fallen silent in the History-Books; both the Majesties may look remorsefully, but perhaps best in silence, over the breakages and wrecks this Kaiser has brought upon them. Friedrich Wilhelm does not meanly hate the Kaiser: good man, he sometimes pities him; sometimes, we perceive, has a touch of authentic contempt for him. But his thoughts, in that quarter, premature old age aggravating them, are generally of a tragic nature, not to be spoken without tears; and the tears have a flash at the bottom of them, when he looks round on Fritz and says, "There is one, though, that will avenge me!" Friedrich Wilhelm, to the last a broad strong phenomenon, keeps wending downward, homeward, from this point; the Kaiser too, we perceive, is rapidly consummating his enormous Spectre-Hunts and Duels with Termagants, and before long will be at rest. We are well-nigh done with both these Majesties.

The Crown-Prince, by his judicious obedient procedures in these Four Years at Ruppín, at a distance from Papa, has, as it were, completed his Apprenticeship; and, especially by this last Inspection-Journey into Preussen, may be said to have delivered his Proof-Essay with a distinguished success. He is now out of his Apprenticeship; entitled to lift his Indentures, whenever need shall be. The rugged old Master cannot but declare him competent, qualified to try his own hand without supervision: — after all those unheard-of confusions, like to set the shop on fire at one time, it is a blessedly successful Apprenticeship! Let him now, theoretically at least, in the realms of Art, Literature, Spiritual Improvement, do his Wanderjahre, over at Reinsberg, still in the old region, — still well apart from Papa, who agrees best not in immediate contact; — and be happy in the new Domesticities, and larger opportunities, provided for him there; till a certain time come, which none of us are in haste for.

BOOK X.

AT REINSBERG.

1786-1740.

Aug. 1736.

CHAPTER I.

MANSION OF REINSBERG.

ON the Crown-Prince's Marriage, three years ago, when the Amt or Government-District Ruppin, with its incomings, was assigned to him for revenue, we heard withal of a Residence getting ready. Hint had fallen from the Prince, That Reinsberg, an old Country-seat, standing with its Domain round it in that little Territory of Ruppin, and probably purchaseable as was understood, might be pleasant, were it once his and well put in repair. Which hint the kind paternal Majesty instantly proceeded to act upon. He straightway gave orders for the purchase of Reinsberg; concluded said purchase, on fair terms, after some months bargaining;* — and set his best Architect, one Kemeter, to work, in concert with the Crown-Prince, to new-build and enlarge the decayed Schloss of Reinsberg into such a Mansion as the young Royal Highness and his Wife would like.

Kemeter has been busy, all this while; a solid, elegant, yet frugal builder: and now the main body of the Mansion is complete, or nearly so, the wings and adjuncts going steadily forward; Mansion so far ready that the Royal Highnesses can take up their abode in it. Which they do, this Autumn, 1736; and fairly commence Joint Housekeeping, in a permanent manner. Hitherto it has been intermittent only: hitherto the Crown-Princess has resided in their Berlin Mansion, or in her own Country-House at Schönhausen; Husband not habitually with her, except when on leave of absence from Ruppın, in Carnival time or for shorter periods. At Ruppın his life has been rather that of a bachelor, or husband abroad on business, up to this time. But now at Reinsberg they do kindle the sacred hearth together; "6th August 1736" the date of that important event. They have got their Court about them, dames and cavaliers more than we expected; they have arranged the furnitures of their existence here on fit scale, and set up their Lares and Penates on a thrifty footing. Majesty and Queen come out on a visit to them next month;* — raising the sacred hearth into its first considerable blaze, and crowning the operation in a human manner.

* 23d October 1733, order given, — 16th March 1734, purchase completed (Pruss, i. 75).

And so there has a new epoch arisen for the Crown-Prince and his Consort. A new, and much improved one. It lasted into the fourth year; rather improving all the way: and only Kingship, which, if a higher sphere, was a far less pleasant one, put an end to it. Friedrich's happiest time was this at Reinsberg; the little Four Years of Hope, Composure, realisable Idealism: an actual snatch of something like the Idyllic, appointed him in a life-pilgrimage consisting otherwise of realisms oftenest contradictory enough, and sometimes of very grim complexion. He is master of his work, he is adjusted to the practical conditions set him: conditions once complied with, daily work done, he lives to the Muses, to the spiritual improvements, to the social enjoyments; and has, though not without flaws of ill weather, — from the Tobacco-Parliament perhaps rather less than formerly, and from the Finance-quarter perhaps rather more, — a sunny time. His innocent insipidity of a Wife, too, appears to have been happy. She had the charm of youth, of good looks; a wholesome perfect loyalty of character withal; and did not “take to pouting,” as was once apprehended of her, but pleasantly gave and received of what was going. This poor Crown-Princess, afterward Queen, has been heard, in her old age, reverting, in a touching transient way, to the glad days she had at Reinsberg. Complaint openly was never heard from her, in any kind of days; but these doubtless were the best of her life.

* 4th September 1736 (Ib.).

Reinsberg, we said, is in the Amt Ruppín; naturally under the Crown-Prince’s government at present: the little Town or Village of Reinsberg stands about ten miles north of the Town Ruppín; — not quite a third-part as big as Ruppín is in our time, and much more pleasantly situated. The country about is of comfortable, not unpicturesque character; to be distinguished almost as beautiful, in that region of sand and moor. Lakes abound in it; tilled fields, heights called “hills;” and wood of fair growth, — one reads of “beech-avenues,” of “high linden-avenues:” — a country rather of the ornamented sort, before the Prince with his improvements settled there. Many lakes and lakelets in it, as usual hereabouts; the loitering waters straggle, all over that region, into meshes of lakes. Reinsberg itself, Village and Schloss, stands on the edge of a pleasant Lake, last of a mesh of such: the summary, or outfall, of which, already here a good strong brook or stream, is called the Rhein, Rhyn, or Rein; and gives name to the little place. We heard of the Rein at Ruppín: it is there counted as a kind of river; still more, twenty miles farther down, where it falls into the Havel, on its way to the Elbe. The waters, I think, are drab-coloured, not peat-brown: and here, at the source, or outfall from that mesh of lakes, where Reinsberg is, the country seems to be about the best; — sufficient, in picturesqueness and otherwise, to satisfy a reasonable man.

The little Town is very old; but, till the Crown-Prince settled there, had no peculiar vitality in it. I think there are now some potteries, glass-manufactories: Friedrich Wilhelm, just while the Crown-Prince was removing thither, settled a first Glass-work there; which took good root, and rose to eminence in the crystal, Bohemian-crystal, white-glass, cut-glass, and other commoner lines, in the Crown-Prince's time.*

Reinsberg stands on the east or southeast side of its pretty Lake: Lake is called "the Grinerick See" (as all those remote Lakes have their names); Mansion is between the Town and Lake. A Mansion fronting, we may say, four ways; for it is of quadrangular form, with a wet moat from the Lake begirdling it, and has a spacious court for interior: but the principal entrance is from the Town side; for the rest, the Building is ashlar on all sides, front and rear. Stands there, handsomely abutting on the Lake with two Towers, a Tower at each angle, which it has on that lakeward side; and looks, over Reinsberg, and its steeple rising amid friendly umbrage which hides the housetops, towards the rising sun. Townward there is room for a spacious esplanade; and then for the stables, outbuildings, well masked; which still farther shut off the Town. To this day, Reinsberg stands with the air of a solid respectable Edifice; still massive, rain-tight, though long since deserted by the Princeships, — by Friedrich nearly six-score years ago, and nearly three-score by Prince Henri, a Brother of Friedrich's, who afterwards had it. Last accounts I got were, of talk there had risen of planting an extensive Normal-School there; which promising plan had been laid aside again for the time.

* Beschreibung des Lustschlosses &c. zu Reinsberg (Berlin, 1778). Author, a 'Lieutenant Hennert,' thoroughly acquainted with his subject.

The old Schloss, residence of the Bredows and other feudal people for a long while, had good solid masonry in it, and around it orchards, potherb gardens; which Friedrich Wilhelm's Architects took good care to extend and improve, not to throw away: the result of their art is what we see, a beautiful Country-House, what might be called a Country-Palace with all its adjuncts; — and at a rate of expense which would fill English readers, of this time, with amazement. Much is admirable to us as we study Reinsberg, what it had been, what it became, and how it was made; but nothing more so than the small modicum of money it cost. To our wondering thought, it seems as if the shilling, in those parts, were equal to the guinea in these; and the reason, if we ask it, is by no means flattering altogether. "Change in the value of money?" Alas, reader, no; that is not above the fourth part of the phenomenon. Three-fourths of the phenomenon are change in the methods of administering money, — difference between managing it with wisdom and veracity on both sides, and managing it with unwisdom and mendacity on both sides. Which is very great indeed; and infinitely sadder than any one, in these times, will believe! — But we cannot dwell on this consideration. Let the reader take it with him, as a constant accompaniment in whatever work of Friedrich Wilhelm's or of Friedrich his Son's, he now or at any other time may be contemplating. Impious waste, which means disorder and dishonesty, and loss of much other than money to all parties, — disgusting aspect of human creatures, master and servant, working together as if they were not human, — will be spared him in those foreign departments; and in an English heart, thoughts will arise, perhaps, of a wholesome tendency, though very sad, as times are.

It would but weary the reader to describe this Crown-Prince Mansion; which, by desperate study of our abstruse materials, it is possible to do with auctioneer minuteness. There are engraved Views of Reinsberg and its Environs; which used to lie conspicuous in the portfolios of collectors, — which I have not seen.* Of the House itself, engraved Frontages (Façades), Groundplans, are more accessible; and along with them, descriptions which are little descriptive, — wearisomely detailed, and as it were dark by excess of light (auctioneer light) thrown on them. The reader sees, in general, a fine symmetrical Block of Buildings, standing in rectangular shape, in the above locality: — about two hundred English feet, each, the two longer sides measure, the Townward and the Lake-ward, on their outer front: about a hundred and thirty, each, the two shorter; or a hundred and fifty, taking in their Towers just spoken of. The fourth or Lake-ward side, however, which is one of the longer pair, consists mainly of “Colonnade;” spacious Colonnade “with vases and statues;” catching up the outskirts of said Towers, and handsomely uniting everything.

Beyond doubt, a dignified, substantial pile of stonework; all of good proportions. Architecture everywhere of cheerfully serious, solidly graceful character; all of sterling ashlar; the due risalites (projecting spaces) with their attics and statues atop, the due architraves, cornices and corbels, — in short, the due opulence of ornament being introduced, and only due. Genuine sculptors, genuine painters, artists have been busy; and in fact all the suitable fine and all the necessary solid ones, have worked with a noticeable fidelity, comfortable to the very beholder to this day. General height is about forty feet; two stories of ample proportions: the Towers overlooking them are sixty feet in height. Extent of outer frontage, if you go all round, and omit the Colonnade, will be five hundred feet and more: this, with the rearward face, is a thousand feet of room frontage: — fancy the extent of lodging space. For “all the kitchens and appurtenances are underground;” the “left front” (which is a new part of the Edifice) rising comfortably over these. Windows I did not count; but they must go high up into the Hundreds. No end to lodging space. Nay in a detached side-edifice subsequently built, called Cavalier House, I read of there being, for one item, “fifty lodging-rooms,” and for another “a theatre.” And if an English Duke of Trumps were to look at the bills for all that, — his astonishment would be extreme, and perhaps in a degree painful and salutary to him.

* See Hennert, just cited, for the titles of them

In one of these Towers, the Crown-Prince has his Library: a beautiful apartment; nothing wanting to it that the arts could furnish, “ceiling done by Pesne” with allegorical geniuses and what not; looks out on mere sky, mere earth and water in an ornamental state: silent as in Elysium. It is there we are to fancy the Correspondence written, the Poetries and literary industries going on. There or stepping down for a turn in the open air, or sauntering meditatively under the Colonnade with its statues and vases (where weather is no object), one commands the Lake, with its little tufted Islands, "Remus Island" much famed among them, and "high beechwoods" on the farther side. The Lake is very pretty, all say; lying between you and the sunset; — with perhaps some other lakelet, or solitary pool in the wilderness, many miles away, "revealing itself as a cup of molten gold," at that interesting moment. What the Book-Collection was, in the interior, I know not except by mere guess.

The Crown-Princess's Apartment, too, which remained unaltered at the last accounts had of it,* is very fine; — take the anteroom for specimen: "This fine room," some twenty feet height of ceiling, "has six "windows; three of them, in the main front, looking "towards the Town, the other three towards the Interior Court. The light from these windows is "heightened by mirrors covering all the piers (Schäfte, "interspaces of the walls), to an uncommonly splendid "pitch; and shows the painting of the ceiling, which "again is by the famous Pesne, to much perfection. "The Artist himself, too, has managed to lay on his "colours there so softly, and with such delicate skill, "that the light-beams seem to prolong themselves in "the painted clouds and air, as if it were the real sky "you had overhead." There in that cloud-region "Mars is being disarmed by the Love-Goddesses, and "they are sporting with his weapons. He stretches out "his arm towards the Goddess, who looks upon him "with fond glances. Cupids are spreading out a "draping." That is Pesne's luxurious performance in the ceiling. — “Weapon-festoons, in basso-relievo, gilt, “adorn the walls of this room; and two Pictures, also “by Pesne, which represent, in life size, the late King and Queen” (our good friends Friedrich Wilhelm and his Sophie), “are worthy of attention. Over each of “the doors, you find in low-relief the Profiles of “Hannibal, Pompey, Scipio, Cæsar, introduced as Me“dallions.”

* From Hennert, namely, in 1778.

All this is very fine: but all this is little to another ceiling, in some big Saloon elsewhere, Music-saloon I think: Black Night, making off, with all her sickly dews, at one end of the ceiling; and at the other end, the Steeds of Phœbus bursting forth, and the glittering shafts of Day, — with Cupids, Love-goddesses, War-gods, not omitting Bacchus and his vines, all getting beautifully awake in consequence. A very fine room indeed; — used as a Music-Saloon, or I know not what, — and the ceiling of it almost an ideal, say the connoisseurs. —

Endless gardens, pavilions, grottoes, hermitages, orangeries, artificial ruins, parks and pleasancess surround this favoured spot and its Schloss; nothing wanting in it that a Prince's establishment needs, — except indeed it be hounds, for which this Prince never had the least demand.

Except the old Ruppín duties, which imply continual journeyings thither, distance only a morning's ride; except these, and occasional commissions from Papa, Friedrich is left master of his time and pursuits in this new Mansion. There are visits to Potsdam, periodical appearances at Berlin; some Correspondence to keep the Tobacco-Parliament in tune. But Friedrich's taste is for the Literatures, Philosophies: a young Prince bent seriously to cultivate his mind; to attain some clear knowledge of this world, so all-important to him. And he does seriously read, study and reflect, a good deal; his main recreations, seemingly, are Music, and the converse of well-informed friendly men. In Music we find him particularly rich. Daily, at a fixed hour of the afternoon, there is concert held; the reader has seen in what kind of room: and if the Artists entertained here for that function were enumerated (high names, not yet forgotten in the Musical world), it would still more astonish readers. I count them to the number of Twenty or Nineteen; and mention only that "the two Brothers Graun" and "the two Brothers Benda" were of the lot; suppressing four other Fiddlers of eminence, and "a Pianist who is known to everybody."* The Prince has a fine sensibility to Music: does himself, with thrilling adagios on the flute, join in these harmonious acts; and, no doubt, if rightly vigilant against the Nonsenses, gets profit, now and henceforth, from this part of his resources.

He has visits, calls to make, on distinguished persons within reach; he has much Correspondence, of a Literary or Social nature. For instance, there is Suhm the Saxon Envoy translating Wolf's Philosophy into French for him: sending it in fascicles; with endless

* Hennert, p. 21.

Letters to and from, upon it, — which were then highly interesting, but are now dead to every reader. The Crown-Prince has got a Post-Office established at Reinsberg; leathern functionary of some sort comes lumbering round, southward, “from the Mecklenburg “quarter twice a week, and goes by Fehrbellin,” for the benefit of his Correspondences. Of his calls in the neighbourhood, we mean to show the reader one sample, before long; and only one.

There are Lists given us of the Prince’s “Court” at Reinsberg; and one reads, and again reads, the dreariest unmemorable accounts of them; but cannot, with all one’s industry, attain any definite understanding of what they were employed in, day after day, at Reinsberg: — still more are their salaries and maintenance a mystery to us, in that frugal establishment. There is Wolden for Hofmarschall, our old Cüstrin friend; there is Colonel Senning, old Marlborough Colonel with the wooden leg, who taught Friedrich his drillings and artillery-practices in boyhood, a fine sagacious old gentleman this latter. There is a M. Jordan, Ex-Precacher, an ingenious Prussian-Frenchman, still young, who acts as “Reader and Librarian;” of whom we shall hear a good deal more. “Intendant” is Captain (Ex-Captain) Knobelsdorf; a very sensible accomplished man, whom we saw once at Baireuth; who has been to Italy since, and is now returned with beautiful talents for Architecture: it is he that now undertakes the completing of Reinsberg,* which he will skilfully accomplish in the course of the next three years. Twenty Musicians on wind or string; Painters, Antoine Pesne but one of them; Sculptors, Glume and others of eminence; and Hof Cavaliers, to we know not what extent: — How was such a Court kept up, in harmonious free dignity, and no halt in its finances, or mean pinch of any kind visible? The Prince did get in debt; but not deep, and it was mainly for the tall recruits he had to purchase. His money-accounts are by no means fully known to me: but I should question if his expenditure (such is my guess) ever reached 3,000*l.* a year; and am obliged to reflect more and more, as the ancient Cato did, what an admirable revenue frugality is!

* Hennert, p. 29.

Many of the Cavaliers, I find, for one thing, were of the Regiment Goltz; that was one evident economy. “Rittmeister von Chasot,” as the Books call him: readers saw that Chasot flying to Prince Eugene, and know him since the Siege of Philipsburg. He is not yet Rittmeister, or Captain of Horse, as he became; but is of the Ruppín Garrison; Hof-Cavalier; “attended Friedrich on his late Prussian journey;” and is much a favourite, when he can be spared from Ruppín. Captain Wylich, afterwards a General of mark; the Lieutenant Buddenbrock who did the parson-charivari at Ruppín, but is now reformed from those practices: all these are of Goltz. Colonel Keyserling, not of Goltz, nor in active military duty here, is a friend of very old standing; was officially named as “Companion” to the Prince, a long while back; and got into trouble on his account in the disastrous Ante-Cüstrin or Flight Epoch: one of the Prince's first acts, when he got pardoned, after Cüstrin, was to beg for the pardon of this Keyserling; and now he has him here, and is very fond of him. A Courlander, of good family, this Keyserling; of good gifts too, — which, it was once thought, would be practically sublime; for he carried off all manner of college prizes, and was the Admirable-Crichton of Königsberg University and the Graduates there. But in the end they proved to be gifts of the vocal sort rather; and have led only to what we see. A man, I should guess, rather of buoyant vivacity than of depth or strength in intellect or otherwise. Excessively buoyant, ingenious; full of wit, kindly exuberance; a loyal-hearted gay-tempered man, and much a favourite in society as well as with the Prince. If we were to dwell on Reinsberg, Keyserling would come prominently forward.

Major von Stille, ultimately Major-General von Stille, I should also mention: near twenty years older than the Prince; a wise thoughtful soldier (went, by permission, to the Siege of Dantzic lately, to improve himself); a man capable of rugged service, when the time comes. His military writings were once in considerable esteem with professional men; and still impress a lay reader with favourable notions towards Stille, as a man of real worth and sense.*

* Campagnes du Roi de Prusse; — a posthumous Book; anterior to the Seven-Years War.

Of Monsieur Jordan and the Literary Set.

There is, of course, a Chaplain in the Establishment: a Reverend "M. Deschamps;" who preaches to them all, in French no doubt. Friedrich never hears Deschamps: Friedrich is always over at Ruppín on Sundays; and there "himself reads a Sermon to the Garrison," as part of the day's duties. Reads finely, in a melodious feeling manner, says Formey, who can judge: "even in his old days, he would incidentally," when some Emeritus Parson, like Formey, chanced to be with him, "roll out choice passages from Bossuet, from Massillon," in a voice and with a look, which would have been perfection in the pulpit, thinks Formey.*

M. Jordan, though he was called "Lecteur (Reader)," did not read to him, I can perceive; but took charge of the Books; busied himself honestly to be useful in all manner of literary or quasi-literary ways. He was, as his name indicates, from the French-refugee department: a recent acquisition, much valued at Reinsberg. As he makes a figure afterwards, we had better mark him a little.

Jordan's parents were wealthy religious persons, in trade at Berlin; this Jordan (Charles Etienne, age now thirty-six) was their eldest son. It seems they had destined him from birth, consulting their own pious feeling merely, to be a Preacher of the Gospel; the other sons, all of them reckoned clever too, were brought up to secular employments. And preach he, this poor Charles Etienne, accordingly did; what best Gospel he had; in an honest manner, all say, — though never with other than a kind of reluctance on the part of Nature, forced out of her course. He had wedded, been clergyman in two successive country places; when his wife died, leaving him one little daughter, and a heart much overset by that event. Friends, wealthy Brothers probably, had pushed him out into the free air, in these circumstances: "Take a Tour; Holland, England; feel the winds blowing, see the sun shining, as in times past: it will do you good!"

* Souvenirs d'un Citoyen (2de édition, Paris, 1797), t. 87.

Jordan, in the course of his Tour, came to composure on several points. He found that, by frugality, by wise management of some peculium already his, his little Daughter and he might have quietness at Berlin, and the necessary food and raiment; — and, on the whole, that he would altogether cease preaching, and settle down there, among his Books, in a frugal manner. Which he did; — and was living so, when the Prince, searching for that kind of person, got tidings of him. And here he is at Reinsberg; bustling about, in a brisk, modestly frank and cheerful manner: well liked by everybody; by his Master very well and ever better, who grew into real regard, esteem and even friendship for him, and has much Correspondence, of a freer kind than is common to him, with little Jordan, so long as they lived together. Jordan's death, ten years hence, was probably the one considerable pain he had ever given his neighbours, in this the ultimate section of his life.

I find him described, at Reinsberg, as a small nimble figure, of Southern-French aspect; black, uncommonly bright eyes; and a general aspect of adroitness, modesty, sense, sincerity; good prognostics, which on acquaintance with the man were pleasantly fulfilled.

For the sake of these considerations, I fished out, from the Old-Book Catalogues and sea of forgetfulness, some of the poor Books he wrote; especially a Voyage Littéraire,* Journal of that first Sanitary Excursion or Tour he took, to get the clouds blown from his mind. A Literary Voyage which awakens a kind of tragic feeling; being itself dead, and treating of matters which are all gone dead. So many immortal writers, Dutch chiefly, whom Jordan is enabled to report as having effloresced, or being soon to effloresce, in such and such forms, of Books important to the learned: leafy, blossomy Forest of Literature, waving glorious in the then sunlight to Jordan; — and it lies all now, to Jordan and us, not withered only, but abolished; compressed into a film of indiscriminate peat. Consider what that peat is made of, O celebrated or uncelebrated reader, and take a moral from Jordan's Book! Other merit, except indeed clearness and commendable brevity, the Voyage Littéraire or other little Books of Jordan's have not now. A few of his Letters to Friedrich, which exist, are the only writings with the least life left in them, and this an accidental life, not momentous to him or us. Dryasdust informs me, "Abbé Jordan, "alone of the Crown-Prince's cavaliers, sleeps in the "Town of Reinsberg, not in the Schloss:" and if I ask, Why? — there is no answer. Probably his poor little Daughterkin was beside him there? —

* Histoire d'un Voyage Littéraire fait, en MDCCXXXIII, en France, en Angleterre et en Hollande (2de édition, à La Haye, 1736).

We have to say of Friedrich's Associates, that generally they were of intelligent type, each of them master of something or other, and capable of rational discourse upon that at least. Integrity, loyalty of character, was indispensable; good humour, wit if it could be had, were much in request. There was no man of shining distinction there; but they were the best that could be had, and that is saying all. Friedrich cannot be said, either as Prince or as King, to have been superlatively successful in his choice of associates. With one single exception, to be noticed shortly, there is not one of them whom we should now remember except for Friedrich's sake; — uniformly they are men whom it is now a weariness to hear of, except in a cursory manner. One man of shining parts he had, and one only; no man ever of really high and great mind. The latter sort are not so easy to get; rarely producible on the soil of this Earth! Nor is it certain how Friedrich might have managed with one of this sort, or he with Friedrich; — though Friedrich unquestionably would have tried, had the chance offered. For he loved intellect as few men on the throne, or off it, ever did; and the little he could gather of it round him often seems to me a fact tragical rather than otherwise.

With the outer Berlin social world, acting and reacting, Friedrich has his connexions, which obscurely emerge on us now and then. Literary Eminences, who are generally of Theological vesture; any follower of Philosophy, especially if he be of refined manners withal, or known in fashionable life, is sure to attract him; and gains ample recognition at Reinsberg or on Town-visits. But the Berlin Theological or Literary world at that time, still more the Berlin Social, like a sunk extinct object, continues very dim in those old records; and to say truth, what features we have of it do not invite to miraculous efforts for farther acquaintance. Venerable Beausobre, with his History of the Manicheans,* and other learned things, — we heard of him long since, in Toland and the Republican Queen's time, as a light of the world. He is now fourscore, grown white as snow; very serene, polite, with a smack of French noblesse in him, perhaps a smack of affectation traceable too. The Crown-Prince, on one of his Berlin visits, wished to see this Beausobre; got a meeting appointed, in somebody's rooms "in the French College," and waited for the venerable man. Venerable man entered, loftily serene as a martyr Preacher of the Word, something of an ancient Seigneur de Beausobre in him, too; for the rest, soft as sunset, and really with fine radiances, in a somewhat twisted state, in that good old mind of

* Histoire critique de Manichée et du Manichéisme: wrote also Remarques &c. sur le Nouveau Testament, which were once famous; Histoire de la Réformation; &c. &c. He is Beausobre Senior; there were two Sons (one of them born in second wedlock, after Papa was 70), who were likewise given to writing. — See Formey, Souvenirs d'un Citoyen, i. 33—39.

his. "What have you been reading lately, M. de Beaussobre?" said the Prince, to begin conversation. "Ah, Monseigneur, I have just risen from reading the sublimest piece of writing that exists" — "And what?" — "The exordium of St. John's Gospel: — In the Beginning was the Word; and the Word was with God, and the Word was —" Which somewhat took the Prince by surprise, as Forney reports: though he rallied straightway, and got good conversation out of the old gentleman. To whom, we perceive, he writes once or twice,* — a copy of his own verses to correct, on one occasion, — and is very respectful and considerate.

Forney tells us of another French sage, personally known to the Prince since Boyhood: for he used to be about the Palace, doing something. This is one La Croze: Professor of, I think, "Philosophy" in the French College: sublime Monster of Erudition, at that time; forgotten now, I fear, by everybody. Swag-bellied, short of wind; liable to rages, to utterances of a coarse nature, a decidedly ugly, monstrous and rather stupid kind of man. Knew twenty languages, in a coarse inexact way. Attempted deep kinds of discourse, in the lecture-room and elsewhere: but usually broke off into endless welters of anecdote, not always of cleanly nature: and after every two or three words, a desperate sigh, not for sorrow, but on account of flatbushness and fat. Forney gives a portraiture of him: not worth copying farther. The same Forney, standing one day somewhere on the streets of Berlin, was himself, he cannot doubt, seen by the Crown-Prince in passing; "who asked M. Jordan, who that was," and got answer: — is not that a comfortable fact? Nothing farther came of it; — respectable Ex-Parson Formey, though ever ready with his pen, being indeed of very vapid nature, not wanted at Reinsberg, as we can guess.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 121-125. Letters are all of 1737; the last of Beaussobre's years.

There is M. Achard, too, another Preacher, supreme of his sort, in the then Berlin circles; to whom or from whom a Letter or two exist. Letters worthless, if it were not for one dim indication: That, on inquiry, the Crown-Prince had been consulting this supreme Achard on the difficulties of Orthodoxy;* and had given him texts, or a text, to preach from. Supreme Achard did not abolish the difficulties for his inquiring Prince, — who complains respectfully that "his faith is weak," and leaves us dark as to particulars. This Achard passage is almost the only hint we have of what might have been an important chapter: Friedrich's Religious History at Reinsberg. The expression "weak faith" I take to be meant not in mockery, but in ingenuous regret and solicitude; much painful fermentation, probably, on the religious question in those Reinsberg years! But the old "Gnadenwahl" business, the Free-Grace controversy, had taught him to be cautious as to what he uttered on those points. The fermentation, therefore, had to go on under cover; what the result of it was, is notorious enough; though the steps of the process are not in any point known.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. pp. 112-117: date, March-June 1736.

Enough now of such details. Outwardly or inwardly, there is no History, or almost none, to be had of this Reinsberg Period; the extensive records of it consisting, as usual, mainly of chaotic nugatory matter, opaque to the mind of readers. There is copious Correspondence of the Crown-Prince, with at least dates to it for most part: but this, which should be the main resource, proves likewise a poor one; the Crown-Prince's Letters, now or afterwards, being almost never of a deep or intimate quality; and seldom turning on events or facts at all, and then not always on facts interesting, on facts clearly apprehensible to us in that extinct element.

The Thing, we know always, is there; but vision of the Thing is only to be had faintly, intermittently. Dim inane twilight, with here and there a transient spark falling somewhither in it; — you do at last, by desperate persistence, get to discern outlines, features: — “The Thing cannot always have been No-thing,” you reflect! Outlines, features: — and perhaps, after all, those are mostly what the reader wants on this occasion.

CHAPTER II.

OF VOLTAIRE AND THE LITERARY CORRESPONDENCES.

ONE of Friedrich's grand purposes at Reinsberg, to himself privately the grandest there, which he follows with constant loyalty and ardour, is that of scaling the heights of the Muses' Hill withal; of attaining mastery, discipleship, in Art and Philosophy; — or in candour let us call it, what it truly was, that of enlightening and fortifying himself with clear knowledge, clear belief, on all sides; and acquiring some spiritual panoply in which to front the coming practicalities of life. This, he feels well, will be a noble use of his seclusion in those still places; and it must be owned, he struggles and endeavours towards this, with great perseverance, by all the methods in his power, here, or wherever afterwards he might be.

Here at Reinsberg, one of his readiest methods, his pleasantest if not his usefulest, is that of getting into correspondence with the chief spirits of his time. Which accordingly he forthwith sets about, after getting into Reinsberg; and continues, as we shall see, with much assiduity. Rollin, Fontenelle, and other French lights of the then firmament, — his Letters to them exist; and could be given in some quantity: but it is better not. They are intrinsically the common Letters on such occasions: "O sublime demigod of literature, how small

"are princely distinctions as soon as they are time; thou who engross with the veil of the temple, and ishest with thy face shining!" — To which the response is: — "Hail, think you so, most happy, gracious, Lustrous Prince, with every convenience round you, and such prospects ahead?" Well, think you at any rate, — and, as the Irish say, more power to your Honour's Glory!" This really is nearly all the said Sets of Letters contain: and except perhaps the Voltaire Set, none of them give symptoms of much capacity to contain more.

Certainly there was no want of Literary Men discernible from Reinsberg at that time: and the young Prince corresponds with a good many of them: temporal potentate saluting spiritual, from the distance, — in a way highly interesting to the then parties, but now without interest, except of the reflex kind, to any creature. A very cold and empty portion, this, of the Friedrich Correspondence: standing there to testify what his admiration was for literary talent, or the great reputation of such; but in itself uninteresting utterly, and of freezing influence on the now living mind. Most of those French lights of the then firmament are gone out. Forgotten altogether: or recognised, like Rollin and others, for polished dullards, university bigwigs, and longwinded commonplace persons, deserving nothing but oblivion. To Montesquieu, — not yet called "Baron de Montesquieu" with Esprit des Loix, but "M. de Secondat" with (Anonymous) Lettres Persanes, and already known to the world for a person of sharp audacious eyesight, — it does not appear that Friedrich addressed any Letter, now or afterwards. No notice of Montesquieu; nor of some others, the absence of whom is a little unexpected. Probably it was want of knowledge mainly; for his appetite was not fastidious at this time. And certainly he did hit the centre of the mark, and get into the very kernel of French Literature, when, in 1736, hardly yet established in his new quarters, he addressed himself to the shining Figure known to us as “Arouet Junior” long since, and now called M. de Voltaire; which latter is still a name notable in Friedrich’s History and that of Mankind. Friedrich’s first Letter, challenging Voltaire to correspondence, dates itself 8th August 1736; and Voltaire’s Answer, — the Reinsberg Household still only in its second month, — was probably the brightest event which had yet befallen there.

On various accounts it will behove us to look a good deal more strictly into this Voltaire; and, as his relations to Friedrich and to the world are so multiplex, endeavour to disengage the real likeness of the man from the circumambient noise and confusion, which in his instance continue very great. “Voltaire was the “spiritual complement of Friedrich,” says Sauerteig once: “what little of lasting their poor Century produced lies mainly in these Two. A very somnambulating Century! But what little it did, we must “call Friedrich; what little it thought, Voltaire. Other “fruit we have not from it, to speak of, at this day. “Voltaire, and what can be faithfully done on the Vol“taire Creed; ‘Realised Voltairism;’ — admit it, reader, “not in a too triumphant humour, — is not that pretty “much the net historical product of the Eighteenth “Century? The rest of its history either pure somnam“bulism; or a mere Controversy, to the effect, ‘Realised “Voltairism? How soon shall it be realised, then?

“Not at once, surely!’ So that Friedrich and Voltaire “are related, not by accident only. They are, they for “want of better, the two Original Men of their Century;
“the chief, and in a sense the sole products of their “Century. They alone remain to us as still living re“sults from it, — such as they are. And the rest, “truly, ought to depart and vanish (as they are now “doing); being mere ephemera; contemporary eaters, “scramblers for provender, talkers of acceptable hear“say; and related merely to the butteries and wiggeries “of their time, and not related to the Perennialities at “all, as these Two were.” — With more of the like sort from Sauerteig.

M. de Voltaire, who used to be M. François-Marie Arouet, was at this time about forty,* and had gone through various fortunes; a man, now and henceforth, in a high degree conspicuous, and questionable to his fellow-creatures. Clear knowledge of him ought, at this stage, to be common; but unexpectedly it is not. What endless writing and biographying there has been about this man; in which one still reads, with a kind of lazy satisfaction, due to the subject, and to the French genius in that department! But the man himself, and his environment and practical aspects, what the actual physiognomy of his life and of him can have been, is dark from beginning to ending; and much is left in an ambiguous undecipherable condition to us. A proper History of Voltaire, in which should be discoverable, luminous to human creatures, what he was, what element he lived in, what work he did: this is still a problem for the genius of France! —

* Born, 20th February 1694; the younger of two sons: Father, “François Arouet, a Notary of the Châtelet, ultimately Treasurer of the Chamber of Accounts;” Mother, “Marguerite d’Aumart, of a noble family of Poitou.”

His Father's name is known to us; the name of his Father's profession, too, but not clearly the nature of it; still less his Father's character, economic circumstances, physiognomy spiritual or social: not the least possibility granted you of forming an image, however faint, of that notable man and household, which distinguished itself to all the earth by producing little François into the light of this sun. Of Madame Arouet, who, or what, or how she was, nothing whatever is known. A human reader, pestered continually with the Madame-Denises, Abbé-Mignots and enigmatic nieces and nephews, would have wished to know, at least, what children, besides François, Madame Arouet had: once for all, How many children? Name them, with year of birth, year of death, according to the church-registers: they all, at any rate, had that degree of history! No; even that has not been done. Beneficent correspondents of my own make answer, after some research, No register of the Arouets anywhere to be had. The very name VOLTAIRE, if you ask whence came it? there is no answer, or worse than none. — The fit “History” of this man, which might be one of the shining Epics of his Century, and the lucid summary and soul of any History France then had, but which would require almost a French demigod to do it, is still a great way off, if on the road at all! For present purposes, we select what follows from a well-known hand:

“Youth of Voltaire (1694—1725). — French Biographers “have left the Arouet Household very dark for us; mean“while we can perceive, or guess, that it was moderately well
“in economic respects; the François was the second of the “Two Sons; and that old Arouet, a steady, practical and “perhaps rather sharp-tempered old gentleman, of official “legal habits and position, ‘Notary of the Châtelet’ and “something else, had destined him for the Law Profession; as “was natural enough to a son of M. Arouet, who had himself “succeeded well in Law, and could there, best of all, open “roads for a clever second son. François accordingly sat ‘in “chambers,’ as we call it; and his fellow-clerks much loved “him, — the most amusing fellow in the world. Sat in “chambers, even became an advocate; but did not in the least “take to advocateship; — took to poetry, and other airy “dangerous courses, speculative, practical; causing family “explosions and rebukes, which were without effect on him.
“A young fool, bent on sportful pursuits instead of serious;
“more and more shuddering at Law. To the surprise and “indignation of M. Arouet Senior. Law, with its wigs and “sheepskins, pointing towards high honours and deep flesh“pots, had no charms for the young fool; he could not be “made to like Law.

“Whereupon arose explosions, as we hint; family ex“plosions on the part of M. Arouet Senior; such that friends “had to interfere, and it was uncertain what would come of it.
“One judicious friend, ‘M. Caumartin,’ took the young fellow “home to his house in the country for a time; — and there, “incidentally, brought him acquainted with old gentlemen
“deep in the traditions of Henri Quatre and the cognate topics;
“which much inflamed the young fellow, and produced big “schemes in the head of him.

“M. Arouet Senior stood strong for Law; but it was be“coming daily more impossible. Madrigals, dramas (not “without actresses), satirical wit, airy verse, and all manner “of adventurous speculation, were what this young man went “upon; and was getting more and more loved for; introduced, “even, to the superior circles, and recognised there as one of “the brightest young fellows ever seen. Which tended, of “course, to confirm him in his folly, and open other outlooks
“and harbours of refuge than the paternal one.

“Such things, strange to M. Arouet Senior, were in vogue
“then; wicked Regent d’Orléans having succeeded sublime “Louis XIV., and set strange fashions to the Quality. Not “likely to profit this fool François, thought M. Arouet Senior;
“and was much confirmed in his notion, when a rhymed “Lampoon against the Government having come out (Les J’ai “vu, as they call it*), and become the rage, as a clever thing
“of the kind will, it was imputed to the brightest young fellow “in France, M. Arouet’s Son. Who, in fact, was not the “Author; but was not believed on his denial; and saw himself,

* “I have seen (J’ai vu)” this ignominy occur, “I have seen” that other, — to the amount of a dozen or two; — “and am not yet twenty.” Copy of it, and guess as to authorship, in Œuvres de Voltaire, i. 321.

"in spite of his high connexions, ruthlessly lodged in the "Bastille in consequence. 'Let him sit,' thought M. Arouet
"Senior, 'and come to his senses there!' He sat for eighteen "months (age still little above twenty); but privately employed
"his time, not in repentance, or in serious legal studies, but in "writing a Poem on his Henri Quatre. 'Epic Poem,' no less;
"the La Ligue, as he then called it; which it was his hope the "whole world would one day fall in love with; — as it did.
"Nay, in two years more, he had done a Play, Cedipe the re"nowned name of it; which 'ran for forty-eight nights' (18th
"November 1718, the first of them); and was enough to turn any
"head of such age. Law may be considered hopeless, even by "M. Arouet Senior.

"Try him in the Diplomatic line; break these bad habits
"and connexions, thought M. Arouet, at one time; and sent "him to the French Ambassador in Holland, — on good be"haviour, as it were, and by way of temporary banishment.
"But neither did this answer. On the contrary, the young "fellow got into scrapes again; got into amatory intrigues, —
"young lady visiting you in men's clothes, young lady's "mother inveigling, and I know not what; — so that the Am"bassador was glad to send him home again unmarried;
"marked, as it were, 'Glass, with care!' And the young
"lady's mother printed his Letters, not the least worth reading;
"— and the old M. Arouet seems now to have hung up his "head; to have settled some small allowance on him, with "peremptory no-hope of more, and said, 'Go your own way,
"then, foolish junior: the elder shall be my son.' M. Arouet "disappears at this point, or nearly so, from the history of his "son François; and I think must have died in not many years.
"Poor old M. Arouet closed his old eyes without the least con"ception what a prodigious ever-memorable thing he had done
"unknowingly, in sending this François into the world, to “kindle such universal ‘dry dungheap of a rotten world,’ and “set it blazing! Francois, his Father’s synonym, came to be “representative of the family, after all; the elder Brother also “having died before long. Except certain confused niece-

“and-nephew personages, progeny of the sisters, François has “no more trouble or solacement from the paternal household.
“François meanwhile is his Father’s synonym, and signs “Arouet Junior, ‘François Arouet L. j. (le jeune).’

“‘All of us Princes, then, or Poets!’ said he, one night at “supper, looking to right and left: the brightest fellow in the “world, well fit to be Phœbus Apollo of such circles; and great “things now ahead of him. Dissolute Regent d’Orléans, “politest, most debauched of men, and very witty, holds the “helm; near him Dubois the Devil’s Cardinal, and so many “bright spirits. All the Luciferous Spiritualism there is in “France is lifting anchor, under these auspices, joyfully “towards new latitudes and Isles of the Blest. What may not “François hope to become? ‘Hmph!’ answers M. Arouet “Senior, steadily, so long as he lives. Here are one or two “subsequent phases, epochs or turning-points, of the young “gentleman’s career.

“Phasis First (1725—1728.) — The accomplished Duc de “Sulli (Year 1725, day not recorded) is giving in his hôtel a “dinner, such as usual; and a bright witty company is as“sembled; — the brightest young fellow in France sure to be “there; and with his electric coruscations illuminating every“thing, and keeping the table in a roar. To the delight of “most; not to that of a certain splenetic ill-given Duc de “Rohan; grandee of high rank, great haughtiness, and very “ill behaviour in the world; who feels impatient at the notice “taken of a mere civic individual, Arouet Junior. ‘Quel est
“‘donc ce jeune homme qui parle si haut, Who is this young man

“that talks so loud, then?’ exclaims the proud splenetic Duke. “‘Monseigneur’, flashes the young man back upon him in an “electric manner, ‘It is one who does not drag a big name “about with him; but who secures respect for the name he “‘has!’ Figure that, in the penetrating grandly clangorous “voice (voix sombre et majestueuse), and the momentary flash “of eyes that attended it. Duc de Rohan rose, in a sulphurous “frame of mind; and went his ways. What date? You ask “the idle French Biographer in vain; — see only, after more “and more inspection, that the incident is true; and with “labour date it, summer of the Year 1725. Treaty of Utrecht “itself, though all the Newspapers and Own Correspondents “were so interested in it, was perhaps but a foolish matter to “date, in comparison!

“About a week after, M. Arouet Junior was again dining “with the Duc de Sulli, and a fine company as before. A “servant whispers him, That somebody has called, and wants “him below. ‘Cannot come,’ answers Arouet; ‘how can I, “so engaged?’ Servant returns after a minute or two: “‘Pardon, Monsieur; I am to say, it is to do an act of beneficence “that you are wanted below!’ Arouet lays down his knife “and fork; descends instantly to see what act it is. A carriage “is in the court, and hackney-coach near it: ‘Would Monsieur “have the extreme goodness to come to the door of the “carriage, in a case of necessity?’ At the door of the “carriage, hands seize the collar of him, hold him as in a vice; “diabolic visage of Duc de Rohan is visible inside, who utters, “looking to the hackney-coach, some ‘Voilà, Now then!’ “Whereupon the hackney-coach opens, gives out three “porters, or hired bullies, with the due implements: scandalous “actuality of horsewhipping descends on the back of poor “Arouet, who shrieks and execrates to no purpose, nobody “being near. ‘That will do,’ says Rohan at last, and the “gallant ducal party drive off; young Arouet, with torn frills

“and deranged hair, rushing up stairs again, in such a mood
“as is easy to fancy. Everybody is sorry, inconsolable, every“body shocked; nobody volunteers to help in avenging.
“‘Monseigneur de Sulli, is not such atrocity done to one of “‘your guests, an insult to yourself?’ asks Arouet. ‘Well, “‘yes perhaps, but’ — Monseigneur de Sulli shrugs his “shoulders, and proposes nothing. Arouet withdrew, of “course in a most blazing condition, to consider what he could,
“on his own strength, do in this conjuncture.

“His Biographer Duvernet says, he decided on doing two “things: learning English and the small-sword exercise.*
“He retired to the country for six months, and perfected “himself in these two branches. Being perfect, he challenged “Duc de Rohan in the proper manner; applying ingenious “compulsives withal, to secure acceptance of the challenge.
“Rohan accepted, not without some difficulty, and compulsion
“at the Theatre or otherwise: — accepted, but withal con“fessed to his wife. The result was, no measuring of swords “took place; and Rohan only blighted by public opinion, or “incapable of farther blight that way, went at large; a “convenient Lettre de Cachet having put Arouet again in the “Bastille. Where for six months Arouet lodged a second time,
“the innocent not the guilty; making, we can well suppose, “innumerable reflexions on the phenomena of human life.
“Imprisonment once over, he hastily quitted for England;

* La Vie de Voltaire, par M (à Genève, 1786), pp. 55-57: or pp. 60-63, in his second form of the Book. The “M” is an Abbé Duvernet; of no great mark otherwise. He got into Revolution trouble afterwards, but escaped with his head; and republished his Book, swollen out somewhat by new “Anecdotes” and republican bluster, in this second instance; signing himself T. J. D. V - - (Paris, 1797). A vague but not dark or mendacious little Book; with traces of real eyesight in it, — by one who had personally known Voltaire, or at least seen and heard him.

“shaking the dust of ungrateful France off his feet, — resolved “to change his unhappy name, for one thing.

“Smelfungus, denouncing the torpid fatuity of Voltaire’s “Biographers, says he never met with one Frenchman, even of “the Literary classes, who could tell him whence this Name “VOLTAIRE originated. ‘A petite terre, small family estate,’
“they said; and sent him hunting through Topographies, far “and wide, to no purpose. Others answered, ‘Volterra in “Italy, some connection with Volterra’, — and seemed even to “know that this was but fatuity. ‘In ever-talking, ever-“printing Paris, is it as in Timbuctoo, then, which neither “prints nor has anything to print?’ exclaims poor Smel“fungus! He tells us at last, the name Voltaire is a mere “Anagram of Arouet l. j. — you try it; A.R.O.U.E.T. L.J. = “V.O.L.T.A.I.R.E: and perceive at once, with obligations to “Smelfungus, that he has settled this small matter for you,
“and that you can be silent upon it forever thenceforth.

“The anagram VOLTAIRE, gloomily settled in the Bastille
“in this manner, can be reckoned a very famous wide-sounding “outer result of the Rohan impertinence and blackguardism;
“but it is not worth naming beside the inner intrinsic result,
“of banishing Voltaire to England at this point of his course.
“England was full of Constitutionality and Freethinking; “Tolands, Collinses, Wollastons, Bolingbrokes, still living; “very free indeed. England, one is astonished to see, has “its royal-republican ways of doing; something Roman in it,
“from Peerage down to Plebs; strange and curious to the eye
“of M. de Voltaire. Sciences flourishing: Newton still alive, “white with four-score years, the venerable hoary man;
“Locke’s Gospel of Common Sense in full vogue, or even “done into verse, by incomparable Mr. Pope, for the culti“vated upper classes. In science, in religion, in politics,
“what a surprising ‘liberty’ allowed or taken! Never was a “freer turn of thinking. And (what to M. de Voltaire is a “pleasant feature) it is Freethinking with ruffles to its shirt

“and rings on its fingers; — never yet, the least, dreaming
“of the shirtless or sansculottic state that lies ahead for it!
“That is the palmy condition of English Liberty, when M. de “Voltaire arrives there.

“In a man just out of the Bastille on those terms, there is “a mind driven by hard suffering into seriousness, and pro“voked by indignant comparisons and remembrances. As if “you had elaborately ploughed and pulverised the mind of “this Voltaire to receive with its utmost avidity, and strength “of fertility, whatever seed England may have for it. That “was a notable conjuncture of a man with circumstances.
“The question, Is this man to grow up a Court Poet; to do “legitimate dramas, lampoons, witty verses, and wild spiri“tual and practical magnificences, the like never seen;
“Princes and Princesses recognising him as plainly divine,
“and keeping him tied by enchantments to that poor trade as “his task in life? is answered in the negative. No: and it is “not quite to decorate and comfort your ‘dry dunghheap’ of a “world, or the fortunate cocks that scratch on it, that the “man Voltaire is here; but to shoot lightnings into it, and “set it ablaze one day! That was an important alternative;
“truly of world-importance to the poor generations that now “are: and it was settled, in good part, by this voyage to “England, as one may surmise. Such is sometimes the use “of a dissolute Rohan in this world; for the gods make im“plements of all manner of things.

“M. de Voltaire (for we now drop the Arouet altogether,
“and never hear of it more) came to England — when? Quitted “England — when? Sorrow on all fatuous Biographers, who “spend their time not in laying permanent foundation-stones,
“but in fencing with the wind! — I at last find indisputably,

“it was in 1726 that he came to England:* and he himself “tells us that he quitted it ‘in 1728.’ Spent, therefore, some “two years there in all, — last year of George I.’s reign, and “first of George II.’s. But mere inanity and darkness visible “reign, in all his Biographies, over this period of his life, “which was above all others worth investigating: seek not to “know it; no man has inquired into it, probably no competent “man now ever will. By hints in certain Letters of the period,
 “we learn that he lodged, or at one time lodged, in ‘Maiden “Lane, Covent Garden;’ one of those old Houses that yet “stand in Maiden Lane: for which small fact let us be thank“ful. His own Letters of the period are dated now and then
 “from ‘Wandsworth.’ Allusions there are to Bolingbroke;
 “but the Wandsworth is not Bolingbroke’s mansion, which “stood in Battersea; the Wandsworth was one Edward “Fawkeners; a man somewhat admirable to young Voltaire,
 “but extinct now, or nearly so, in human memory. He had “been a Turkey Merchant, it would seem, and nevertheless “was admitted to speak his word in intellectual, even in “political circles; which was wonderful to young Voltaire.
 “This Fawkeners, I think, became Sir Edward Fawkeners,
 “and some kind of ‘Secretary to the Duke of Cumberland:’
 “— I judge it to be the same Fawkeners; a man highly un-“memorable now, were it not for the young Frenchman he “was hospitable to. Fawkeners and Bolingbroke’s are per“haps the only names that turn up in Voltaire’s Letters of this “English Period: over which generally there reigns, in the “French Biographies, inane darkness, with an intimation, “half-involuntary, that it should have been made luminous,
 “and would if perfectly easy.

“We know, from other sources, that he had acquaintance

* Got out of the Bastille, with orders to leave France, “20th April” of that year (Œuvres de Voltaire, l. 40 n.).

“with many men in England, with all manner of important “men: Notes to Pope in Voltaire-English, visit of Voltaire to “Congreve, Notes even to such as Lady Sundon in the interior “of the Palace, are known of. The brightest young fellow “in the world did not want for introductions to the highest “quarters, in that time of political alliance, and extensive “private acquaintance, between his Country and ours. And “all this he was the man to improve, both in the trivial and
“the deep sense. His bow to the divine Princess Caroline “and suite, could it fail in graceful reverence or what else was “needed? Dextrous right words in the right places, winged “with esprit so-called: that was the man’s supreme talent, in “which he had no match, to the last. A most brilliant, swift, “far-glancing young man, disposed to make himself generally “agreeable. For the rest, his wonder, we can see, was kept “awake; wonder readily inclining, in his circumstances, to“wards admiration. The stereotype figure of the English“man, always the same, which turns up in Voltaire’s Works, “is worth noting in this respect. A rugged surly kind of “fellow, much-enduring, not intrinsically bad; splenetic with“out complaint, standing oddly inexpugnable in that natural “stoicism of his; taciturn, yet with strange flashes of speech
“in him now and then, something which goes beyond laughter
“and articulate logic, and is the taciturn elixir of these two,
“what they call ‘humour’ in their dialect: this is pretty much
“the reverse of Voltaire’s own self, and therefore all the wel-“comer to him; delineated always with a kind of mockery,
“but with evident love. What excellences are in England, “thought Voltaire; no Bastille in it, for one thing! Newton’s “Philosophy annihilated the vortexes of Descartes for him; “Locke’s Toleration is very grand (especially if all is un“certain, and you are in the minority); then Collins, Wol“laston and Company, — no vile Jesuits here, strong in their “mendacious malodorous stupidity, despicablest yet most “dangerous of creatures, to check freedom or thought! Illus“trious Mr. Pope, of the Essay on Man, surely he is admir“able; as are Pericles Bolingbroke, and many others. Even “Bolingbroke’s high-lackered brass is gold to this young “French friend of his. — Through all which admirations “and exaggerations the progress of the young man, toward “certain very serious attainments and achievements, is con“ceivable enough.

“One other man, who ought to be mentioned in the Bio“graphies, I find Voltaire to have made acquaintance with,
 “in England: a German M. Fabrice, one of several Brothers “called Fabrice or Fabricius, — concerning whom, how he “had been at Bender, and how Voltaire picked Charles Douze “from the memory of him, there was already mention. The “same Fabrice who held poor George I. in his arms while they “drove, galloping, to Osnabrück, that night, in extremis:
 “— not needing mention again. The following is more to “the point.

“Voltaire, among his multifarious studies while in Eng“land, did not forget that of economics: his Poem La Ligue, “— surreptitiously printed, three years since, under that “title (one Desfontaines, a hungry Ex-Jesuit, the perpetra“tor),* — he now took in hand for his own benefit; washed
 “it clean of its blots; christened it Henriade, under which “name it is still known over all the world; — and printed it;
 “published it here, by subscription, in 1726; one of the first “things he undertook. Very splendid subscription; headed “by Princess Caroline, and much favoured by the opulent of “quality. Which yielded an unknown but very considerable “sum of thousands sterling, and grounded not only the world-

* 1723, Vie, par T. J. D. V. (that is, “M” in the second form), p. 59.

“renown but the domestic finance of M. de Voltaire. For the “fame of the ‘new epic,’ as this Henriade was called, soon “spread into all lands. And such fame, and other agencies “on his behalf, having opened the way home for Voltaire,
 “he took this sum of Thousands Sterling along with him; laid
 “it out judiciously in some city lottery, or profitable scrip
 “then going at Paris, which at once doubled the amount:
 “after which he invested it in Corn-trade, Army Clothing, “Barbary-trade, Commissariat Bacon-trade, all manner of “well-chosen trades, — being one of the shrewdest financiers “on record; — and never from that day wanted abundance of “money, for one thing. Which he judged to be extremely “expedient for a literary man, especially in times of Jesuit
 “and other tribulation. ‘You have only to watch,’ he would “say, ‘what scrips, public loans, investments in the field of “‘agio, are offered; if you exert any judgment, it is easy to “‘gain there: do not the stupidest of mortals gain there, by “‘intensely attending to it?’

“Voltaire got almost nothing by his Books, which he “generally had to disavow, and denounce as surreptitious “supposititious scandals, when some sharp-set Bookseller, in “whose way he had laid the savoury article as bait, chose to “risk his ears for the profit of snatching and publishing it.
 “Next to nothing by his Books; but by his fine finance-talent “otherwise, he had become possessed of ample moneys.
 “Which were so cunningly disposed, too, that he had re“sources in every Country; and no conceivable combination “of confiscating Jesuits and dark fanatic Official Persons “could throw him out of a livelihood, whithersoever he might “be forced to run. A man that looks facts in the face; which “is creditable of him. The vulgar call it avarice and the like,
 “as their way is: but M. de Voltaire is convinced that effects
 “will follow causes; and that it well beseems a lonely Ishma-

“elite, hunting his way through the howling wildernesses and “confused ravenous populations of this world, to have money
“in his pocket. He died with a revenue of some 7,000*l.* a “year, probably as good as 20,000*l.* at present; the richest “literary man ever heard of hitherto, as well as the remark-“ablest in some other respects. But we have to mark the se“cond phasis of his life” (in which Friedrich now sees him),
“and how it grew out of this first one.

“Phasis Second (1728-1733).—Returning home as if quietly “triumphant, with such a talent in him, and such a sanction “put upon it and him by a neighbouring Nation and by all the “world, Voltaire was warmly received, in his old aristocratic “circles, by cultivated France generally; and now in 1728, in “his thirty-second year, might begin to have definite outlooks
“of a sufficiently royal kind, in Literature and otherwise.
“Nor is he slow, far from it, to advance, to conquer and “enjoy. He writes successful literature, falls in love with “women of quality; encourages the indigent and humble;
“eclipses, and in case of need tramples down, the too proud.
“He elegises poor Adrienne Lecouvreur, the Actress, — our “poor friend the Comte de Saxe’s female friend; who loyally “emptied out her whole purse for him, 30,000*l.* in one sum,
“that he might try for Courland, and whether he could fall
“in love with her of the Swollen Cheek there; which proved “impossible. Elegises Adrienne, we say, and even buries
“her under cloud of night: ready to protect unfortunate-“females of merit. Especially theatrical females; having much “to do in the theatre, which we perceive to be the pulpit or “real preaching-place of cultivated France in those years.
“All manner of verse, all manner of prose, he dashes off with “surprising speed and grace: showers of light spray for the “moment; and always some current of graver enterprise, “Siècle de Louis Quatorze or the like, going on beneath it.

“For he is a most diligent, swift, unresting man; and studies
“and learns amazingly in such a rackety existence. Vic“torious enough in some senses; defeat, in Literature, never “visited him. His Plays, coming thick on the heels of one “another, rapid brilliant pieces, are brilliantly received by “the unofficial world; and ought to dethrone dull Crébillon, “and the sleepy potentates of Poetry that now are. Which “in fact is their result with the public; but not yet in the “highest courtly places; — a defect much to be condemned “and lamented.

“Numerous enemies arise, as is natural, of an envious “venomous description; this is another ever-widening shadow
“in the sunshine. In fact we perceive he has, besides the “inner obstacles and griefs, two classes of outward ones:
“There are Lions on his path and also Dogs. Lions are the “Ex-Bishop of Mirepoix, and certain other dark Holy Fathers, “or potent orthodox Official Persons. These, though Vol“taire does not yet declare his heterodoxy (which, indeed, is “but the orthodoxy of the cultivated private circles), perceive
“well enough, even by the Henriade, and its talk of ‘tolerance,’ “horror of ‘fanaticism’ and the like, what this one’s ‘doxy is;
“and how dangerous he, not a mere mute man of quality, but “a talking spirit with winged words, may be; — and they “much annoy and terrify him, by their roaring in the distance.
“Which roaring cannot, of course, convince; and since it is “not permitted to kill, can only provoke a talking spirit into “still deeper strains of heterodoxy for his own private behoof.
“These are the Lions on his path: beasts conscious to them“selves of good intentions; but manifesting from Voltaire’s “point of view, it must be owned, a physiognomy unlovely
“to a degree. ‘Light is superior to darkness, I should think,’ “meditates Voltaire; ‘power of thought to the want of power!’

“‘The Ane de Mirepoix (Ass of Mirepoix), * pretending to use
 “‘me in this manner, is it other, in the court of Rhadamanthus, “‘than transcendent Stupidity, with transcendent Insolence “‘superadded?’ Voltaire grows more and more heterodox; and “‘is ripening towards dangerous utterances, though he strives “‘to hold in.

“‘The Dogs upon his path, again, are all the disloyal en“‘vious persons of the Writing Class, whom his success has “‘offended; and, more generally, all the dishonest hungry “‘persons who can gain a morsel by biting him: and their name “‘is legion. It must be owned, about as ugly a Doggery (in- “‘fâme Canaille’ he might well reckon them) as has, before or “‘since, infested the path of a man. They are not hired and “‘set on, as angry suspicion might suggest; but they are “‘covertly somewhat patronised by the Mirepoix, or orthodox “‘Official class. Scandalous Ex-Jesuit Desfontaines, Thersites “‘Fréron,—these are but types of an endless Doggery; whose “‘names and works should be blotted out; whose one claim
 “‘to memory is, that the riding man so often angrily sprang “‘down, and tried horsewhipping them into silence. A vain “‘attempt. The individual hound flies howling, abjectly “‘petitioning and promising; but the rest bark all with new “‘comfort, and even he starts again straightway. It is bad “‘travelling in these woods, with such Lions and such Dogs.
 “‘And then the sparsely scattered Human Creatures (so we may “‘call them in contrast, persons of Quality for most part)
 “‘are not always what they should be. The grand mansions
 “‘you arrive at, in this waste-howling solitude, prove some“‘times essentially Robber-towers;—and there may be Armida “‘Palaces, and divine-looking Armidas, where your ultimate “‘fate is still worse.

‘Que le monde est rempli d’enchanteurs, je ne dis rien d’enchanteresses!’

* Poor joke of Voltaire’s, continually applied to this Bishop, or Ex-

“To think of it, the solitary Ishmaelite journeying, never so “well mounted, through such a wilderness; with lions, dogs, “human robbers and Armidas all about him; himself lonely, “friendless under the stars: — one could pity him withal, “though that is not the feeling he solicits; nor gets hitherto,
“even at this impartial distance.

“One of the beautiful creatures of Quality, — we hope, not “an Armida, — who came athwart Voltaire, in these times,
“was a Madame du Châtelet; distinguished from all the others
“by a love of mathematics and the pure sciences, were it no“thing else. She was still young, under thirty; the literary “man still under forty. With her Husband, to whom she “had brought a child, or couple of children, there was no “formal quarrel; but they were living apart, neither much “heeding the other, as was by no means a case without exam“ple at that time; Monsieur soldiering, and philandering
“about, in garrison or elsewhere; Madame, in a like humour, “doing the best for herself in the high circles of society, to “which he and she belonged. Most wearisome barren circles
“to a person of thought, as both she and M. de Voltaire em“phatically admitted to one another, on first making acquaint“ance. But is there no help?

“Madame had tried the pure sciences and philosophies, in “Books: but how much more charming, when they come to “you as a Human Philosopher; handsome, magnanimous, and “the wittiest man in the world. Young Madame was not “regularly beautiful; but she was very piquant, radiant, ad“venturous; understood other things than the pure sciences,

Bishop, — who was thought, generally, a rather tenebrific man for appointment to the Feuille des Bénéfices (charge of nominating Bishops, keeping King's conscience, &c.); and who, in that capacity, signed himself Anc. (by no means 'Ane,' but 'Ancien, Whilom') de Mirepoix, — to the enragement of Voltaire often enough.

“and could be abundantly coquettish and engaging. I have “known her scuttle off, on an evening, with a couple of adventurous young wives of Quality, to the remote lodging of “the witty M. de Voltaire, and make his dim evening radiant
“to him.* Then again, in public crowds, I have seen them;
“obliged to dismount, to the peril of Madame’s diamonds,
“there being a jam of carriages, and no getting forward for “half the day. In short, they are becoming more and more “intimate, to the extremest degree; and, scorning the world, “thank Heaven that they are mutually indispensable. Cannot
“we get away from this scurvy wasp’s-nest of a Paris, thought
“they, and live to ourselves and our Books?

“Madame was of high quality, one of the Breteuils; but “was poor in comparison, and her Husband the like. An old “Château of theirs, named Cirey, stands in a pleasant enough “little valley in Champagne; but so dilapidated, gaunt and “vacant, nobody can live in it. Voltaire, who is by this time
“a man of ample moneys, furnishes the requisite cash; Ma“dame and he, in sweet symphony, concert the plans:
“Cirey is repaired, at least parts of it are, into a boudoir
“of the gods, regardless of expense; nothing ever seen so “tasteful, so magnificent; and the two repair thither to “study, in peace, what sciences, pure and other, they have “a mind to. They are recognised as lovers, by the Parisian “public, with little audible censure from anybody there,
“— with none at all from the easy Husband; who occa“sionally even visits Cirey, if he be passing that way; and “is content to take matters as he finds them, without look“ing below the surface. For the Ten Commandments are

* One of Voltaire’s Letters.

 See (whoever is curious) Madame de Graigny: Vie Privée de Voltaire et de Madame du Châtelet (Paris, 1820). A six months of actual Letters written by poor Graigny, while sheltering at Cirey, Winter and Spring

“at a singular pass, in cultivated France at this epoch. Such “illicit-idyllic form of life has been the form of Voltaire’s “since 1733,” — for some three years now, when Friedrich and we first make acquaintance with him. “It lasted above a “dozen years more: an illicit marriage after its sort, and sub“ject only to the liabilities of such. Perhaps we may look in “upon the Cirey Household, ourselves, at some future time;
“and” — This Editor hopes not!

“Madame admits that for the first ten years it was, on the “whole, sublime; a perfect Eden on Earth, though stormy “now and then.* After ten years, it began to grow decidedly “dimmer; and in the course of few years more, it became “undeniably evident that M. de Voltaire ‘did not love me as “formerly’:— in fact, if Madame could have seen it, M. de “Voltaire was growing old, losing his teeth, and the like; and “did not care for anything as formerly! Which was a dread“ful discovery, and gave rise to results by and by.

“In this retreat at Cirey, varied with flying visits to Pa“ris, and kept awake by multifarious Correspondences, the “quantity of Literature done by the two was great and miscel“laneous. By Madame, chiefly in the region of the pure “sciences, in Newtonian Dissertations, competitions for Prizes,
“and the like: really sound and ingenious Pieces, entirely “forgotten long since. By Voltaire, in serious Tragedies, “Histories, in light Sketches and deep Dissertations; — “mockery getting ever wilder with him; the satirical vein, in 1738-1739; straitened there in various respects, — extremely ill off for fuel, among other things. Rugged practical Letters, shadowing out to us, unconsciously oftenest, and like a very mirror, the splendid and the sordid, the seamy side and the smooth, of Life at Cirey, in her experience of it.

Published, four-score years after, under the above title.

* Lettres Inédites de Madame la Marquise du Chastelet; auxquelles on a joint une Dissertation (&c. of hers): Paris, 1806.

“prose and verse, amazingly copious, and growing more and “more heterodox, as we can perceive. His troubles from the “ecclesiastical or Lion kind in the Literary forest, still more “from the rabid Doggery in it, are manifold, incessant. And “it is pleasantly notable, — during these first ten years, —
“with what desperate intensity, vigilance and fierceness, Ma“dame watches over all his interests and liabilities and ca“sualties great and small; leaping with her whole force into “M. de Voltaire’s scale of the balance, careless of antece“dences and consequences alike; flying, with the spirit of an “angry brood-hen, at the face of mastiffs, in defence of any “feather that is M. de Voltaire’s. To which Voltaire replies, “as he well may, with eloquent gratitude; with Verses to the “divine Emilie, with Gifts to her, verses and gifts the prettiest
“in the world; — and industriously celebrates the divine “Emilie to herself and all third parties.

“An ardent, aerial, gracefully predominant, and in the “end somewhat termagant female figure, this divine Emilie.
“Her temper, radiant rather than bland, was none of the “patientest on occasion; nor was M. de Voltaire the least of a “Job, if you came athwart him the wrong way. I have heard,
“their domestic symphony was liable to furious flaws, — let us “hope at great distances apart: — that ‘plates,’ in presence of “the lackeys, actual crockery or metal, have been known to “fly from end to end of the dinner-table; nay they mention “‘knives’ (though only in the way of oratorical action); and “Voltaire has been heard to exclaim, the sombre and majestic “voice of him risen to a very high pitch: ‘Ne me regardez tant
“‘de ces yeux hagards et louches, Don’t fix those haggard side-“long eyes on me, in that way!’ — mere shrillness of pale “rage presiding over the scene. But we hope it was only “once in the quarter, or seldomer: after which the element
“would be clearer for some time. A lonesome literary man, “who has got a Brood Phoenix to preside over him, and fly

“at the face of gods and men for him in that manner, ought to “be grateful.

“Perhaps we shall one day glance, personally, as it were,
“into Cirey with our readers;” — Not with this Editor or his!
“It will turn out beyond the reader’s expectation. Tolerable “illicit resting-place, so far as the illicit can be tolerable, for “a lonesome Man of Letters, who goes into the illicit. Helpful“ness, affection, or the flattering image of such, are by no “means wanting: squalls of infirm temper are not more fre“quent than in the most licit establishments of a similar sort.
“Madame, about this time, has a swift Palfrey, ‘Rossignol “(Nightingale)’ the name of him; and gallops fairy-like through “the winding valleys; being an ardent rider, and well-look“ing on horseback. Voltaire’s study is inlaid with — the “Graigny knows all what: — mere china tiles, gilt sculptures, “marble slabs, and the supreme of taste and expense: study “fit for the Phoebus Apollo of France, so far as Madame “could contrive it. Takes coffee with Madame, in the Gal“lery, about noon. And his bedroom, I expressly discern,* “looks out upon a running brook, the murmur of which is “pleasant to one.”

Enough, enough. We can perceive what kind of Voltaire it was to whom the Crown-Prince now addressed himself; and how luminous an object, shining afar out of the solitudes of Champagne upon the ardent young-man, still so capable of admiration. Model Epic, Henriade; model History, Charles Douze; sublime Tragedies, César, Alzire and others, which readers still know though with less enthusiasm, are blooming fresh

* Letters of Voltaire.

in Friedrich's memory and heart; such Literature as man never saw before; — and in the background Friedrich has inarticulately a feeling as if, in this man, there were something grander than all Literatures: a Reform of human Thought itself; a new "Gospel," good-tidings or God's-Message, by this man; — which Friedrich does not suspect, as the world with horror does, to be a new Ba'spel, or Devil's-Message of bad-tidings! A sublime enough Voltaire; radiant enough, over at Cirey yonder. To all lands, a visible Phœbus Apollo, climbing the eastern steeps; with arrows of celestial "new light" in his quiver; — capable of stretching many a big foul Python, belly uppermost, in its native mud, and ridding the poor world of her Nightmares and Mud-Serpents in some measure, we may hope! —

And so there begins, from this point, a lively Correspondence between Friedrich and Voltaire; which, with some interruptions of a notable sort, continued during their mutual Life; and is a conspicuous feature in the Biographies of both. The world talked much of it, and still talks; and has now at last got it all collected, and elucidated into a dimly legible form for studious readers.* It is by no means the diabolically wicked Correspondence it was thought to be; the reverse, indeed, on both sides; — but it has unfortunately become a very dull one, to the actual generation of mankind. Not without intrinsic merit; on the contrary

* Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric (xxi. xxii. xxiii., Berlin, 1853); who supersedes the lazy French Editors in this matter.

(if you read intensely, and bring the extinct alive again), it sparkles notably with epistolary grace and vivacity; and, on any terms, it has still passages of biographical and other interest: but the substance of it, then so new and shining, has fallen absolutely commonplace, the property of all the world, since then; and is now very wearisome to the reader. No doctrine or opinion in it that you have not heard, with clear belief or clear disbelief, a hundred times, and could wish rather not to hear again. The common fate of philosophical originalities in this world. As a Biographical Document, it is worth a very strict perusal, if you are interested that way in either Friedrich or Voltaire: finely significant hints and traits, though often almost evanescent, so slight are they, abound in this Correspondence; frankness, veracity under graceful forms, being the rule of it, strange to say! As an illustration of Two memorable Characters, and of their Century; showing on what terms the Sage Plato of the Eighteenth Century and his Tyrant Dionysius correspond, and what their manners are to one another, it may long have a kind of interest to mankind: otherwise it has not much left.

In Friedrich's History it was, no doubt, an important fact, that there lived a Voltaire along with him, twenty years his senior. With another Theory of the Universe than the Voltaire one, how much other had Friedrich too been! But the Theory called by Voltaire's name was not properly of Voltaire's creating, but only of his uttering and publishing; it lay ready for everybody's finding; and could not well have been altogether missed by such a one as Friedrich. So that perhaps we exaggerate the effects of Voltaire on him, though undoubtedly they were considerable. Considerable; but not derived from this express Correspondence, which seldom turns on didactic points at all; derived rather from Voltaire's Printed Works, where they lay derivable to all the world. Certain enough it is, Voltaire was at this time, and continued all his days, Friedrich's chief Thinker in the world; unofficially, the chief Preacher, Prophet and Priest of this Working King; — no better off for a spiritual Trismegistus was poor Friedrich in the world! On the practical side, Friedrich soon outgrew him, — perhaps had already outgrown, having far more veracity of character, and an intellect far better built in the silent parts of it, and trained too by hard experiences to know shadow from substance; — outgrew him, and gradually learned to look down upon him, occasionally with much contempt, in regard to the practical. But in all changes of humour towards Voltaire, Friedrich, we observe, considers him as plainly supreme in speculative intellect; and has no doubt but, for thinking and speaking, Nature never made such another. Which may be taken as a notable feature of Friedrich's History; and gives rise to passages between Voltaire and him, which will make much noise in time coming.

Here, meanwhile, faithfully presented though in condensed form, is the starting of the Correspondence: First Letter of it, and first Response. Two Pieces which were once bright as the summer sunrise on both sides, but are now fallen very dim; and have much needed condensation, and abridgment by omission of the unessential, — so lengthy are they, so extinct and almost dreary to us! Sublime “Wolf” and his “Philosophy,” how he was hunted out of Halle with it, long since; and now shines from Marburg, his “Philosophy” and he supreme among mankind: this, and other extinct points, the reader’s fancy will endeavour to rekindle in some slight measure:

To M. de Voltaire, at Cirey (From the Crown-Prince).

“Berlin, 8th August 1736.

“Monsieur, — Although I have not the satisfaction of “knowing you personally, you are not the less known to me “through your Works. They are treasures of the mind, if I “may so express myself; and they reveal to the reader new “beauties at every fresh perusal. I think I have recognised
“in them the character of their ingenious Author, who does “honour to our age and to human nature. If ever the dispute
“on the comparative merits of the Moderns and the Ancients “should be revived, the modern great men will owe it to you,
“and to you only, that the scale is turned in their favour.
“With the excellent quality of Poet you join innumerable “others more or less related to it. Never did Poet before put “Metaphysics into rhythmic cadence: to you the honour was “reserved of doing it first.

“This taste for Philosophy manifested in your writings, “induces me to send you a translated Copy of the Accusation
“and the Defence of M. Wolf, the most celebrated Philosopher “of our days; who, for having carried light into the darkest “places of Metaphysics, is cruelly accused of irreligion and “atheism. Such is the destiny of great men; their superior “genius exposes them to the poisoned arrows of calumny and “envy. I am about getting a Translation made of the “Treatise on God, the Soul, and the World,” — Translation done by an Excellency Suhm, as has been hinted, — “from “the pen of the same Author. I will send it you when it “is finished; and I am sure that the force of evidence in “all his propositions, and their close geometrical sequence,

 “will strike you.

“The kindness and assistance you afford to all who devote “themselves to the Arts and Sciences, makes me hope that “you will not exclude me from the number of those whom you “find worthy of your instructions:— it is so I would call your “intercourse by Correspondence of Letters; which cannot be “other than profitable to every thinking being. * *

* * “beauties without number in your works. Your Hen- “riade delights me. The tragedy of César shows us sustained “characters; the sentiments in it are magnificent and grand,
 “and one feels that Brutus is either a Roman, or else an English“man (ou un Romain ou un Anglais). Your Alzire, to the “graces of novelty, adds” * *

“Monsieur, there is nothing I wish so much as to possess
 “all your Writings,” even those not printed hitherto. “Pray, “Monsieur, do communicate them to me without reserve. If “there be amongst your Manuscripts any that you wish to “conceal from the eyes of the public, I engage to keep them “in the profoundest secrecy. I am unluckily aware, that “the faith of Princes is an object of little respect in our days; “nevertheless I hope you will make an exception from the “general rule in my favour. I should think myself richer in “the possession of your Works than in that of all the transient “goods of Fortune. These the same chance grants and takes “away: your Works one can make one’s own by means of “memory, so that they last us whilst it lasts. Knowing how “weak my own memory is, I am in the highest degree select in “what I trust to it.

“If Poetry were what it was before your appearance, a “strumming of wearisome idyls, insipid eclogues, tuneful “nothings, I should renounce it forever:” but in your hands it becomes ennobled; a melodious “course of morals; worthy “of the admiration and the study of cultivated minds (des “honnêtes gens). You” — in fine, “you inspire the ambition “to follow in your footsteps. But I, how often have I said to “myself: ‘Malheureux, throw down a burden which is above “thy strength! One cannot imitate Voltaire, without being “Voltaire!’”

“It is in such moments that I have felt how small are those “advantages of birth, those vapours of grandeur, with which “vanity would solace us! They amount to little, properly
“to nothing (pour mieux dire, à rien). Nature, when she “pleases, forms a great soul, endowed with faculties that “can advance the Arts and Sciences; and it is the part of “Princes to recompense his noble toils. Ah, would Glory
“but make use of me to crown your successes! My only fear
“would be, lest this Country, little fertile in laurels, proved “unable to furnish enough of them.

“If my destiny refuse me the happiness of being able to “possess you, may I, at least, hope one day to see the man “whom I have admired so long now from afar; and to assure “you, by word of mouth, that I am, — With all the esteem “and consideration due to those who, following the torch of “truth for guide, consecrate their labours to the Public, — “Monsieur, your affectionate friend,

“FRÉDÉRIC, P.R. of Prussia.”*

By what route or conveyance this Letter went, I cannot say. In general, it is to be observed, these Friedrich-Voltaire Letters, — liable perhaps to be considered contraband at both ends of their course, — do not go by the Post; but by French-Prussian Ministers, by Hamburg Merchants, and other safe subterranean channels. Voltaire, with enthusiasm, and no doubt promptly, answers within three weeks:

To the Crown-Prince, at Reinsberg (From Voltaire).

“Cirey, 26th August 1736.

“Monseigneur, — A man must be void of all feeling who “were not infinitely moved by the Letter which your Royal “Highness has deigned to honour me with. My self-love is “only too much flattered by it: but my love of Mankind, which “I have always nourished in my heart, and which, I venture “to say, forms the basis of my character, has given me a “very much purer pleasure, — to see that there is, now in the “world, a Prince who thinks as a man; a Philosopher Prince,
“who will make men happy.

“Permit me to say, there is not a man on the earth but “owes thanks for the care you take to cultivate by sound phi“losophy a soul that is born for command. Good kings there “never were except those that had begun by seeking to in“struct themselves; by knowing good men from bad; by “loving what was true, by detesting persecution and supersti“tion. No Prince, persisting in such thoughts, but might “bring back the golden age into his Countries! And why “do so few Princes seek this glory? You feel it, Monseigneur, “it is because they all think more of their Royalty than of “Mankind. Precisely the reverse is your case: — and, un“less, one day, the tumult of business and the wickedness

“of men alter so divine a character, you will be worshiped
“by your People, and loved by the whole world. Philoso“phers, worthy of the name, will flock to your States; thinkers
“will crowd round that throne, as the skilfullest artisans
“do to the city where their art is in request. The illus“trious Queen Christina quitted her kingdom to go in search “of the Arts; reign you, Monseigneur, and the Arts will come “to seek you.

“May you only never be disgusted with the Sciences by
“the quarrels of their Cultivators! A race of men no better “than Courtiers; often enough as greedy, intriguing, false “and cruel as these,” and still more ridiculous in the mischief they do. “And how sad for mankind that the very Inter“preters of Heaven’s commandments, the Theologians, I “mean, are sometimes the most dangerous of all! Professed “messengers of the Divinity, yet men sometimes of obscure “ideas and pernicious behaviour; their soul blown out with “mere darkness; full of gall and pride, in proportion as “it is empty of truths. Every thinking being who is not “of their opinion, is an Atheist; and every King who “does not favour them will be damned. Dangerous to the “very throne; and yet intrinsically insignificant:” best way is, leave their big talk and them alone; speedy collapse will follow. * * *

“I cannot sufficiently thank your Royal Highness for the “gift of that little Book about Monsieur Wolf. I respect Me“taphysical ideas; rays of lightning they are, in the midst “of deep night. More, I think, is not to be hoped from Meta“physics. It does not seem likely that the First-principles “of things will ever be known. The mice that nestle in some “little holes of an immense Building, know not whether it is “eternal, or who the Architect, or why he built it. Such mice “are we; and the Divine Architect who built the Universe has “never, that I know of, told his secret to one of us. If any“body could pretend to guess correctly, it is M. Wolf.” Beautiful in your Royal Highness to protect such a man. And how beautiful it will be, to send me his chief Book, as you have the kindness to promise! “The Heir of a Monarchy, “from his palace, attending to the wants of a recluse far “off! Condescend to afford me the pleasure of that Book, “Monseigneur. * *

“What your Royal Highness thinks of Poetry is just:
“verses that do not teach men new and touching truths,
“do not deserve to be read.” As to my own poor verses — But, after all, “that Henriade is the writing of an Honest “Man: fit, in that sense, that it find grace with a Philosopher “Prince.

“I will obey your commands as to sending those un“published Pieces. You shall be my public, Monseigneur;
“your criticisms will be my reward: it is a price few So“vereigns can pay. I am sure of your secrecy: your virtue
“and your intellect must be in proportion. I should indeed “consider it a precious happiness to come and pay my court to “your Royal Highness! One travels to Rome to see paintings
“and ruins: a Prince such as you is a much more singular ob“ject; worthier of a long journey! But the friendship” (divine Emilie’s) “which keeps me in this retirement does not permit
“my leaving it. No doubt you think with Julian, that great
“and much-calumniated man, who said, ‘Friends should al“ways be preferred to Kings.’

“In whatever corner of the world I may end my life, be “assured, Monseigneur, my wishes will continually be for you,
“— that is to say, for a whole People’s happiness. My heart
“will rank itself among your subjects; your glory will ever “be dear to me. I shall wish, May you always be like your“self, and may other Kings be like you! — I am, with profound respect, your Royal Highness’s most humble

“VOLTAIRE.”*

The Correspondence, once kindled, went on apace; and soon burst forth, finding nourishment all round, into a shining little household fire, pleasant to the hands and hearts of both parties. Consent of opinions on important matters is not wanting; nor is emphasis in declaring the same. The mutual admiration, which is high, — high and intrinsic on Friedrich’s side; and on Voltaire’s, high if in part extrinsic, — by no means wants for emphasis of statement: superlatives, tempered by the best art, pass and repass. Friedrich, reading Voltaire’s immortal Manuscripts, confesses with a blush, before long, that he himself is a poor Apprentice that way. Voltaire, at sight of the Princely Productions, is full of admiration, of encouragement; does a little in correcting, solecisms of grammar chiefly; a little, by no means much. But it is a growing branch of employment; now and henceforth almost the one reality of function Voltaire can find for himself in this beautiful Correspondence. For, “Oh what a Crown-Prince, ripening forward to be the delight of human nature, and realise the dream of sages, Philosophy upon the Throne!” And on the other side, “Oh what a Phœbus Apollo, mounting the eastern sky, chasing the Nightmares, — sowing the Earth with orient pearl, to begin with!” — In which fine duet, it must be said, the Prince is perceptibly the truer singer; singing within compass, and from the heart; while the Phœbus shows himself acquainted with art, and warbles in seductive quavers, now and then beyond the pitch of his voice. We must own also, Friedrich proves little seducible; shows himself laudably indifferent to such siren-singing; — perhaps more used to flattery, and knowing by experience how little meal is to be made of chaff. Voltaire, in an ungrateful France, naturally plumes himself a good deal on such recognition by a Foreign Rising Sun; and, of the two, though so many years the elder, is much more like losing head a little.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxi. 10.

Elegant gifts are despatched to Cirey; gold-amber trinkets for Madame, perhaps an amber inkholder for Monsieur: priceless at Cirey as gifts of the very gods. By and by, a messenger goes express: the witty Colonel Keyserling, witty but experienced, whom we once named at Reinsberg; he is to go and see with his eyes, since his Master cannot. What a messenger there; ambassador from star to star! Keyserling's report at Reinsberg is not given; but we have Grafigny's, which is probably the more impartial. Keyserling's embassy was in the end of next year;* and there is plenty of airy writing about it and him, in these Letters.

Friedrich has translated the name Keyserling (diminutive of Kaiser) into "Cæsarion;" — and I should have said, he plays much upon names and also upon things, at Reinsberg, in that style; and has a good deal of airy symbolism, and cloudwork ingeniously painted round the solidities of his life there. Especially a "Bayard Order," as he calls it: Twelve of his selectest Friends made into a Chivalry Brotherhood, the names of whom are all changed, "Cæsarion" one of them; with dainty devices, and mimetic procedures of the due sort. Which are not wholly mummary; but have a spice of reality, to flavour them to a serious young heart. For the selection was rigorous, superior merit and behaviour a strict condition; and indeed several of these Bayard Chevaliers proved notable practical Champions in time coming; — for example Captain Fouquet, of whom we have heard before, in the dark Cüstrin days. This is a mentionable feature of the Reinsberg life, and of the young Prince's character there: pleasant to know of, from this distance; but not now worth knowing more in detail.

* 3d November 1737 (as we gather from the Correspondence).

The Friedrich-Voltaire Correspondence contains much incense; due whiffs of it, from Reinsberg side, to the "divine Emilie," Voltaire's quasi better-half or worse-half; who responds always in her divinest manner to Reinsberg, eager for more acquaintance there. The Du Châtelets had a Lawsuit in Brabant; very inveterate, perhaps a hundred years old or more; with the "House of Honsbrouck:"* this, not to speak of other causes, flights from French peril and the like, often brought Voltaire and his Dame into those parts; and gave rise to occasional hopes of meeting with Friedrich; which could not take effect. In more practical style, Voltaire solicits of him: "Could not your Royal Highness perhaps graciously speak to some of those Judicial Bigwigs in Brabant, and flap them up a little!" Which Friedrich, I think, did, by some good means. Happily by one means or other, Voltaire got the Lawsuit ended, — 1740, we might guess, but the time is not specified; — and Friedrich had a new claim, had there been need of new, to be regarded with worship by Madame.* But the proposed meeting with Madame could never take effect; not even when Friedrich's hands were free. Nay I notice at last, Friedrich had privately determined it never should; Madame evidently an inconvenient element to him. A young man not wanting in private power of eyesight; and able to distinguish chaff from meal! Voltaire and he will meet; meet, and also part; and there will be passages between them: — and the reader will again hear of this Correspondence of theirs, where it has a biographical interest. We are to conceive it, at present, as a principal light of life to the young heart at Reinsberg; a cheerful new fire, almost an altar-fire, irradiating the common dusk for him there.

* Lettres Inédites de Voltaire (Paris, 1826), p. 9.

Of another Correspondence, beautifully irradiative for the young heart, we must say almost nothing: the Correspondence with Suhm. Suhm the Saxon Minister, whom we have occasionally heard of, is an old Friend of the Crown-Prince's, dear and helpful to him: it is he who is now doing those Translations of Wolf, of which Voltaire lately saw specimen; translating Wolf at large, for the young man's behoof. The young man, restless to know the best Philosophy going, had tried reading of Wolf's chief Book; found it too abstruse, in Wolf's German: wherefore Suhm translates; sends it to him in limpid French; fascicle by fascicle, with commentaries; young man doing his best to understand and admire, — gratefully, not too successfully, we can perceive. That is the staple of the famous Suhm Correspondence; staple which nobody could now bear to be concerned with.

* Record of all this, left, like innumerable other things there, in an intrinsically dark condition, lies in Voltaire's Letters, — not much worth hunting up into clear daylight, the process being so difficult to a stranger.

Suhm is also helpful in finance difficulties, which are pretty frequent; works out subventions, loans under a handsome form, from the Czarina's and other Courts. Which is an operation of the utmost delicacy; perilous, should it be heard of at Potsdam. Wherefore Suhm and the Prince have a covert language for it; and affect still to be speaking of "Publishers" and "new Volumes," when they mean Lenders and Bank-Draughts. All these loans, I will hope, were accurately paid one day, as that from George II. was, in "rouleaus of new gold." We need not doubt the wholesome charm and blessing of so intimate a Correspondence to the Crown-Prince; and indeed his real love of the amiable Suhm, as Suhm's of him, comes beautifully to light in these Letters: but otherwise they are not now to be read without weariness, even dreariness, and have become a biographical reminiscence merely.

Concerning Graf von Manteufel, a third Literary Correspondent, and the only other considerable one, here, from a German Commentator on this matter, is a Clipping that will suffice:

“Manteufel was Saxon by birth, long a Minister of August the Strong, but quarrelled with August, owing to some frail female it is said, and had withdrawn to Berlin a few years ago. He shines there among the fashionable philosophical classes; underhand, perhaps does a little in the volunteer political line withal; being a very busy pushing gentleman. Tall of stature, ‘perfectly handsome at the age of sixty;’ * great partisan of Wolf and the Philosophies, awake to the Orthodoxies too. Writes flowing elegant French, in a softly trenchant, somewhat too all-knowing style. High manners traceable in him; but nothing of the noble loyalty, natural politeness and pious lucency of Suhm. One of his Letters to Friedrich has this slightly impertinent passage; — Friedrich, just getting settled in Reinsberg, having transiently mentioned ‘the quantity of fair-sex’ that had come about him there:

“‘*Berlin, 26th August 1736 (To the Crown-Prince). * * I am well persuaded your Royal Highness will regulate all that to perfection, and so manage that your fair-sex will be charmed to find themselves with you at Reinsberg, and you charmed to have them there. But permit me, your Royal Highness, to repeat in this place, what I one day took the liberty of saying here at Berlin: Nothing in the world would better suit the present interests of your Royal Highness and of us all, than some Heir of your Royal Highness’s making! Perhaps the tranquil convenience with which your Royal Highness at Reinsberg can now attend to that*

* Formey: Souvenirs d’un Citoyen, i. 39-45.

“object, will be of better effect than all those hasty and “transitory visits at Berlin were. At least, I wish it with the “best of my heart. I beg pardon, M^{on}seigneur, for intruding “thus into everything which concerns your Royal Highness;’
“— In truth, I am a rather impudent, busy-bodyish fellow,
“with superabundant dashing manner, speculation, utterance;
“and shall get myself ordered out of the Country, by my pre“sent correspondent, by and by. — ‘Being ever’, with the due “enthusiasm, “‘MANTEUFEL.’”*

“To which Friedrich’s Answer is of a kind to put a gag
“in the foul mouth of certain extraordinary Pamphleteer-“ings, that were once very copious in the world; and, in “particular, to set at rest the Herr Dr. Zimmermann, and “his poor puddle of calumnies and credulities, got together “in that weak pursuit of physiology under obscene circum“stances; —

“Which is the one good result I have gathered “from the Manteufel Correspondence,” continues our German friend; whom I vote with! — Or if the English reader never saw those Zimmermann or other dog-like Pamphleteerings and surmisings, let this Excerpt be mysterious and superfluous to the thankful English reader.

On the whole, we conceive to ourselves the abundant nature of Friedrich’s Correspondence, literary and other; and what kind of event the transit of that Post-functionary “from Fehrbellin northwards,” with his leathern bags, “twice a-week,” may have been at Reinsberg, in those years.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 487; — Friedrich’s Answer is, Reinsberg, 23d September (Ib. 489).

CHAPTER III.

CROWN-PRINCE MAKES A MORNING CALL.

THURSDAY, 25th October 1736, the Crown-Prince, with Lieutenant Buddenbrock and an attendant or two, drove over into Mecklenburg, to a Village and serene Schloss called Mirow, intending a small act of neighbourly civility there; on which perhaps an English reader of our time will consent to accompany him. It is but some ten or twelve miles off, in a northerly direction; Reinsberg being close on the frontier there. A pleasant enough morning's-drive, with the October sun shining on the silent heaths, on the many-coloured woods and you.

Mirow is an Apanage for one of the Mecklenburg-Strelitz junior branches; Mecklenburg-Strelitz being itself a junior compared to the Mecklenburg-Schwerin of which, and its infatuated Duke, we have heard so much in times past. Mirow and even Strelitz are not in a very shining state, — but indeed, we shall see them, as it were, with eyes. And the English reader is to note especially those Mirow people, as perhaps of some small interest to him, if he knew it. The Crown-Prince reports to Papa, in a satirical vein, not ungenially, and with much more freedom than is usual in those Reinsberg Letters of his:

"To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

"Reinsberg, 26th October 1736.

* * "Yesterday I went across to Mirow. To give my "Most All-gracious Father an idea of the place, I cannot "liken it to anything higher than Gross-Kreutz" (term of comparison lost upon us; say Garrat, at a venture, or the Clachan of Aberfoyle): "the one house in it, that can be called a "house, is not so good as the Parson's there. I made straight "for the Schloss; which is pretty much like the Gardenhouse "in Bornim: only there is a rampart round it; and an "old Tower, considerably in ruins, serves as a Gateway to "the House.

"Coming on the Drawbridge, I perceived an old stocking-knitter disguised as Grenadier, with his cap, cartridge-box "and musket laid to a side, that they might not hinder him in "his knitting-work. As I advanced, he asked, 'Whence I "'came, and whitherward I was going?' I answered, that "'I came from the Posthouse, and was going over this "'Bridge:' whereupon the Grenadier, quite in a passion, ran "to the Tower; where he opened a door, and called out the "Corporal. The Corporal seemed to have hardly been out of "bed; and in his great haste, had not taken time to put on "his shoes, nor quite button his breeches; with much flurry "he asked us, 'Where we were for, and how we came to treat "'the Sentry in that manner?' Without answering him at "all, we went our way towards the Schloss.

"Never in my life should I have taken this for a Schloss, "had it not been that there were two glass lamps fixed at the "door-posts, and the figures of two Cranes standing in front "of them, by way of Guards. We made up to the House; "and after knocking almost half an hour to no purpose, there "peered out at last an exceedingly old woman, who looked as "if she might have nursed the Prince of Mirow's father. The “poor woman, at sight of strangers, was so terrified, she “slammed the door to in our faces. We knocked again; and “seeing there could nothing be made of it, we went round to “the stables; where a fellow told us, ‘The young Prince with “his Consort was gone to Neu-Strelitz, a couple of miles off’

(ten miles English); ‘and the Duchess his Mother, who lives “here, had given him, to make the better figure, all her “people along with him; keeping nobody but the old woman
“to herself.’

“It was still early; so I thought I could not do better than “profit by the opportunity, and have a look at Neu-Strelitz.
“We took post-horses; and got thither about noon. Neu-“Strelitz is properly a Village; with only one street in it,
“where Chamberlains, Chancery-men, Domestics all lodge,
“and where there is an Inn. I cannot better describe it to my “Most All-gracious Father, than by that street in Gumbinnen
“where you go up to the Townhall, — except that no house “here is whitewashed. The Schloss is fine, and lies on a “lake, with a big garden; pretty much like Reinsberg in “situation.

“The first question I asked here was for the Prince of “Mirow: but they told me he had just driven off again to a “place called Kanow; which is only a couple of miles English “from Mirow, where we had been. Buddenbrock, who is ac“quainted with Neu-Strelitz, got me, from a chamberlain, “something to eat; and in the mean while, that Böhme came
“in, who was Adjutant in my Most All-gracious Father’s “Regiment” (not of Goltz, but King’s presumably): “Böhme
“did not know me till I hinted to him who I was. He told me,
“‘The Duke of Strelitz was an excellent seamster;’ fit to be Tailor to your Majesty in a manner, had not Fate been cruel,
“and that he made beautiful dressing-gowns (cassaquins) with “his needle.’ This made me curious to see him: so we had “ourselves presented as Foreigners; and it went off so well “that nobody recognised me. I cannot better describe the “Duke than by saying he is like old Stahl” (famed old medical man at Berlin, dead last year, physiognomy not known to actual readers), “in a blonde Abbé’s-periwig. He is extremely silly (blöde); his Hofrath Altrock tells him, as it “were, everything he has to say.” About fifty, this poor Duke; shrunk into needlework, for a quiet life, amid such tumults from Schwerin and elsewhere.

“Having taken leave, we drove right off to Kanow; and “got thither about six. It is a mere Village; and the Prince’s “Pleasure-House (Lusthaus) here is nothing better than an “ordinary Hunting-Lodge, such as any Forest-keeper has.
“I called in at the Miller’s; and had myself announced” at the Lusthaus “by his maid: upon which the Major-Domo “(Haus-Hofmeister) came over to the Mill, and complimented “me; with whom I proceeded to the Residenz,” — that is, back again to Mirow, “where the whole Mirow Family were “assembled. The Mother is a Princess of Schwartzburg, and “still the cleverest of them all,” — still under sixty; good old Mother, intent that her poor Son should appear to advantage, when visiting the more opulent Serenities. “His Aunt also,” mother’s sister, “was there. The Lady Spouse is small;
“a Niece to the Prince of Hildburghausen, who is in the Kaiser’s service: she was in the family-way; but (aber) seemed “otherwise to be a very good Princess.

“The first thing they entertained me with was, the sad “misfortune come upon their best Cook; who, with the cart
“that was bringing the provisions, had overset, and broken
“his arm; so that the provisions had all gone to nothing.
“Privately I have had inquiries made; there was not a word
“of truth in the story. At last we went to table; and, sure “enough, it looked as if the Cook and his provisions had come

“to some mishap; for certainly in the Three Crowns at Potsdam” (worst inn, one may guess, in the satirical vein), “there is better eating than here.

“At table, there was talk of nothing but of all the German “Princes who are not right in their wits (nicht recht klug),” — as Mirow himself, your Majesty knows, is reputed to be! “There was Weimar,* Gótha, Waldeck, Hoym, and the “whole lot of them, brought upon the carpet: — and after our “good Host had got considerably drunk, we rose, — and he “lovingly promised me that ‘he and his whole Family would “‘come and visit Reinsberg.’ Come he certainly will; but “how I shall get rid of him, God knows.

“I most submissively beg pardon of my Most All-gracious “Father for this long Letter; and” — we will terminate here.

Dilapidated Mirow and its inmates, portrayed in this satirical way, except as a view of Serene Highnesses fallen into Sleepy Hollow, excites little notice in the indolent mind; and that little, rather pleasantly contemptuous than really profitable. But one fact ought to kindle momentary interest in English readers: the young foolish Herr, in this dilapidated place, is no other than our “Old Queen Charlotte’s” Father that is to be, — a kind of Ancestor of ours, though we little guessed it! English readers will scan him with new

* Wilhelmina’s acquaintance; wedded, not without difficulty, to a superfluous Baireuth Sister-in-law by Wilhelmina (Mémoires de Wilhelmina, ii. 185-194): Grandfather of Goethe’s Friend; — is nothing like fairly out of his wits; only has a flea (as we may say) dancing occasionally in the ear of him. Perhaps it is so with the rest of these Serenities, here fallen upon evil tongues?

 (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, pp. 104-106.

curiosity, when he pays that return visit at Reinsberg: Which he does within the fortnight:

"To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

"Reinsberg, 8th November 1736.

* * "that my Most All-gracious Father has had the graciousness to send us some Swans. My Wife also has been exceedingly delighted at the fine Present sent her."
* * "General Prætorius," Danish Envoy, with whose Court there is some tiff of quarrel, "came hither yesterday to take leave of us; he seems very unwilling to quit Prussia."

"This morning, about three o'clock, my people woke me, with word that there was a Staffette come with Letters," — from your Majesty or Heaven knows whom! "I spring up in all haste; and opening the Letter, — find it is from the Prince of Mirow; who informs me that 'he will be here to-day at noon.' I have got all things in readiness to receive him, as if he were the Kaiser in person; and I hope there will be material for some amusement to my Most All-gracious Father, by next post." — Next post is half-a-week hence:

"To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

"Reinsberg, 11th November.

* * "The Prince of Mirow's visit was so curious, I must give my Most All-gracious Father a particular report of it. In my last, I mentioned how General Prætorius had come to us: he was in the room, when I entered with the Prince of Mirow; at sight of him Prætorius exclaimed, loud enough to be heard by everybody, 'Voilà le Prince Cajuca!'* Not one of us could help laughing; and I had my own trouble to turn it so that he did not get angry.

* Nickname out of some Romance, fallen extinct long since.

“Scarcely was the Prince got in, when they came to tell me, for his worse luck, that Prince Heinrich,” the Ill Margraf, “was come; — who accordingly trotted him out, in such a way that we thought we should all have died with laughing. Incessant praises were given him, especially for his fine clothes, his fine air, and his uncommon agility in dancing. And indeed I thought the dancing would never end.

“In the afternoon, to spoil his fine coat,” — a contrivance of the Ill Margraf’s, I should think, — “we stept out to shoot at target in the rain: he would not speak of it, but one could observe he was in much anxiety about the coat. In the evening, he got a glass or two in his head, and grew extremely merry; said at last, ‘He was sorry that, for divers state-reasons and businesses of moment, he must of necessity return home;’ — which, however, he put off till about two in the morning. I think, next day he would not remember very much of it.

“Prince Heinrich is gone to his Regiment again;” Prætorius too is off; — and we end with the proper Kow-tow.*

These Strelitzers, we said, are juniors to infatuated Schwerin; and poor Mirow is again junior to Strelitz: plainly one of the least opulent of Residences. At present, it is Dowager Apanage (Wittwen-Sitz) to the Widow of the late Strelitz of blessed memory: here, with her one Child, a boy now grown to what manhood we see, has the Serene Dowager lived, these twenty-eight years past; a Schwarzburg by birth, “the cleverest head among them all.” Twenty-eight years, in dilapidated Mirow: so long has that Tailoring Duke, her eldest stepson (child of a prior wife), been Supreme

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. part 3d, p. 109.

Head of Mecklenburg-Strelitz; employed with his needle, or we know not how, — collapsed plainly into tailoring at this date. There was but one other Son; this clever Lady's, twenty years junior, — "Prince of Mirow" whom we now see. Karl Ludwig Friedrich is the name of this one; age now twenty-eight gone. He, ever since the third month of him, when the poor Serene Father died ("May 1708"), has been at Mirow with Mamma; getting what education there was, — not too successfully, as would appear. Eight years ago, "in 1726," Mamma sent him off upon his travels; to Geneva, Italy, France: he looked in upon Vienna, too; got a Lieutenant Colonelcy in the Kaiser's Service, but did not like it; soon gave it up; and returned home to vegetate, perhaps to seek a wife, — having prospects of succession in Strelitz. For the Serene Half-Brother proves to have no children: were his tailoring once finished in the world, our Prince of Mirow is Duke in Chief. On this basis he wedded last year: the little Wife has already brought him one child, a Daughter; and has (as Friedrich notices) another under way, if it prosper. No lack of Daughters, nor of Sons by and by: eight years hence came the little Charlotte, — subsequently Mother of England: much to her and our astonishment.*

The poor man did not live to be Duke of Strelitz; he died, 1752, in little Charlotte's eighth year; Tailor

* Born (at Mirow), 19th May 1744; married (London), 8th September 1761; died, 18th November 1818 (Michaelis, il. 445, 446; Hübner, t. 195; Certeel, pp. 43, 22).

Duke surviving him a few months. Little Charlotte's Brother did then succeed, and lasted till 1794; after whom a second Brother, father of the now Serene Strelitzes; — who also is genealogically notable. For from him there came another still more famous Queen: Louisa of Prussia; beautiful to look upon, as "Aunt Charlotte" was not, in a high degree; and who showed herself a Heroine in Napoleon's time, as Aunt Charlotte never was called to do. Both Aunt and Niece were women of sense, of probity, propriety; fairly beyond the average of Queens. And as to their early poverty, ridiculous to this gold-nugget generation, I rather guess it may have done them benefits which the gold-nugget generation, in its Queens and otherwise, stands far more in want of than it thinks.

But enough of this Prince of Mirow, whom Friedrich has accidentally unearthed for us. Indeed there is no farther History of him, for or against. He evidently was not thought to have invented gunpowder, by the public. And yet who knows but, in his very simplicity, there lay something far beyond the Ill Margraf to whom he was so quizzable? Poor down-pressed brother mortal; somnambulating so pacifically in Sleepy Hollow yonder, and making no complaint!

He continued, though soon with less enthusiasm, and in the end very rarely, a visitor of Friedrich's during this Reinsberg time. Patriotic English readers may as well take the few remaining vestiges too, before quite dismissing him to Sleepy Hollow. Here they are, swept accurately together, from that Correspondence of Friedrich with Papa:

“*Reinsberg, 18th November 1736. * * report most submissively that the Prince of Mirow has again been here, with his Mother, Wife, Aunt, Hofdames, Cavaliers and entire Household; so that I thought it was the Flight into Egypt. I begin to have a fear of these good people, as they assured me they would have such pleasure in coming often!*”

“Reinsberg, 1st February 1737.” Let us give it in the Original too, as a specimen of German spelling:

“Der Printz von Mihrau ist vohr einigen thagen hier gewessen und haben wier einige Wasser schwemer in der See ihm zu Ehren gesmissen, seine frau ist mit einer thoten Printzesin nieder gekommen.— Der General schulenburg ist heute hier gekommen und wirdt morgen” — That is to say:

“The Prince of Mirow was here a few days ago; and we let off, in honour of him, a few water-rockets over the Lake: his Wife has been brought to bed of a dead Princess. General Schulenburg” (with a small s) “came hither today; and tomorrow will” * * .

“*Reinsberg, 28th March 1737. * * Prince von Mirow was here yesterday; and went shooting birds with us: he cannot see rightly, and shoots always with help of an opera-glass.*”

“Reinsberg, 20th October 1737. The Prince of Mirow was with us last Friday; and babbled much in his high way; among other things, white-lied to us, that the Kaiserinn gave him a certain porcelain snuff-box he was handling; but on being questioned more tightly, he confessed to me he had bought it in Vienna.” *

* Briefe an Vater, p. 71 (caret in Œuvres); pp. 85-114. — See Ib., 6th November 1737, for faint trace of a visit; and 25th September 1739, for another still fainter, the last there is.

And so let him somnambulate yonder, till the Two Queens, like winged Psyches, one after the other, manage to emerge from him.

Friedrich's Letters to his Father are described by some Prussian Editors as "very attractive, sehr anziehende Briefe;" which to a Foreign reader, seems a strange account of them. Letters very hard to understand completely; and rather insignificant when understood. They turn on Gifts sent to and sent from, "swans," "hams," with the unspeakable thanks for them; on recruits of so many inches; on the visitors that have been; they assure us that "there is no sickness in the Regiment," or tell expressly how much: — wholly small facts; nothing of speculation, and of ceremonial pipeclay a great deal. We know already under what nightmare conditions Friedrich wrote to his Father! The attitude of the Crown-Prince, sincerely reverent and filial, though obliged to appear ineffably so, and on the whole struggling under such mountains of encumbrance, yet loyally maintaining his equilibrium, does at last acquire, in these Letters, silently a kind of beauty to the best class of readers. But that is nearly their sole merit. By far the most human of them, that on the first Visit to Mirow, the reader has now seen; and may thank us much that we show him no more of them.*

* Friedrich des Grossen Briefe an seinen Vater (Berlin, 1838). Reduced in size, by suitable omissions; and properly spelt; but with little other elucidation for a stranger: in Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, pp. 1-123 (Berlin, 1856).

CHAPTER IV.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

WHILE these Mirow visits are about their best, and much else at Reinsberg is in comfortable progress, Friedrich's first year there just ending, there come accounts from England of quarrels broken out between the Britannic Majesty and his Prince of Wales. Discrepancies risen now to a height; and getting into the very Newspapers; — the Rising Sun too little under the control of the Setting, in that unquiet Country!

Prince Fred of England did not get to the Rhine Campaign, as we saw: he got some increase of Revenue, a Household of his own; and finally a Wife, as he had requested: a Sachsen-Gotha Princess; who, peerless Wilhelmina being unattainable, was welcome to Prince Fred. She is in the family-way, this summer 1737, a very young lady still; result thought to be due — When? Result being potential Heir to the British Nation, there ought to have been good calculation of the time when! But apparently nobody had well turned his attention that way. Or if Fred and Spouse had, as is presumable, Fred had given no notice to the Paternal Majesty, — “Let Paternal Majesty, always so cross to me, look out for himself in that matter.” Certain it is, Fred and Spouse, in the beginning of August 1737, are out at Hampton Court; potential Heir due before long, and no preparation made for it. August 11th in the evening, out at solitary Hampton Court, the poor young Mother's pains came on; no Chancellor there, no Archbishop to see the birth, — in fact, hardly the least medical help, and of political altogether none. Fred, in his flurry, or by forethought, — instead of dashing off expresses, at a gallop as of Epsom, to summon the necessary persons and appliances, yoked wheeled vehicles and rolled off to the old unprovided Palace of St. James's, London, with his poor Wife in person! Unwarned, unprovided; where nevertheless she was safely delivered that same night, — safely, as if by miracle. The crisis might have taken her on the very highway: never was such an imprudence. Owing, I will believe, to Fred's sudden flurry in the unprovided moment, — unprovided, by reason of prior desuetudes and discouragements to speech, on Papa's side. A shade of malice there might also be. Papa doubts not, it was malice aforethought all of it. "Had the potential Heir of the British Nation gone to wreck, or been born on the highway, from my quarrels with this bad Fred, what a scrape had I been in!" thinks Papa, and is in a towering permanence of wrath ever since; the very Newspapers and coffeehouses and populates now all getting vocal with it.

Papa, as it turned out, never more saw the face of Fred. Judicious Mamma, Queen Caroline, could not help a visit, one visit to the poor young Mother, so soon as proper: coming out from the visit, Prince Fred obsequiously escorting her to her carriage, found a crowd of people and populace, in front of St. James's; and there knelt down on the street, in his fine silk breeches, careless of the mud, to "beg a Mother's blessing," and show what a son he was, he for his part, in this sad discrepancy that had risen! Mamma threw a silent glance on him, containing volumes of mixed tenor; drove off; and saw no more of Fred, she either. I fear, this kneeling in the mud tells against Prince Fred; but in truth I do not know, nor even much care.* What a noise in England about nothing at all! — What a noisy Country, your Prussian Majesty! Foolish "rising sun" not restrainable there by the setting or shining one; opposition parties bowling him about among the constellations, like a very mad object! —

But in a month or two, there comes worse news out of England; falling heavy on the heart of Prussian Majesty: news that Queen Caroline herself is dead. Died as she had lived, with much constancy of mind, with a graceful modest courage and endurance; sinking quietly under the load of private miseries long quietly kept hidden, but now become too heavy, and for which the appointed rest was now here. Little George blubbered a good deal; fidgeted and flustered a good deal: much put about, poor foolish little soul. The dying Caroline recommended him to Walpole; advised his Majesty to marry again. "Non, j'aurai des maîtresses

* Lord Hervey: Memoirs of George the Second, II. 362-370, 409.

 "Sunday evening, 1st December (20th Nov.) 1737." Ib. pp. 510-522.

(No, I'll have mistresses)!" sobbed his Majesty passionately. "Ah, mon Dieu, cela n'empêche pas (that does not hinder)!" answered she, from long experience of the case. There is something stoically tragic in the history of Caroline with her flighty vapouring little King: seldom had foolish husband so wise a wife. "Dead!" thought Friedrich Wilhelm, looking back, through the whirlwinds of life, into sunny young scenes far enough away: "Dead!" — Walpole continued to manage the little King: but not for long; England itself rising in objection. Jenkins's Ear, I understand, is lying in cotton; and there are mad inflammable strata in that Nation, capable of exploding at a great rate.

From the Eastern regions our Newspapers are very full of events: War with the Turk going on there; Russia and Austria both doing their best against the Turk. The Russians had hardly finished their Polish-Election fighting, when they decided to have a stroke at the Turk, — Turk always an especial eye-sorrow to them, since that "Treaty of the Pruth," and Czar Peter's sad rebuff there: — Münnich marched direct out of Poland through the Ukraine, with his eye on the Crimea and furious business in that quarter. This is his second Campaign there, this of 1737; and furious business has not failed. Last year he stormed the Lines of Perecop, tore open the Crimea; took Azoph, he or Lacy under him; took many things; this year he had laid his plans for Oczakow; — takes Oczakow, — fiery event, blazing in all the Newspapers, at Reins-berg and elsewhere. Concerning which will the reader accept this condensed testimony by an eye-witness?

“Oczakow, 13th July 1737. Day before yesterday, Feld-marschall Münnich got to Oczakow, as he had planned,” — strong Turkish Town in the nook between the Black Sea and the estuary of the Dnieper; — “with intention to besiege it. “Siege-train, stores of every sort, which he had set afloat “upon the Dnieper in time enough, were to have been ready “for him at Oczakow. But the flotilla had been detained by “shallows, by waterfalls; not a boat was come, nor could any- “body say when they were coming. Meanwhile nothing is “to be had here; the very face of the earth the Turks have “burnt: not a blade of grass for cavalry within eight miles, “nor a stick of wood for engineers; not a hole for covert, and “the ground so hard you cannot raise redoubts on it: — Mün- “nich perceives he must attempt, nevertheless.

“On his right, by the seashore, Münnich finds some re- “mains of gardens, palisades; scrapes together some vestige “of shelter there (five thousand, or even ten thousand pio- “neers working desperately all that first night, 11th July, “with only half success); and on the morrow commences “firing with what artillery he has. Much out-fired by the “Turks inside; — his enterprise as good as desperate, unless “the Dnieper flotilla come soon. July 12th, all day the firing “continues, and all night; Turks extremely furious: about “an hour before daybreak, we notice burning in the interior, “Some wooden house kindled by us, town got on fire “yonder,” — and, praise to Heaven, they do not seem to suc- “ceed in quenching it again. Münnich turns out, in various “divisions; intent on trying something, had he the least en- “gineer furniture; — hopes desperately there may be promise “for him in that internal burning still visible.

“In the centre of Münnich’s line is one General Keith, a “deliberate stalwart Scotch gentleman, whom we shall know “better; Münnich himself is to the right: Could not one try “it by scalade; keep the internal burning free to spread, at “any rate? ‘Advance within musket-shot, General Keith!’
 “orders Münnich’s Aide-de-Camp cantering up. ‘I have “‘been this good while within it,’ answers Keith, pointing to “his dead men. Aide-de-Camp canters up a second time:
 “‘Advance within half musket-shot, General Keith, and quit
 “‘any covert you have!’ Keith does so; sends, with his re“spects to Feldmarschall Münnich, his remonstrance against “such a waste of human life. Aide-de-Camp canters up a “third time: ‘Feldmarschall Münnich is for trying a scalade; “‘hopes General Keith will do his best to coöperate!’ ‘For“ward then!’ answers Keith; advances close to the glacis;
 “finds a wet ditch twelve feet broad, and has not a stick of en“gineer furniture. Keith waits there two hours; his men, “under fire all the while, trying this and that to get across;
 “Münnich’s scalade going off ineffectual in like manner: —
 “till at length Keith’s men, and all men, tire of such a busi“ness, and roll back in great confusion out of shot-range.
 “Münnich gives himself up for lost. And indeed, says Mann-“stein, had the Turks sallied out in pursuit at that moment,
 “they might have chased us back to Russia. But the Turks
 “did not sally. And the internal conflagration is not quenched, “far from it; — and about nine A.M. their Powder-Magazine, “conflagration reaching it, roared aloft into the air, and killed “seven thousand of them,”* —

So that Oczakow was taken, sure enough; terms, life only: and every remaining Turk packs off from it,

* Mannstein, pp. 151-156.

some "twenty thousand inhabitants young and old" for one sad item. — A very blazing semi-absurd event, to be read of in Prussian military circles, — where General Keith will be better known one day.

Russian War with the Turk: that means withal, by old Treaties, aid of thirty thousand men from the Kaiser to Russia. Kaiser, so ruined lately, how can he send thirty thousand, and keep them recruited, in such distant expedition? Kaiser, much meditating, is advised it will be better to go frankly into the Turk on his own score, and try for slices of profit from him in this game. Kaiser declares war against the Turk; and what is still more interesting to Friedrich Wilhelm and the Berlin Circles, Seckendorf is named General of it. Feldzeugmeister now Feldmarschall Seckendorf, envy may say what it will, he has marched this season into the Lower-Donau Countries, — going to besiege Widdin, they say, — at the head of a big Army (on paper, almost a hundred and fifty thousand, light troops and heavy) — virtually Commander-in-Chief; though nominally our fine young friend, Franz of Lorraine bears the title of Commander, whom Seckendorf is to dry-nurse in the way sometimes practised. Going to besiege Widdin, they say. So has the poor Kaiser been advised. His wise old Eugene is now gone;* I fear his advisers, — a youngish Feldzeugmeister, Prince of Hildburghausen, the chief favourite among them, — are none of the wisest. All Protestants, we observe, these favourite Hildburghausens, Schmettaus, Seckendorfs of his; and Vienna is an orthodox papal Court; — and there is a Hofkriegsrath (Supreme Council of War), which has ruined many a General, poking too meddlesomely into his affairs! On the whole, Seckendorf will have his difficulties. Here is a scene, on the Lower Donau, different enough from that at Oczakow, not far from contemporaneous with it. The Austrian Army is at Kolitz, a march or two beyond Belgrad:

* Died 30th April 1736.

“Kolitz, 2d July 1737. This day, the Army not being on “march, but allowed to rest itself, Grand Duke Franz went “into the woods to hunt. Hunting up and down, he lost him“self; did not return at evening; and, as the night closed in
 “and no Generalissimo visible, the Generalissimo ad Latus
 “(such the title they had contrived for Seckendorf) was in “much alarm. Generalissimo ad Latus ordered out his whole “force of drummers, trumpeters: To fling themselves, post-
 “wise, deeper and deeper into the woods all round; to drum
 “there, and blow, in ever-widening circle, in prescribed notes,
 “and with all energy, till the Grand Duke were found. Grand “Duke being found, Seckendorf remonstrated, rebuked; a “thought too earnestly, some say, his temper being flurried,” — voice snuffling somewhat in alt, with lisp to help: — “so “that the Grand Duke took offence; flung off in a huff: and “always looked askance on the Feldmarschall from that “time;”* — quitting him altogether before long; and marching with Khevenhüller, Wallis, Hildburghausen, or any of the subordinate Generals rather. Probably Widdin will not go the road of Oczakow, nor the Austrians prosper like the Russians, this summer.

* See Lebensgeschichte des Grafen von Schmettau (by his Son; Berlin 1806), i. 27.

Pöllnitz, in Tobacco-Parliament, and in certain Berlin circles foolishly agape about this new Feldmarschall, maintains always, Seckendorf will come to nothing; which his Majesty zealously contradicts, — his Majesty, and some short-sighted private individuals still favourable to Seckendorf.* Exactly one week after that singular drum-and-trumpet operation on Duke Franz, the Last of the Medici dies at Florence; and Serene Franz, if he knew it, is Grand-Duke of Tuscany, according to bargain: a matter important to himself chiefly, and to France, who, for Stanislaus and Lorraine's sake, has had to pay him some 200,000*l.* a-year during the brief intermediate state.

Of Berg-and-Jülich again; and of Luiscius with the One Razor.

These remote occurrences are of small interest to his Prussian Majesty, in comparison with the Pfalz affair, the Cleve-Jülich succession, which lies so near home. His Majesty is uncommonly anxious to have this matter settled, in peace if possible. Kaiser and Reich, with the other Mediating Powers, go on mediating; but when will they decide? This year the old Bishop of Augsburg, one Brother of the older Kur-Pfalz Karl Philip, dies; nothing now between us and the event itself, but Karl Philip alone, who is verging towards eighty: the decision, to be peaceable, ought to be speedy! Friedrich Wilhelm, in January last, sent the expert Degenfeld, once of London, to old Karl Philip; and has him still there, with the most conciliatory offers: "Will leave your Sulzbachs a part, then; will be content with part, instead of the whole, which is mine if there be force in sealed parchment; will do anything for peace!" To which the old Kur-Pfalz, foolish old creature, is steadily deaf; answers vaguely, negatively always, in a polite manner; pushing his Majesty upon extremities painful to think of. "We hate war; but cannot quite do without justice, your Serenity," thinks Friedrich Wilhelm: "must it be the eighty thousand iron ramrods, then?" Obstinate Serenity continues deaf; and Friedrich Wilhelm's negotiations, there at Mannheim, over in Holland, and through Holland with England, not to speak of Kaiser and Reich close at hand, become very intense; vehemently earnest, about this matter, for the next two years. The details of which, inexpressibly uninteresting, shall be spared the reader.

* Pöllnitz: Memoiren, ii. 497-499.

 9th July (Fastes de Louis XV, p. 304).

Summary is, these Mediating Powers will be of no help to his Majesty; not even the Dutch will, with whom he is specially in friendship: nay, in the third year it becomes fatally manifest, the chief Mediating Powers, Kaiser and France, listening rather to political convenience, than to the claims of justice, go direct in Kur-Pfalz's favour; — by formal Treaty of their own,* France and the Kaiser settle, "That the Sulzbachers shall, as a preliminary, get provisional possession, on the now Serenity's decease; and shall continue undisturbed for two years, till Law decide between his Prussian Majesty and them." Two years; Law decide; — and we know what are the nine-points in a Law-case! This, at last, proved too much for his Majesty. Majesty's abstruse dubitations, meditations on such treatment by a Kaiser and others, did then, it appears, gloomily settle into fixed private purpose of trying it by the iron ramrods, when old Kur-Pfalz should die, — of marching with eighty thousand men into the Cleve Countries, and so welcoming any Sulzbach or other guests that might arrive. Happily old Kur-Pfalz did not die in his Majesty's time; survived his Majesty several years: so that the matter fell into other hands, — and was settled very well, near a century after.

* "Versailles, 18th January 1789" (Orlich: Geschichte der Schlesischen Kriege, i. 13); Mauvillon, ii. 405-446; &c.

Of certain wranglings with the little Town of Herstal, — Prussian Town (part of the Orange Heritage, once King Pepin's Town, if that were any matter now) in the Bishop of Liège's neighbourhood, Town highly insignificant otherwise, — we shall say nothing here, as they will fall to be treated, and be settled, at an after stage. Friedrich Wilhelm was much grieved by the contumacies of that paltry little Herstal; and by the Bishop of Liège's highflown procedures in countenancing them; — especially in a recruiting case that had fallen out there, and brought matters to a head.*

* "December 1738" is crisis of the recruiting case (Helden-Geschichte, ii. 63); "17th February 1739," Bishop's highflown appearance in it (ib. 67); Kaiser's in consequence, "10th April 1739."

The Kaiser too was afflictively high in countenancing the Bishop; — for which both Kaiser and Bishop got due payment in time. But his Prussian Majesty would not kindle the world for such a paltriness; and so left it hanging in a vexatious condition. Such things, it is remarked, weigh heavier on his now infirm Majesty than they were wont. He is more subject to fits of hypochondria, to talk of abdicating. “All gone wrong!” he would say, if any little flaw rose, about recruiting or the like. “One might go and live at Venice, were one rid of it!”* And his deep-stung clangorous growl against the Kaiser’s treatment of him bursts out, from time to time; though he oftenest pities the Kaiser, too; seeing him at such a pass with his Turk War and otherwise.

It was in this Pfalz business that Herr Luiscius, the Prussian Minister in Holland, got into trouble; of whom there is a light dash of outline-portraiture by Voltaire, which has made him memorable to readers. This “fat King of Prussia,” says Voltaire, was a dreadfully avaricious fellow, unbeautiful to a high degree in his proceedings with mankind:

“He had a Minister at the Hague called Luiscius; who “certainly of all Ministers of Crowned Heads was the worst “paid. This poor man, to warm himself, had made some trees “be felled in the Garden of Honslardik, which belonged at “that time to the House of Prussia; he thereupon received “despatches from the King, intimating that a year of his

* Förster (place lost).

“salary was forfeited. Luiscius, in despair, cut his throat “with probably the one razor he had (seul rasoir qu’il eût); an “old valet came to his assistance, and unhappily saved his “life. In after years, I found his Excellency at the Hague;
“and have occasionally given him an alms at the door of the “Vieille Cour (Old Court), a Palace belonging to the King of “Prussia, where this poor Ambassador had lived a dozen “years. It must be owned, Turkey is a republic in compari“son to the despotism exercised by Friedrich Wilhelm.”*

Here truly is a witty sketch; consummately dashed off, as nobody but Voltaire could; “round as Giotto’s O,” done at one stroke. Of which the prose facts are only as follows. Luiscius, Prussian Resident, not distinguished by salary or otherwise, had, at one stage of these negotiations, been told, from headquarters, He might, in casual extra-official ways, if it seemed furthersome, give their High Mightinesses the hope, or notion, that his Majesty did not intend actual war about that Cleve-Jülich Succession, — being a pacific Majesty, and unwilling to involve his neighbours and mankind. Luiscius, instead of casual hint, delicately dropped in some good way, had proceeded by direct declaration; frank assurance to the High Mightinesses, That there would be no war. Which had never been quite his Majesty’s meaning, and perhaps was now becoming rather the reverse of it. Disavowal of Luiscius had to ensue thereupon; who produced defensively his instruction from headquarters; but got only rebukes

* Œuvres de Voltaire (Vie Privée, or what they now call Mémoires), il. 15.

for such heavy-footed clumsy procedure, so unlike Diplomacy with its shoes of felt; — and, in brief, was turned out of the Diplomatic function, as unfit for it; and appointed to manage certain Orange Properties, fragments of the Orange Heritage which his Majesty still has in those Countries. This misadventure sank heavily on the spirits of Luiscius, otherwise none of the strongest-minded of men. Nor did he prosper in managing the Orange Properties: on the contrary, he again fell into mistakes; got soundly rebuked for injudicious conduct there, — “cutting trees,” planting trees, or whatever it was; — and this produced such an effect on Luiscius, that he made an attempt on his own throat, distracted mortal; and was only stopped by somebody rushing in. “It was not the first time “he had tried that feat,” says Pöllnitz, “and been “prevented; nor was it long till he made a new attempt, which was again frustrated: and always afterwards his relations kept him close in view;” Majesty writing comfortable forgiveness to the perturbed creature, and also “settling a pension on him;” adequate, we can hope, and not excessive; “which Luiscius continued to receive, at the Hague, so long as he lived.” These are the prose facts; not definitely dated to us, but perfectly clear otherwise.*

Voltaire, in his Dutch excursions, did sometimes, in after years, lodge in that old vacant Palace, called Vieille Cour, at the Hague; where he gracefully celebrates the decayed forsaken state of matters; dusky vast rooms with dim gilding; forgotten libraries "veiled under the biggest spiderwebs in Europe:" for the rest, an uncommonly quiet place, convenient for a writing man, besides costing nothing. A son of this Luiscius, a good young lad, it also appears, was occasionally Voltaire's amanuensis there; him he did recommend zealously to the new King of Prussia, who was not deaf on the occasion. This, in the fire of satirical wit, is what we can transiently call, "giving alms to a Prussian Excellency;" — not now excellent, but pensioned and cracked; and the reader perceives, Luiscius had probably more than one razor, had not one been enough, when he did the rash act! Friedrich employed Luiscius Junior, with no result that we hear of farther; and seems to have thought Luiscius Senior an absurd fellow, not worth mentioning again: "ran away "from the Cleve Country" (probably some madhouse there) "above a year ago, I hear; and what is the "matter where such a crackbrain end?"*

* Pöllnitz, li. 495, 496; — the “new attempt” seems to have been, June 1789” (Gentleman's Magazine, in mensc, p. 381).

* Voltaire, Œuvres (Letter to Friedrich, 7th October 1740), lxxii. 261; and Friedrich's answer (wrong dated), ib. 265: Preuss, xxii. 88.

CHAPTER V.

VISIT AT LOO.

THE Pfalz question being in such a predicament, and Luiscius diplomatising upon it in such heavy-footed manner, his Majesty thinks a Journey to Holland, to visit one's Kinsfolk there, and incidentally speak a word with the High Mightinesses upon Pfalz, would not be amiss. Such journey is decided on; Crown-Prince to accompany. Summer of 1738: a short visit, quite without fuss; to last only three days; — mere sequel to the Reviews held in those adjacent Cleve Countries; so that the Gazetteers may take no notice. All which was done accordingly: Crown-Prince's first sight of Holland; and one of the few reportable points of his Reinsberg life, and not quite without memorability to him and us.

On the 8th of July 1738, the Review Party got upon the road for Wesel: all through July, they did their reviewing in those Cleve Countries; and then struck across for the Palace of Loo in Geldern, where a Prince of Orange countable kinsman to his Prussian Majesty, and a Princess still more nearly connected, — English George's Daughter, own Niece to his Prussian Majesty, — are in waiting for this distinguished honour. The Prince of Orange we have already seen, for a moment once; at the Siege of Philipsburg four years ago, when the sale of Chasot's horses went off so well. "Nothing like selling horses when your company have dined well," whispered he to Chasot, at that time; since which date we have heard nothing of his Highness.

He is not a beautiful man; he has a crooked back, and features conformable; but is of prompt vivacious nature, and does not want for sense and good-humour. Paternal George, the gossips say, warned his Princess, when this marriage was talked of, "You will find him very ill-looking, though!". "And if I found him a baboon —!" answered she; being so heartily tired of St. James's. And in fact, for anything I have heard, they do well enough together. She is George II.'s eldest Princess; — next elder to our poor Amelia, who was once so interesting to us! What the Crown-Prince now thought of all that, I do not know; but the Books say, poor Amelia wore the willow, and specially wore the Prince's miniature on her breast, all her days after, which were many. Grew corpulent, somewhat a huddle in appearance and equipment, "eyelids like upper-lips," for one item: but when life itself fled, the miniature was found in its old place, resting on the old heart after some sixty years. O Time, O Sons and Daughters of Time! —

His Majesty's reception at Loo was of the kind he liked, — cordial, honourable, unceremonious; and these were three pleasant days he had. Pleasant for the Crown-Prince too; as the whole Journey had rather been; Papa, with covert satisfaction, finding him a wise creature, after all, and "more serious" than formerly. "Hm, you don't know what things are in that Fritz!" his Majesty murmured sometimes, in these later years, with a fine light in his eyes.

Loo itself is a beautiful Palace: "Loo, close by the "Village Appeldoorn, is a stately brick edifice, built "with architectural regularity; has finely decorated "rooms, beautiful gardens, and round are superb alleys "of oak and linden."* There saunters pleasantly our Crown-Prince, for these three days; — and one glad incident I do perceive to have befallen him there: the arrival of a Letter from Voltaire. Letter much expected, which had followed him from Wesel; and which he answers here, in this brick Palace, among the superb avenues and gardens.

No doubt a glad incident; irradiating, as with a sudden sunburst in gray weather, the commonplace of things. Here is news worth listening to; news as from the empyrean! Free interchange of poetries and prose, of heroic sentiments and opinions, between the Unique of Sages and the Paragon of Crown-Princes; how charming to both! Literary business, we perceive, is brisk on both hands; at Cirey the Discours sur l'Homme ("Sixth Discours" arrives in this packet at Loo, surely a deathless piece of singing); nor is Reinsberg idle: Reinsberg is copiously doing verse, such verse! — and in prose, very earnestly, an "Anti-Macchiavel;" which

* Blüsching: Erdbeschreibung, viii. 69.

 Œuvres, xxi. 203, the Letter, "Cirey, June 1738;" Ib. 222, the Answer to it, "Loo, 6th August 1738."

soon afterwards filled all the then world, though it has now fallen so silent again. And at Paris, as Voltaire announces with a flourish, "M. de Maupertuis's excellent Book, Figure de la Terre,* is out;" M. de Maupertuis, home from the Polar regions and from measuring the Earth there; the sublimest miracle in Paris society at present. Might build, new-build, an Academy of Sciences at Berlin for your Royal Highness, one day? suggests Voltaire, on this occasion: and Friedrich, as we shall see, takes the hint. One passage of the Crown-Prince's Answer is in these terms; — fixing this Loo Visit to its date for us, at any rate:

"Loo in Holland, 6th August 1738. * * I write from a place "where there lived once a great man" (William III. of England, our Dutch William); "which is now the Prince of Orange's House. The demon of Ambition sheds its unhappy "poisons over his days. He might be the most fortunate of "men; and he is devoured by chagrins in his beautiful Palace "here, in the middle of his gardens and of a brilliant Court. "It is pity in truth; for he is a Prince with no end of wit (infiniment d'esprit), and has respectable qualities." Not Stadtholder, unluckily; that is where the shoe pinches; the Dutch are on the Republican tack, and will not have a Stadtholder at present. No help for it in one's beautiful gardens and avenues of oak and linden.

"I have talked a great deal about Newton with the Princess," — about Newton; never hinted at Amelia; not permissible! — “from Newton we passed to Leibnitz; and from “Leibnitz to the late Queen of England,” Caroline lately gone, “who, the Prince told me, was of Clarke’s sentiment” on that important theological controversy now dead to mankind. — — And of Jenkins and his Ear did the Princess say nothing? That is now becoming a high phenomenon in England! But readers must wait a little.

* Paris, 1738: Maupertuis's "measurement of a degree," in the utmost North, 1736-7 (to prove the Earth flattened there). Vivid Narrative; somewhat gesticulative, but duly brief. The only Book of that great Maupertuis which is now readable to human nature.

Pity that we cannot give these two Letters in full; that no reader, almost, could be made to understand them, or to care for them when understood. Such the cruelty of Time upon this Voltaire-Friedrich Correspondence, and some others; which were once so rosy, sunny, and are now fallen drearily extinct, — studiable by Editors only! In itself the Friedrich-Voltaire Correspondence, we can see, was charming; very blossomy at present: businesses increasing; mutual admiration now risen to a great height, — admiration sincere on both sides, most so on the Prince’s, and extravagantly expressed on both sides, most so on Voltaire’s.

Crown-Prince becomes a Freemason; and is harangued by Monsieur de Bielfeld.

His Majesty, we said, had three pleasant days at Loo; discoursing, as with friends, on public matters, or even on more private matters, in a frank unconstrained way. He is not to be called “Majesty” on this occasion; but the fact, at Loo, and by the leading Mightinesses of the Republic, who come copiously to compliment him there, is well remembered. Talk there was, with such leading Mightinesses, about the Jülich-and-Berg question, aim of this Journey; earnest enough private talk with some of them: but it availed nothing; and would not be worth reporting now to any creature, if we even knew. In fact, the Journey itself remains mentionable chiefly by one very trifling circumstance; and then by another, not important either, which followed out of that. The trifling circumstance is, — That Friedrich, in the course of this Journey, became a Freemason: and the unimportant sequel was, That he made acquaintance with one Bielfeld, on the occasion; who afterwards wrote a Book about him, which was once much read, though never much worth reading, and is still citable, with precaution, now and then.* Trifling circumstance of Freemasonry, as we read in Bielfeld and in many Books after him, befel in manner following.

Among the dinner-guests at Loo, one of those three days, was a Prince of Lippe-Bückeburg, — Prince of small territory, but of great speculation; whose territory lies on the Weser, leading to Dutch connexions; and whose speculations stretch over all the Universe, in a high fantastic style: — he was a dinner-guest; and one of the topics that came up was Freemasonry; a phantasmal kind of object, which had kindled itself, or rekindled, in those years, in England first of all; and was now hovering about, a good deal, in Germany and other countries; pretending to be a new light of Heaven, and not a bog-meteor of phosphorated hydrogen, conspicuous in the murk of things. Bog-meteor, foolish putrescent will-o'-wisp, his Majesty promptly defined it to be: Tomfoolery and Kinderspiel, what else? Whereupon ingenious Bückeburg, who was himself a Mason, man of forty by this time, and had high things in him of the Quixotic type, ventured on defence; and was so respectful, eloquent, dextrous, ingenious, he quite captivated, if not his Majesty, at least the Crown-Prince, who was more enthusiastic for high things. Crown-Prince, after table, took his Durchlaucht of Bückeburg aside; talked farther on the subject, expressed his admiration, his conviction, — his wish to be admitted into such a Hero Fraternity. Nothing could be welcomer to Durchlaucht. And so, in all privacy, it was made up between them, That Durchlaucht, summoning as many mystic Brothers out of Hamburg as were needful, should be in waiting with them, on the Crown-Prince's road homeward, — say at Brunswick, night before the Fair, where we are to be, — and there make the Crown-Prince a Mason.*

* Monsieur le Baron de Bielfeld: Lettres Familières et Autres, 1763; — second edition, 2 vols. à Leide, 1767, is the one we use here.

This is Bielfeld's account, repeated ever since; substantially correct, except that the scene was not Loo at all: dinner and dialogue, it now appears, took place in Durchlaucht's own neighbourhood, during the Cleve-Review time; "probably at Minden, 17th July;" and all was settled into fixed program before Loo came in sight. Bielfeld's report of the subsequent procedure

* Bielfeld, i. 14-16; Preuss, i. 111; Preuss, Buch für Jedermann, i. 41.

 Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 201: Friedrich's Letter to this Durchlaucht, at Brunswick, as he saw it and was himself part of it, is liable to no mistakes, at least of the involuntary kind; and may, for anything we know, be correct in every particular.

He says (veiling it under discreet asterisks, which are now decipherable enough), The Durchlaucht of Lippe-Bückeburg had summoned six Brethren of the Hamburg Lodge; of whom we mention only a Graf von Kielmannsegge, a Baron von Oberg, both from Hanover, and Bielfeld himself, a Merchant's Son, of Hamburg; these, with "Kielmannsegge's Valet to act as Tiler," Valet being also a Mason, and the rule equality of mankind, — were to have the honour of initiating the Crown-Prince. They arrived at the Western Gate of Brunswick on the 11th of August, as prearranged; Prussian Majesty not yet come, but coming punctually on the morrow. It is Fair-time; all manner of traders, pedlars, showmen rendezvousing; many neighbouring Nobility too, as was still the habit. "Such a bulk of light luggage?" said the Custom-house people at the Gate; — but were pacified by slipping them a ducat. Upon which we drove to "Korn's Hôtel" (if anybody now knew it); and there patiently waited. No great things of a Hôtel, says Bielfeld; but can be put up with; — worst feature is,

"Comte de Schaumbourg-Lippe" he calls him; date, "Moyland, 26th July 1738:" Moyland, a certain Schloss, or habitable Mansion, of his Majesty's, few miles to north of Mörs in the Cleve Country; where his Majesty used often to pause; — and where (what will be much more remarkable to readers) the Crown-Prince and Voltaire had their first meeting, two years hence.

we discover a Hanover acquaintance lodging close by, nothing but a wooden partition between us: How if he should overhear! —

Prussian Majesty and suite, under universal cannon salvos, arrived, Sunday the 12th; to stay till Wednesday (three days) with his august Son-in-law and Daughter here. Durchlaucht Lippe presents himself at Court, the rest of us not; privately settles with the Prince: "Tuesday night, eve of his Majesty's departure; that shall be the night: at Korn's Hôtel, late enough!" And there, accordingly, on the appointed night, 14th-15th August 1738, the light-luggage trunks have yielded their stage-properties; Jachin and Boaz are set up, and all things are ready; Tiler (Kielmanns-egge's Valet) watching with drawn sword against the profane. As to our Hanover neighbour, on the other side the partition, says Bielfeld, we waited on him, this day after dinner, successively paying our respects; successively pledged him in so many bumpers, he is lying dead drunk hours ago, could not overhear a cannon-battery, he. And soon after midnight, the Crown-Prince glides in, a Captain Wartensleben accompanying, who is also a candidate; and the mysterious rites are accomplished on both of them, on the Crown-Prince first, without accident, and in the usual way.

Bielfeld could not enough admire the demeanour of this Prince, his clearness, sense, quiet brilliancy; and how he was so "intrepid," and "possessed himself so "gracefully in the most critical instants." Extremely genial air, and so young, looks younger even than his years: handsome to a degree, though of short stature. Physiognomy, features, quite charming; fine auburn hair (beau brun), a negligent plenty of it; "his large blue eyes have something at once severe, sweet and gracious." Eligible Mason indeed. Had better make despatch at present, lest Papa be getting on the road before him! — Bielfeld delivered a small address, composed beforehand; with which the Prince seemed to be content. And so, with masonic grip, they made their adieus for the present; and the Crown-Prince and Wartensleben were back at their posts, ready for the road along with his Majesty.

His Majesty came on Sunday; goes on Wednesday, home now at a stretch; and, we hope, has had a good time of it here, these three days. Daughter Charlotte and her Serene Husband, well with their subjects, well with one another, are doing well; have already two little Children; a Boy the elder, of whom we have heard: Boy's name is Karl, age now three; sprightly, reckoned very clever, by the fond parents; — who has many things to do in the world, by and by; to attack the French Revolution, and be blown to pieces by it on the Field of Jena, for final thing! That is the fate of little Karl, who frolics about here, so sunshiny and ingenuous at present.

Karl's Grandmother, the Serene Dowager Duchess, Friedrich's own Mother-in-law, his Majesty and Friedrich would also of course see here. Fine Younger

Sons of hers are coming forward; the reigning Duke beautifully careful about the furtherance of these Cadets of the House. Here is Prince Ferdinand, for instance; just getting ready for the Grand Tour; goes in a month hence:* a fine eupeptic loyal young fellow; who, in a twenty years more, will be Chatham's Generalissimo, and fight the French to some purpose. A Brother of his, the next elder, is now fighting the Turks for his Kaiser; does not like it at all, under such Seckendorfs and War-Ministries as there are. Then, elder still, eldest of all the Cadets, there is Anton Ulrich, over at Petersburg for some years past, with outlooks high enough: To wed the Mecklenburg Princess there (Daughter of the unutterable Duke), and be as good as Czar of all the Russias one day. Little to his profit, poor soul! — These, historically ascertainable, are the aspects of the Brunswick Court during those three days of Royal Visit, in Fair-time; and may serve to date the Masonic Transaction for us, which the Crown-Prince has just accomplished over at Korn's.

As for the Transaction itself, there is intrinsically no harm in this initiation, we will hope: but it behoves to be kept well hidden from Papa. Papa's good opinion of the Prince has sensibly risen, in the course of this Journey, "So rational, serious, not dangling about among the women as formerly;" — and what a shock would this of Korn's Hôtel be, should Papa hear of it!

* Mauvillon (Fils, son of him whom we cite otherwise): Geschichte Ferdinands Herzog von Braunschweig-Lüneburg (Leipzig, 1794), i. 17-25.

Poor Papa, from officious talebearers he hears many things; is in distress about Voltaire, about Heterodoxies; — and summoned the Crown-Prince, by express, from Reinsberg, on one occasion lately, over to Potsdam, “to take the Communion” there, by way of casehardening against Voltaire and Heterodoxies! Think of it, human readers! — We will add the following stray particulars, more or less illustrative of the Masonic Transaction; and so end that trifling affair.

The Captain Wartensleben, fellow recipient of the mysteries at Brunswick, is youngest son, by a second marriage, of old Feldmarschall Wartensleben, now deceased; and is consequently Uncle, Half-Uncle, of poor Lieutenant Katte, though some years younger than Katte would now have been. Tender memories hang by Wartensleben, in a silent way! He is Captain in the Potsdam Giants; somewhat an intimate, and not undeservedly so, of the Crown-Prince; — succeeds Wolden as Hofmarschall at Reinsberg, not many months after this; Wolden having died of an apoplectic stroke. Of Bielfeld comes a Book, slightly citable; from no other of the Brethren, or their Feat at Korn’s, comes (we may say) anything whatever. The Crown-Prince prosecuted his Masonry, at Reinsberg or elsewhere, occasionally, for a year or two; but was never ardent in it; and very soon after his Accession, left off altogether: “Child’s-play and ignis fatuus mainly!” A Royal Lodge was established at Berlin, of which the new King consented to be patron; but he never once entered the place; and only his Portrait (a wel-comely good one, still to be found there) presided over the mysteries in that Establishment. Harmless "fire," but too "fatuous;" mere flame-circles cut in the air, for infants, we know how! —

With Lippe-Bückeburg there ensued some Correspondence, high enough on his Serenity's side; but it soon languished on the Prince's side; and in private Poetry, within a two years of this Brunswick scene, we find Lippe used proverbially for a type-specimen of Fools.* A windy fantastic individual; — overwhelmed in finance-difficulties too! Lippe continued writing; but "only Secretaries now answered him" from Berlin. A son of his, son and successor, something of a Quixote too, but notable in Artillery-practice and otherwise, will turn up at a future stage.

Nor is Bielfeld with his Book a thing of much moment to Friedrich or to us. Bielfeld too has a light airy vein of talk; loves Voltaire and the Philosophies in a light way; — knows the arts of Society, especially the art of flattering; and would fain make himself agreeable to the Crown-Prince, being anxious to rise in the world. His Father is a Hamburg Merchant, Hamburg "Sealing-wax Manufacturer," not ill off for money: Son has been at schools, high schools, under tutors, posture-masters; swashes about on those terms, with French esprit in his mouth, and lace-ruffles at his wrists: still under thirty; showy enough, sharp enough; consider-

* "Taciturne, Caton, avec mes bons parents, Aussi fou que la Lippe avec les jeunes gens."

Œuvres, xi. 80 (Discours sur la Fausseté, written 1740).

ably a coxcomb, as is still evident. He did transiently get about Friedrich, as we shall see; and hoped to have sold his heart to good purpose there; — was, by and by, employed in slight functions; not found fit for grave ones. In the course of some years, he got a title of Baron; and sold his heart more advantageously, to some rich Widow or Fräulein; with whom he retired to Saxony, and there lived on an Estate he had purchased, a stranger to Prussia thenceforth.

His Book (Lettres Familières et Autres, all turning on Friedrich), which came out in 1763, at the height of Friedrich's fame, and was much read, is still freely cited by Historians as an Authority. But the reading of a few pages sufficiently intimates that these "Letters" never can have gone through a terrestrial Post-Office; that they are an afterthought, composed from vague memory and imagination, in that fine Saxon retreat; — a sorrowful ghost-like "Travels of Anacharsis," instead of living words by an eye-witness! Not to be cited "freely" at all, but sparingly and under conditions. They abound in small errors, in misdates, mistakes; small fictions even, and impossible pretensions: — foolish mortal, to write down his bit of knowledge in that form! For the man, in spite of his lace ruffles and gesticulations, has brisk eyesight of a superficial kind: he could have done us this little service (apparently his one mission in the world, for which Nature gave him bed and board here); and he, the lace ruffles having gone into his soul, has been tempted into misdoing it! — Bielfeld and Bielfeld's Book, such as they are, appear to be the one conquest Friedrich got of Freemasonry; no other result now traceable to us of that adventure in Korn's Hôtel, crowning event of the Journey to Loo.

Seckendorf gets lodged in Grätz.

Feldmarschall Seckendorf, after unheard-of wrestlings with the Turk War, and the Vienna War-Office (Hofkriegsrath), is sitting, for the last three weeks, — where thinks the reader? — in the Fortress of Grätz among the Hills of Styria; a State-Prisoner, not likely to get out soon! Seckendorf led forth, in 1737, “such an Army, for number, spirit and equipment,” say the Vienna people, “as never marched against the Turk before;” and it must be owned, his ill success has been unparalleled. The blame was not altogether his; not chiefly his, except for his rash undertaking of the thing, on such terms as there were. But the truth is, that first scene we saw of him, — an Army all gone out trumpeting and drumming into the woods to find its Commander-in-Chief, — was an emblem of the Campaign in general. Excellent Army; but commanded by nobody in particular; commanded by a Hofkriegsrath at Vienna, by a Franz Duke of Tuscany, by Feldmarschall Seckendorf, and by subordinates who were disobedient to him: which accordingly, almost without help of the Turk and his disorderly ferocity, rubbed itself to pieces before long. Roamed about, now hither now thither, with plans laid and then with plans suddenly altered, Captain being Chaos mainly; in swampy countries, by overflowing rivers, in hunger, hot weather, forced marches; till it was marched gradually off its feet; and the clouds of chaotic Turks, who did finally show face, had a cheap pennyworth of it. Never was such a campaign seen as this of Seckendorf in 1737, said mankind. Except indeed that the present one, Campaign of 1738, in those parts, under a different hand, is still worse; and the Campaign of 1739, under still a different, will be worst of all! — Kaiser Karl and his Austrians do not prosper in this Turk War, as the Russians do, — who indeed have got a General equal to his task: Münnich, a famed master in the art of handling Turks and War-Ministries: real father of Russian Soldiering, say the Russians still.*

Campaign 1737, with clouds of chaotic Turks now sabring on the skirts of it, had not yet ended, when Seckendorf was called out of it; on polite pretexts, home to Vienna; and the command given to another. At the gates of Vienna, in the last days of October 1737, an Official Person, waiting for the Feldmarschall, was sorry to inform him, That he, Feldmarschall Seckendorf, was under arrest; arrest in his own house, in the Kohlmarkt (Cabbage-market so-called), a captain and twelve musketeers to watch over him with fixed bayonets there; strictly private, till the Hofkriegsrath had satisfied themselves in a point or two. "Hmph!"

* See Mannstein for Münnich's plans with the Turk (methods and devices of steady Discipline in small numbers versus impetuous Ferocity in great); and Berenhorst (Betrachtungen über die Kriegskunst, Leipzig, 1796), a first-rate Authority, for examples and eulogies of them.

snuffled he; with brow blushing slate-colour, I should think, and gray eyes much alight. And ever since, for ten months or so, Seckendorf, sealed up in the Cabbage-market, has been fencing for life with the Hofkriegsrath; who want satisfaction upon "eighty-six" different "points;" and make no end of chicaning to one's clear answers. And the Jesuits preach, too: "A Heretic, born enemy of Christ and his Kaiser; what is the use of questioning!" And the Heathen rage, and all men gnash their teeth, in this uncomfortable manner.

Answering done, there comes no verdict, much less any acquittal; the captain and twelve musketeers, three of them with fixed bayonets in one's very bedroom, continue. One evening, 21st July 1738, glorious news from the seat of War, — not till evening, as the Imperial Majesty was out hunting, — enters Vienna; blowing trumpets; shaking flags: "Grand Victory over the Turks!" so we call some poor skirmish there has been; and Vienna bursting all into three-times-three, the populace get very high. Populace rush to the Kohlmarkt; break the Seckendorf windows; intent to massacre the Seckendorf, had not fresh military come, who were obliged to fire and kill one or two. "The house captain and his twelve musketeers, of themselves, did wonders; Seckendorf and all his domestics were in arms:" "Jarni-bleu" for the last time! — This is while the Crown-Prince is at Wesel; sound asleep, most likely; Loo, and the Masonic adventure, perhaps twinkling prophetically in his dreams.

At two next morning, an Official Gentleman informs Seckendorf, That he, for his part, must awaken, and go to Grätz. And in one hour more (3 A.M.), the Official Gentleman rolls off with him; drives all day; and delivers his Prisoner at Grätz: -- "Not so much as a room ready there; Prisoner had to wait an hour in "the carriage," till some summary preparation were made. Wall-neighbours of the poor Feldmarschall, in his Fortress here, were "a Gold-Cook (swindling Alchemist), who had gone crazy; and an Irish Lieutenant, "confined thirty-two years for some love adventure, "likewise pretty crazy; their noises in the night-time "much disturbed the Feldmarschall."* One human thing there still is in his lot, the Feldmarschall's old Gräfinn. True old Dame, she, both in the Kohlmarkt and at Grätz, stands by him, "imprisoned along with him" if it must be so; ministering, comforting, as only a true Wife can; — and hope has not quite taken wing.

Rough old Feldmarschall; now turned of sixty: never made such a Campaign before, as this of '37 followed by '38! There sits he; and will not trouble us any more during the present Kaiser's lifetime. Friedrich Wilhelm is amazed at these sudden cantings of Fortune's wheel, and grieves honestly as for an old friend: even the Crown-Prince finds Seckendorf punished unjustly; and is almost sorry for him, after all that has come and gone.

* Seckendorfs Leben, II. 170-277. See Schmettau, pp. 27-59.
15*

The Ear of Jenkins reëmerges.

We must add the following, distilled from the English Newspapers, though it is now almost four months after date:

“London, 1st April 1738. In the English House of Commons, much more in the English Public, there has been furious debating for a fortnight past: Committee of the whole House, examining witnesses, hearing counsel; subject, the Termagant of Spain, and her West-Indian procedures; — she, by her procedures somewhere, is always cutting out work for mankind! How English and other strangers, fallen in with in those seas, are treated by the Spaniards, readers have heard, nay have chanced to see; and it is a fact painfully known to all nations. Fact which England, for one nation, can no longer put up with. Walpole and the Official Persons would fain smooth the matter; but the West-India Interest, the City, all Mercantile and Navigation Interests are in dead earnest: Committee of the whole House, ‘presided by Alderman Perry,’ has not ears enough to hear the immensities of evidence offered; slow Public is gradually kindling to some sense of it. This had gone on for two weeks, when — what shall we say? — the Ear of Jenkins reëmerged for the second time; and produced important effects!

“Where Jenkins had been all this while, — stedfastly navigating to and fro, stedfastly eating tough junk with a wetting of rum; not thinking too much of past labours, yet privately ‘always keeping his lost Ear in cotton’ (with a kind of ursine piety, or other dumb feeling), — no mortal now knows. But to all mortals it is evident he was home in London at this time; no doubt a noted member of Wapping “society, the much-enduring Jenkins. And witnesses, “probably not one but many, had mentioned him to this Com“mittee, as a case eminently in point. Committee, as can still “be read in its Rhadamanthine Journals, orders: ‘Die Jovis, “‘16^o Martii 1737—8, That Captain Robert Jenkins do “‘attend this House immediately;’ and then more specially,

“‘17^o Martii,’ — captious objections having risen in Official “quarters, as we guess, — ‘That Captain Robert Jenkins do “‘attend upon Tuesday morning next.’* Tuesday next is “21st March, — 1st of April 1738 by our modern Calendar; —
“and on that day, not a doubt, Jenkins does attend; narrates
“that tremendous passage we already heard of, seven years “ago, in the entrance of the Gulf of Florida; and produces his “Ear wrapt in cotton; — setting all on flame (except the “Official persons) at sight of it.”

Official persons, as their wont is in the pressure of debate, endeavoured to deny, to insinuate in their vile Newspapers, That Jenkins lost his Ear nearer home and not for nothing; as one still reads in the History Books. Sheer calumnies, we now find. Jenkins’s account was doubtless abundantly emphatic; but there is no ground to question the substantial truth of him and it. And so, after seven years of unnoticeable burning upon the thick skin of the English Public, the case of Jenkins accidentally burns through, and sets England bellowing; such a smart is there of it, — not to be soothed by Official wet-cloths; but getting worse and worse, for the nineteen months ensuing. And in short — But we will not anticipate!

* Commons Journals, xxiii. (in diebus).

 Coxe, Tindal (xx. 372), &c.

CHAPTER VI.

LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG; JOURNEY TO PREUSSEN.

THE Idyllium of Reinsberg, — of which, except in the way of sketchy suggestion, there can no history be given, — lasted less than four years; and is now coming to an end, unexpectedly soon. A pleasant Arcadian Summer in one's life; — though it has not wanted its occasional discords, flaws of ill weather in the general sunshine. Papa, always in uncertain health of late, is getting heavier of foot and of heart under his heavy burdens; and sometimes falls abstruse enough, liable to bewilderments from bad people and events: not much worth noticing here.* But the Crown-Prince has learned to deal with all this; all this is of transient nature; and a bright long future seems to lie ahead at Reinsberg; — brightened especially by the Literary Element; which, in this year 1739, is brisker than it had ever been. Distinguished Visitors, of a literary turn, look in at Reinsberg; the Voltaire Correspondence is very lively; on Friedrich's part there is copious production, various enterprise, in the form of prose and verse; thoughts even of going to press with some of it: in short, the Literary Interest rises very prominent at Reinsberg in 1739. Biography is apt to forget the

* See Pöllnitz, ii. 509-515; Friedrich's Letter to Wilhelmina ("Berlin, 20th January 1739:" in Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, pp. 60-61); &c. &c.

Literature there (having her reasons); but must at last take some notice of it, among the phenomena of the year.

To the young Prince himself, "courting tranquillity," as his door-lintel intimated,* and forbidden to be active except within limits, this of Literature was all along the great light of existence at Reinsberg; the supplement to all other employments or wants of employment there. To Friedrich himself, in those old days, a great and supreme interest; while again, to the modern Biographer of him, it has become dark and vacant; a thing to be shunned, not sought. So that the fact as it stood with Friedrich differs far from any description that can be given of the fact. Alas, we have said already, and the constant truth is, Friedrich's literatures, his distinguished literary visitors and enterprises, which were once brand-new and brilliant, have grown old as a garment, and are a sorrow rather than otherwise to existing mankind! Conscientious readers, who would represent to themselves the vanished scene at Reinsberg, in this point more especially, must make an effort.

As biographical documents, these Poetries and Proses of the young man give a very pretty testimony of him; but are not of value otherwise. In fact, they promise, if we look well into them, That here is probably a practical faculty and intellect of the highest kind; which again, on the speculative, especially on the poetical side, will never be considerable, nor has even tried to be so. This young soul does not deal in meditation at all, and his tendencies are the reverse of sentimental. Here is no introspection, morbid or other, no pathos or complaint, no melodious informing of the public what dreadful emotions you labour under: here, in rapid prompt form, indicating that it is truth and not fable, are generous aspirations for the world and yourself, generous pride, disdain of the ignoble, of the dark, mendacious; — here, in short, is a swift-handed, valiant, steel-bright kind of soul; very likely for a King's, if other things answer, and not likely for a Poet's. No doubt he could have made something of Literature too; could have written Books, and left some stamp of a veracious, more or less victorious intellect, in that strange province too. But then he must have applied himself to it, as he did to reigning: done in the cursory style, we see what it has come to.

* "Frederico tranquillitatem colenti" (Infra, p. 256).

It is certain, Friedrich's reputation suffers, at this day, from his writing. From his not having written nothing, he stands lower with the world. Which seems hard measure; — though perhaps it is the law of the case, after all. "Nobody in these days," says my poor Friend, "has the least notion of the sinful waste there "is in talk, whether by pen or tongue. Better probably "that King Friedrich had written no Verses; nay I "know not that David's Psalms did David's Kingship "any good!" Which may be truer than it seems. Fine aspirations, generous convictions, purposes, — they are thought very fine: but it is good, on various accounts, to keep them rather silent; strictly unvocal, except on call of real business; so dangerous are they for becoming conscious of themselves! Most things do not ripen at all except underground. And it is a sad but sure truth, that every time you speak of a fine purpose, especially if with eloquence and to the admiration of bystanders, there is the less chance of your ever making a fact of it in your poor life. — If Reinsberg, and its vacancy of great employment, was the cause of Friedrich's verse-writing, we will not praise Reinsberg on that head! But the truth is, Friedrich's verses came from him with uncommon fluency; and were not a deep matter, but a shallow one, in any sense. Not much more to him than speaking with a will; than fantasying on the flute in an animated strain. Ever and anon through his life, on small hint from without or on great, there was found a certain leakage of verses, which he was prompt to utter; — and the case at Reinsberg, or afterwards, is not so serious as we might imagine.

Pine's Horace; and the Anti-Macchiavel.

In late months Friedrich had conceived one notable project; which demands a word in this place. Did modern readers ever hear of "John Pine, the celebrated English Engraver?" John Pine, a man of good scholarship, good skill with his burin, did "Tapestries of the House of Lords," and other things of a celebrated nature, famous at home and abroad: but his peculiar feat, which had commended him at Reinsberg, was an

Edition of Horace: exquisite old Flaccus brought to perfection, as it were; all done with vignettes, classical borderings, symbolic marginal ornaments, in fine taste and accuracy, the Text itself engraved; all by the exquisite burin of Pine.* This Edition had come out last year, famous over the world; and was by and by, as rumour bore, to be followed by a Virgil done in the like exquisite manner.

The Pine Horace, part of the Pine Virgil too, still exist in the libraries of the curious; and are doubtless known to the proper parties, though much forgotten by others of us. To Friedrich, scanning the Pine phenomenon with interest then brand-new, it seemed an admirable tribute to classical genius; and the idea occurred to him, "Is not there, by Heaven's blessing, a living genius, classical like those antique Romans, and worthy of a like tribute?" Friedrich's idea was, That Voltaire being clearly the supreme of Poets, the Henriade, his supreme of Poems, ought to be engraved like Flaccus; text and all, with vignettes, tail-pieces, classical borderings beautifully symbolic and exact; by the exquisite burin of Pine. Which idea the young hero-worshiper, in spite of his finance-difficulties, had resolved to realise; and was even now busy with it, since his return from Loo. "Such beautiful enthusiasm," say some readers; "and in behalf of that particular demigod!" Alas, yes; to Friedrich he was the best demigod then going; and Friedrich never had any doubt about him.

For the rest, this heroic idea could not realise itself; and we are happy to have nothing more to do with Pine or the Henriade. Correspondences were entered into with Pine, and some pains taken: Pine's high prices were as nothing; but Pine was busy with his Virgil; probably, in fact, had little stomach for the Henriade; "could not for seven years to come enter upon it:" so that the matter had to die away; and nothing came of it but a small Dissertation, or Introductory Essay, which the Prince had got ready, — which is still to be found printed in Voltaire's Works* and in Friedrich's, if any body now cared much to read it. Preuss says it was finished, "the 10th August 1739;" and that minute fact in Chronology, with the above tale of Hero-worship hanging to it, will suffice my readers and me.

* "London, 1787" (Biographie Universelle, xxxiv. 465).

But there is another literary project on hand, which did take effect; — much worthy of mention, this year; the whole world having risen into such a Chorus of Te-Deum at sight of it next year. In this year falls, what at any rate was a great event to Friedrich, as literary man, the printing of his first Book, — assiduous writing of it with an eye to print. The Book is that "celebrated Anti-Macchiavel," ever-praiseworthy Refutation of Macchiavel's Prince; concerning which there are such immensities of Voltaire-Correspondence, now become, like the Book itself, inane to all readers. This was the chosen soul's-employment of Friedrich, the flower of life to him, at Reinsberg, through the year

* Œuvres, xiii. 393-402.

1739. It did not actually get to press till Spring 1740; nor actually come out till Autumn, — by which time a great change had occurred in Friedrich's title and circumstances: — but we may as well say here what little is to be said of it for modern readers.

“The Crown-Prince, reading this bad Book of Macchiavel's, years ago, had been struck, as all honest souls, especially governors or apprentices to governing, must be, if they thought of reading such a thing, with its badness, its falsity, detestability; and came by degrees, obliquely fishing out Voltaire's opinion as he went along, on the notion of refuting Macchiavel; and did refute him, the best he could. Set down, namely, his own earnest contradiction to such ungrounded noxious doctrines; elaborating the same more and more into clear logical utterance, till they swelled into a little Volume; which, so excellent was it, so important to mankind, Voltaire and friends were clear for publishing. Published accordingly it was; goes through the press next Summer (1740), under Voltaire's anxious superintendence: for the Prince has at length consented; and Voltaire hands the Manuscript, with mystery yet with hints, to a Dutch Bookseller, one Van Duren at the Hague, who is eager enough to print such an article.* Voltaire himself, — such

* Here, gathered from Friedrich's Letters to Voltaire, is the Chronology of the little Enterprise:

1738, March 21, June 17, “Macchiavel a baneful man,” thinks Friedrich, “Ought to be refuted by somebody?” thinks he (date not known).

1739, March 22, Friedrich thinks of doing it himself. Has done it, December 4; — “a Book which ought to be printed,” say Voltaire and the literary visitors.

1740, April 26, Book given up to Voltaire for printing. Printing finished; Book appears, “end of September,” when a great change had occurred in Friedrich's title and position.

“his magnanimous friendship, especially if one have Dutch “Lawsuits, or business of one’s own, in those parts, — takes “charge of correcting; lodges himself in the ‘Old Court’ “(Prussian Mansion, called Vieille Cour, at the Hague, where “‘Luiscius,’ figuratively speaking, may ‘get an alms’ from “us); and therefrom corrects, alters; corresponds with the “Prince and Van Duren, at a great rate. Keeps correcting, “altering, till Van Duren thinks he is spoiling it for sale; —
“and privately determines to preserve the original Manuscript,
“and have an edition of that, with only such corrections as “seem good to Van Duren. A treasonous step on this mule of “a Bookseller’s part, thinks Voltaire; but mulishly persisted
“in by the man. Endless correspondence, to right and left, “ensues; intolerably wearisome to every reader. And, in “fine, there came out, in Autumn next,” — the Crown-Prince no longer a Crown-Prince by that time, but shining conspicuous under Higher Title, — “not one Anti-Macchiavel only,
“but a couple or a trio of Anti-Macchiavels; as printed ‘at the “‘Hague;’ as reprinted ‘at London’ or elsewhere; the con“fused Bibliography of which has now fallen very insignificant.
“First there was the Voltaire Text, Authorised Edition, ‘end “‘of September 1740;’ then came, in few weeks, the Van “Duren one; then, probably, a third, combining the two, the “variations given as footnotes: — in short, I know not how “many editions, translations, printings and reprintings; all “the world being much taken up with such a message from the “upper regions, and eager to read it in any form.

“As to Friedrich himself, who of course says nothing of “the Anti-Macchiavel in public, he privately, to Voltaire, “disowns all these editions; and intends to give a new one of his “own, which shall be the right article; but never did it, having “far other work cut out for him in the months that came. But “how zealous the world’s humour was in that matter, no

“modern reader can conceive to himself. In the frightful “Compilation called Helden-Geschichte, which we sometimes “cite, there are, excerpted from the then ‘Bibliothèques’ “(Nouvelle Bibliothèque and another; shining Periodicals of “the time, now gone quite dead), two ‘reviews’ of the Anti- “Macchiavel, which fill modern readers with amazement: such “a Domine dimittas chanted over such an article! — These “details, in any other than the Biographical point of view, are “now infinitely unimportant.”

Truly, yes! The Crown-Prince’s Anti-Macchiavel, final correct edition (in two forms, Voltaire’s as corrected, and the Prince’s own as written), stands now in clear type;* and, after all that jumble of printing and counter-printing, we can any of us read it in a few hours; but, alas, almost none of us with the least interest, or, as it were, with any profit whatever. So different is present tense from past, in all things, especially in things like these! It is six score years since the Anti-Macchiavel appeared. The spectacle of one who was himself a King (for the mysterious fact was well known to Van Duren and everybody) stepping forth to say, with conviction, That Kingship was not a thing of attorney mendacity, to be done under the patronage of Beelzebub, but of human veracity, to be set about under quite Other patronage; and that, in fact, a King was the “born servant of his People (domestique Friedrich once calls it), rather than otherwise: this, naturally enough, rose upon the then populations, unused to such language, like the dawn of new day; and was welcomed with such applauses as are now incredible, after all that has come and gone! Alas, in these six score years, it has been found so easy to profess and speak, even with sincerity. The actual Hero-Kings were long used to be silent; and the Sham-Hero kind grow only the more desperate for us, the more they speak and profess! — This Anti-Macchiavel of Friedrich's is a clear distinct Treatise; confutes, or at least heartily contradicts, paragraph by paragraph, the incredible sophistries of Macchiavel. Nay it leaves us, if we sufficiently force our attention, with the comfortable sense that his Royal Highness is speaking with conviction, and honestly from the heart, in the affair: but that is all the conquest we get of it, in these days. Treatise fallen more extinct to existing mankind it would not be easy to name.

* Preuss: Œuvres de Frédéric, viii. 61-163.

Perhaps indeed mankind is getting weary of the question altogether. Macchiavel himself one now reads only by compulsion. "What is the use of arguing with anybody that can believe in Macchiavel?" asks mankind, or might well ask; and, except for Editorial purposes, eschews any Anti-Macchiavel; impatient to be rid of bane and antidote both. Truly the world has had a pother with this little Nicolo Macchiavelli and his perverse little Book: — pity almost that a Friedrich Wilhelm, taking his rounds at that point of time, had not had the "refuting" of him; Friedrich Wilhelm's method would have been briefer than Friedrich's! But let us hope the thing is now, practically, about completed. And as to the other question, "Was the Signor Nicolo serious in this perverse little Book; or did he only do it ironically, with a serious inverse purpose?" we will leave that to be decided, any time convenient, by people who are much at leisure in the world! —

The printing of the Anti-Macchiavel was not intrinsically momentous in Friedrich's history; yet it might as well have been dispensed with. He had here drawn a fine program, and needlessly placarded it for the street populations: and afterwards there rose, as could not fail on their part, comparison between program and performance; scornful cry, chiefly from men of weak judgment, "Is this King an Anti-Macchiavel, then? Pfui!" Of which, — though Voltaire's voice, too, was heard in it, in angry moments, — we shall say nothing: the reader, looking for himself, will judge by and by. And herewith enough of the Anti-Macchiavel. Composition of Anti-Macchiavel and speculation of the Pine Henriade lasted, both of them, all through this Year 1739, and farther: from these two items, not to mention any other, readers can figure sufficiently how literary a year it was.

*Friedrich in Preussen again; at the Stud of Trakehnen.
A tragically great Event coming on.*

In July this year the Crown-Prince went with Papa on the Prussian Review-journey.* Such attendance on Review-journeys, a mark of his being well with Papa, is now becoming usual; they are agreeable excursions,

* "Set out, 7th July" (Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, 67 n).

and cannot but be instructive as well. On this occasion, things went beautifully with him. Out in those grassy Countries, in the bright Summer, once more he had an unusually fine time; — and two very special pleasures befel him. First was, a sight of the Emigrants, our Salzburger and other, in their flourishing condition, over in Lithuania yonder. Delightful to see how the waste is blossoming up again; busy men, with their industries, their steady pious husbandries, making all things green and fruitful: horse-droves, cattle-herds, waving cornfields; — a very "Schmalzgrube (Butter-pit)" of those Northern parts, as it is since called.* The Crown-Prince's own words on this matter we will give; they are in a Letter of his to Voltaire, perhaps already known to some readers; — and we can observe he writes rather copiously from those localities at present, and in a cheerful humour with everybody.

"Insterburg, 27th July 1739 (Crown-Prince to Voltaire). **
"Prussian Lithuania is a Country a hundred and twenty miles "long, by from sixty to forty broad;  it was ravaged by "Pestilence at the beginning of this Century; and they say
"Three-hundred Thousand people died of disease and famine."
Ravaged by Pestilence and the neglect of King Friedrich I.; till my Father, once his hands were free, made personal survey of it, and took it up, in earnest.

"Since that time," say twenty years ago, "there is no ex"pense that the King has been afraid of, in order to succeed in "his salutary views. He made, in the first place, regulations
"full of wisdom; he rebuilt wherever the Pestilence had

* Büsching: Erdbeschreibung, ii. 1049.

 "Miles English," we always mean, unless &c.

“desolated: thousands of families, from the ends of Europe,” Seventeen Thousand Salzburgers for the last item, “were “conducted hither; the Country repeopled itself; trade began “to flourish again; — and now, in these fertile regions, “abundance reigns more than it ever did.

“There are above half a million of inhabitants in Lithuania;
“there are more towns than there ever were, more flocks than “formerly, more wealth and more productiveness than in any “other part of Germany. And all this that I tell you of is due “to the King alone; who not only gave the orders, but “superintended the execution of them; it was he that devised
“the plans, and himself got them carried to fulfilment; and “spared neither care nor pains, nor immense expenditures, nor “promises nor recompenses, to secure happiness and life to “this half million of thinking beings, who owe to him alone “that they have possessions and felicity in the world.

“I hope this detail does not weary you. I depend on your “humanity extending itself to your Lithuanian brethren, as “well as to your French, English, German, or other, — all the “more as, to my great astonishment, I passed through villages
“where you hear nothing spoken but French. — I have found “something so heroic, in the generous and laborious way in “which the King addressed himself to making this desert “flourish with inhabitants and happy industries and fruits, “that it seemed to me you would feel the same sentiments in “learning the circumstances of such a reëstablishment.

“I daily expect news of you from Enghien” (in those Dutch-Lawsuit Countries). * * “The divine Emilie; * * the Duke” (D’Aremberg, Austrian Soldier, of convivial turn, — remote Welsh-Uncle to a certain little Prince de Ligne, now spinning tops in those parts; * not otherwise interesting), “whom

* Born 23d May 1735, this latter little Prince; lasted till 18th Dec. 1814 (“danse, mais il ne marche pas”).

"Apollo contends for against Bacchus. * * Adieu. Ne
"m'oubliez pas, mon cher ami." *

This is one pleasant scene, to the Crown-Prince and us, in those grassy localities. And now we have to mention that, about a fortnight later, at Königsberg one day, in reference to a certain Royal Stud or Horse-breeding Establishment in those same Lithuanian regions, there had a still livelier satisfaction happened him; satisfaction of a personal and filial nature. The name of this Royal Stud, inestimable on such ground, is Trakehnen, — lies south of Tilsit, in an upper valley of the Pregel river; — very extensive Horse-Establishment, "with seven farms under it," say the Books, and all "in the most perfect order," they need hardly add, Friedrich Wilhelm being master of it. Well, the Royal Party was at Königsberg, so far on the road homewards again from those outlying parts, when Friedrich Wilhelm said one day to his Son, quite in a cursory manner, "I give thee that Stud of Trakehnen; thou must go back and look to it;" — which struck Fritz quite dumb at the moment.

For it is worth near upon 2,000 l. a year (12,000 thalers); a welcome new item in our impoverished budget; and it is an undeniable sign of Papa's good humour with us, which is more precious still. Fritz made his acknowledgments, eloquent with looks, eloquent with voice, on coming to himself; and is, in fact, very proud of his gift, and celebrates it to his Wilhelmina, to

* Œuvres, xxi. 304, 305.

Camas and others who have a right to know such a thing. Grand useful gift; and handed over by Papa grandly, in three business words, as if it had been a brace of game: "I give it thee, Fritz!" A thing not to be forgotten. "At bottom Friedrich Wilhelm was "not avaricious" (not a miser, only a man grandly abhorring waste, as the poor vulgar cannot do), "not avaricious," says Pöllnitz once; "he made munificent gifts, "and never thought of them more." This of Trakehnen, — perhaps there might be a whiff of coming Fate concerned in it withal: "I shall soon be dead, not able to give thee anything, poor Fritz!" To the Prince and us it is very beautiful; a fine effulgence of the inner man of Friedrich Wilhelm. The Prince returned to Trakehnen, on this glad errand; settled the business details there; and, after a few days, went home by a route of his own; — well satisfied with this Prussian Review-journey, as we may imagine.

One sad thing there was, though Friedrich did not yet know how sad, in this Review-journey: the new fit of illness that overtook his Majesty. From Pöllnitz who was of the party, we have details on that head. In his Majesty's last bad illness, five years ago, when all seemed hopeless, it appears the surgeons had relieved him, — in fact recovered him, bringing off the bad humours in quantity, — by an incision in the foot or leg. In the course of the present fatigues, this wound broke out again; which of course stood much in the way of his Majesty; and could not be neglected.

probably the causes of it were. A regimental surgeon, Pöllnitz says, was called in; who, in two days, healed the wound, — and declared all to be right again; though in fact, as we may judge, it was dangerously worse than before. “All well here,” writes Friedrich; “the “King has been out of order, but is now entirely re“covered (tout à fait remis).”*

Much reviewing and heavy business followed at Königsberg; — gift of Trakehnen, and departure of the Crown-Prince for Trakehnen, winding it up. Directly on the heel of which, his Majesty turned homewards, the Crown-Prince not to meet him till once at Berlin again. Majesty's first stage was at Pillau, where we have been. At Pillau, or next day at Dantzic, Pöllnitz observed a change in his Majesty's humour, which had been quite sunshiny all this journey hitherto. At Dantzic Pöllnitz first noticed it; but at every new stage it grew worse, evil accidents occurring to worsen it; and at Berlin it was worst of all; — and, alas, his poor Majesty never recovered his sunshine in this world again! Here is Pöllnitz's account of the journey homewards:

“Till now,” till Pillau and Dantzic, “his Majesty had been “in especially good humour; but in Dantzic his cheerfulness “forsook him; — and it never came back. He arrived about “ten at night in that City” (Wednesday, 12th August or “thereby); “slept there; and was off again next morning at “five. He drove only fifty miles this day; stopped in Lupow” “(coast road through Pommern), “with Herr von Grumkow”

* “Königsberg, 30th July 1739,” to his Wife (Œuvres, xxvi. 6).

“(the late Grumkow’s Brother), “Kammer President in this “Pommern Province. From Lupow he went to a poor Village “near Belgard, eighty miles farther;” — last village on the great road, Belgard lying to left a little, on a side road; — “and stayed there overnight.

“At Belgard, next morning, he reviewed the Dragoon “Regiment von Platen; and was very ill-content with it.
 “And nobody, with the least understanding of that business,
 “but must own that never did Prussian Regiment manœuvre “worse. Conscious themselves how bad it was, they lost head,
 “and got into open confusion. The King did all that was “possible to help them into order again. He withdrew thrice “over, to give the Officers time to recover themselves; but it “was all in vain. The King, contrary to wont, restrained “himself amazingly, and would not show his displeasure in “public. He got into his carriage, and drove away with the “Fürst of Anhalt,” Old Dessauer, “and Von Winterfeld,” Captain in the Giant Regiment, “who is now Major-General “von Winterfeld;* not staying to dine with General von “Platen, as was always his custom with Commandants whom “he had reviewed. He bade Prince Wilhelm and the rest of “us stay and dine; he himself drove away,” — towards the great road again, and some uncertain lodging there.

“We stayed accordingly; and did full justice to the good “cheer,” — though poor Platen would certainly look flustered one may fancy. “But as the Prince was anxious to come “with his Majesty again, and knew not where he would meet “him, we had to be very swift with the business.

“We found the King with Anhalt and Winterfeld, by
 “by; sitting in a village, in front of a barn, and eating a “pie there, which the Fürst of Anhalt had chanced to bring.

* Major-General since 1743, of high fame; fell in fight, 7th Sept.
 1757.

“with him; his Majesty, owing to what he had seen on the “parade-ground, was in the utmost ill-humour (höchst übler “Laune). Next day, Saturday, he went a hundred and fifty
“or two hundred miles; and arrived in Berlin at ten at night.
“Not expected there till the morrow; so that his rooms were “locked, — her Majesty being over in Monbijou, giving her “children a Ball;” * — and we can fancy what a frame of mind there was!

Nobody, not at first even the Doctors, much heeded this new fit of illness; which went and came: “changed temper,” deeper or less deep gloom of “bad humour,” being the main phenomenon to bystanders. But the sad truth was, his Majesty never did recover his sunshine; from Pillau onwards he was slowly entering into the shadows of the total Last Eclipse; and his journeyings and reviewings in this world were all done. Ten months hence, Pöllnitz and others knew better what it had been! —

* Pöllnitz, ii. 537.

CHAPTER VII.

LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG: TRANSIT OF BALTIMORE AND OTHER PERSONS AND THINGS.

FRIEDRICH had not been long home again from Trakehnen and Preussen, when the routine of things at Reinsberg was illuminated by Visitors, of brilliant and learned quality; some of whom, a certain Signor Algarotti for one, require passing mention here. Algarotti, who became a permanent friend or satellite, very luminous to the Prince, and was much about him in coming years, first shone out upon the scene at this time, — coming unexpectedly, and from the Eastward as it chanced.

On his own score, Algarotti has become a wearisome literary man to modern readers: one of those half-remembered men, whose Books seem to claim a reading, and do not repay it you when given. Treatises, of a serious nature, On the Opera; setting forth, in earnest, the potential “moral uses” of the Opera, and dedicated to Chatham; Neutonianismo per le Donne (Astronomy for Ladies): the mere Titles of such things are fatally sufficient to us; and we cannot, without effort, nor with it, recall the brilliancy of Algarotti and them to his contemporary world.

Algarotti was a rich Venetian Merchant's Son, precisely about the Crown-Prince's age; shone greatly in his studies at Bologna and elsewhere; had written Poesies (Rime); written especially that Newtonianism for the Dames (equal to Fontenelle, said Fame, and orthodox Newtonian withal, not heterodox or Cartesian); — and had shone, respected, at Paris, on the strength of it, for three or four years past: friend of Voltaire in consequence, of Voltaire and his Divine Emilie, and a welcome guest at Cirey; friend of the cultivated world generally, which was then labouring, Divine Emilie in the van of it, to understand Newton and be orthodox in this department of things. Algarotti did fine Poesies, too, once and again; did Classical Scholarships, and much else: everywhere a clearheaded, methodically distinct, concise kind of man. A high style of breeding about him, too; had powers of pleasing, and used them: a man beautifully lucent in society, gentle yet impregnable there; keeping himself unspotted from the world and its discrepancies, — really with considerable prudence, first and last.

20th-25th Sept. 1789.

He is somewhat of the Bielfeld type; a Merchant's Son, we observe, like Bielfeld; but a Venetian Merchant's, not a Hamburg's; and also of better natural stuff than Bielfeld. Concentrated himself upon his task with more seriousness, and made a higher thing of it than Bielfeld; though, after all, it was the same task the two had. Alas, our "Swan of Padua" (so they sometimes called him) only sailed, paddling grandly, nowhither, — as the Swan-Goose of the Elbe did, in a less stately manner! One cannot well bear to read his Books. There is no light upon Friedrich to tempt us; better light than Bielfeld's there could have been, and much of it: but he prudently, as well as proudly, forbore such topics. He approaches very near fertility and geniality in his writings; but never reaches it. Dilettantism become serious and strenuous, in those departments — Well, it was beautiful to young Friedrich and the world at that time, though it is not to us! — Young Algarotti, Twenty-seven this year, has been touring about as a celebrity these four years past, on the strength of his fine manners and Newtonianism for the Dames.

It was under escort of Baltimore, "an English Milord," recommended from Potsdam itself, that Algarotti came to Reinsberg; the Signor had much to do with English people now and after. Where Baltimore first picked him up, I know not: but they have been to Russia together; Baltimore by twelve years the elder of the two: and now, getting home towards England again, they call at Reinsberg in the fine Autumn weather; — and considerably captivate the Crown-Prince, Baltimore playing chief, in that as in other points. The visit lasted five days:* there was copious speech on many things; — discussion about Printing of the Anti-Macchiavel; Algarotti to get it printed in England, Algarotti to get Pine and his Engraved Henriade put under way; neither of which projects took effect; — readers can conceive what a charming five days these were. Here, in the Crown-Prince's own words, are some brief glimmerings which will suffice us:

* 20-25th September 1789 (Œuvres de Frédéric, xiv. p. xiv.).

*Reinsberg, 25th Sept. 1739 (Crown-Prince to Papa). * *  that "nothing new has occurred in the Regiment, and we have "few sick. Here has the English Milord, who was at Potsdam, "passed through" (stayed five days, though we call it passing, and suppress the Algarotti, Baltimore being indeed chief). "He is gone towards Hamburg, to take ship for England there. "As I heard that my Most All-gracious Father wished I "should show him courtesy, I have done for him what I could. "The Prince of Mirow has also been here," — our old Strelitz friend. Of Baltimore nothing more to Papa. But to another Correspondent, to the good Suhm (who is now at Petersburg, and much in our intimacy, ready to transact loans for us, translate Wolf, or do what is wanted), there is this passage next day:

Reinsberg, 26th September 1739 (To Suhm). "We have had "Milord Baltimore here, and the young Algarotti; both of "them men who, by their accomplishments, cannot but conciliate the esteem and consideration of all who see them. "We talked much of you" (Suhm), "of Philosophy, of Science, "Art; in short, of all that can be included in the taste of cultivated people (honnêtes gens)."* And again to another, about two weeks hence:

Reinsberg, 10th October 1739 (To Voltaire). "We have "had Milord Baltimore and Algarotti here, who are going back "to England. This Milord is a very sensible man (homme très-sensé); who possesses a great deal of knowledge, and thinks "like us, that sciences can be no disparagement to nobility, "nor degrade an illustrious rank. I admired the genius of "this Anglais, as one does a fine face through a crape veil.

“He speaks French very ill, yet one likes to hear him speak it; and as for his English, he pronounces it so quick, there is no possibility of following him. He calls a Russian ‘a mechanical animal.’ He says, ‘Petersburg is the eye of Russia, with which it keeps civilised countries in sight; if you took this eye from it, Russia would fall again into barbarism, out of which it is just struggling.’*  Young Algarotti, whom you know, pleased me beyond measure. He promised that he” — But Baltimore, promise or not, is the chief figure at present.

Evidently an original kind of figure to us, cet Anglais. And indeed there is already finished a rhymed Epistle to Baltimore; Epître sur la Liberté (copy goes in that same Letter, for Voltaire’s behoof), which dates itself likewise October 10th; beginning, which, though it is full of fine sincere sentiments, about human dignity, papal superstition, Newton, Locke, and aspirations for progress of culture in Prussia, no reader could stand at this epoch.

“L’esprit libre, Milord, qui règne en Angleterre,” —

What Baltimore said in answer to the Epître, we do not know: probably not much; it does not appear he ever saw or spoke to Friedrich a second time. Three weeks after, Friedrich writing to Algarotti, has these words: “I pray you make my friendships to Milord Baltimore, whose character and manner of thinking I truly esteem. I hope he has, by this time, got my Epître on the English Liberty of Thought.”

* Œuvres de Frédéric, xxi. 326, 327.

 29th October 1739, To Algarotti in London (Œuvres, xviii. 5).

And so Baltimore passes on, silent in History henceforth, — though Friedrich seems to have remembered him to late times, as a kind of type-figure when England came into his head. For the sake of this small transit over the sun's disc, I have made some inquiry about Baltimore; but found very little; — perhaps enough:

“He was Charles, Sixth Lord Baltimore, it appears; Sixth, and last but one. First of the Baltimores, we know, was Secretary Calvert (1618—1624), who colonised Maryland; last of them (1774) was the Son of this Charles; something of a fool, to judge by the face of him in Portraits, and by some of his doings in the world. He, that Seventh Baltimore, printed one or two little Volumes (‘now of extreme rarity,’ — cannot be too rare); and winded up by standing an ugly Trial at Kingston Assizes (plaintiff an unfortunate-female). After which he retired to Naples, and there ended, 1774, the last of these Milords. *

“He of the Kingston Assizes, we say, was not this Charles; but his Son, whom let the reader forget. Charles, age forty at this time, had travelled about the Continent a good deal: once, long ago, we imagined we had got a glimpse of him (but it was a guess merely) lounging about Lunéville and Lorraine, along with Lyttelton, in the Congress-of-Soissons time? Not long after that, it is certain enough, he got appointed a Gentleman of the Bedchamber to Prince Fred; who was a friend of speculative talkers and cultivated people. In which situation Charles Sixth Baron Baltimore continued all his days after; and might have risen by means of Fred,

* Walpole (by Park): Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors (London, 1806), v. 278.

“as he was anxious enough to do, had both of them lived; but “they both died, Baltimore first, in 1751, a year before Fred.
 “Bubb Doddington, diligent labourer in the same Fred “vineyard, was much infested by this Baltimore, — who, “drunk or sober (for he occasionally gets into liquor), is always “putting out Bubb, and stands too well with our Royal Master, “one secretly fears! Baltimore’s finances, I can guess, were “not in too good order; mostly an Absentee; Irish Estates
 “not managed in the first style, while one is busy in the Fred “vineyard! ‘The best and honestest man in the world, with “‘a good deal of jumbled knowledge,’ Walpole calls him once:
 “‘but not capable of conducting a party.’” * Oh no; — and died, at any rate, Spring 1751:  and we will not mention him farther.

Bielfeld, what he saw at Reinsberg and around.

Directly on the rear of these fine visitors, came, by invitation, a pair of the Korn’s Hôtel people; Masonic friends; one of whom was Bielfeld, whose dainty Installation Speech and ways of procedure had been of promise to the Prince on that occasion. “Baron von Oberg” was the other; — Hanoverian Baron: the same who went into the Wars, and was a “General von Oberg” twenty years hence? The same or another, it does not much concern us. Nor does the visit much, or at all; except that Bielfeld, being of writing nature, professes to give ocular account of it. Honest transcript of what a human creature actually saw at Reinsberg,

* Walpole’s Letters to Mann (London, 1843), II. 175: 27th January 1747.
 See ib. I. 82.

 Peerage of Ireland (London, 1768), II. 172-174.

and in the Berlin environment at that date, would have had a value to mankind: but Bielfeld has adopted the fictitious form; and pretty much ruined for us any transcript there is. Exaggeration, gesticulation, fantastic uncertainty afflict the reader; and prevent comfortable belief, except where there is other evidence than Bielfeld's.

At Berlin the beautiful straight streets, Linden Avenues (perhaps a better sample than those of our day), were notable to Bielfeld; bridges, statues very fine; grand esplanades, and such military drilling and parading as was never seen. He had dinner invitations, too, in quantity; likes this one and that (all in prudent asterisks), — likes Truchsess von Waldburg very much, and his strange mode of bachelor housekeeping, and the way he dines and talks among his fellow-creatures, or sits studious among his Military Books and Paper-litters. But all is loose far-off sketching, in the style of Anacharsis the Younger; and makes no solid impression.

Getting to Reinsberg, to the Town, to the Schloss, he crosses the esplanade, the moat; sees what we know, beautiful square Mansion among its woods and waters; — and almost nothing that we do not know, except the way the moat-bridge is lighted; "Bridge furnished," he says, "with seven Statues representing the seven "Planets, each holding in her hand a glass lamp in the form of a globe;" — which is a pretty object in the night-time. The House is now finished; Knobelsdorf rejoicing in his success; Pesne and others giving the last touch to some ceilings of a sublime nature. On the lintel of the gate is inscribed Frederico Tranquillitatem Colenti (To Frederick courting Tranquillity). The gardens, walks, hermitages, grottoes, are very spacious, fine; not yet completed, — perhaps will never be. A Temple of Bacchus is just now on hand, somewhere in those labyrinthic woods: “twelve gigantic Satyrs as “caryatides, crowned by an inverted Punchbowl for “dome;” that is the ingenious Knobelsdorf’s idea, pleasant to the mind. Knobelsdorf is of austere aspect; austere, yet benevolent and full of honest sagacity; the very picture of sound sense, thinks Bielfeld. M. Jordan is handsome, though of small stature; agreeable expression of face; eye extremely vivid; brown complexion, “bushy eyebrows as well as beard are black.”*

Or did the reader ever hear of “M. Fredersdorf,” Head Valet at this time? Fredersdorf will become, as it were, Privy-Purse, House-friend, and domestic Factotum, and play a great part, in coming years. “A tall “handsome man;” much “silent sense, civility, dexterity;” something “magnificently clever in him,” thinks Bielfeld (now, or else twenty years afterwards); whom we can believe. He was a gift from General Schwerin, this Fredersdorf; once a Private in Schwerin’s regiment, at Frankfurt on the Oder — excellent on the flute, for one quality. Schwerin, who had an eye for men, sent him to Friedrich, in the Cüstrin time; hoping

* Bielfeld (abridged), i. 45.

 Ib. p. 49.

he might suit in fluting and otherwise. Which he conspicuously did. Bielfeld's account, we must candidly say, appears to be an afterthought; but readers can make their profit of it, all the same.

As to the Crown-Prince and Princess, words fail to express their gracious perfections, their affabilities, polite ingenuities: — Bielfeld's words do give us some pleasant shadowy conceivability of the Crown-Princess:

“Tall, and perfect in shape; bust such as a sculptor might “copy; complexion of the finest; features ditto; nose, I “confess, smallish and pointed, but excellent of that kind;
“hair of the supremest flaxen, ‘shining’ like a flood of sun“beams, when the powder is off it. A humane ingenuous “Princess; little negligences in toilette or the like, if such oc“cur, even these set her off, so ingenuous are they. Speaks “little; but always to the purpose, in a simple, cheerful and “wise way. Dances beautifully; heart (her soubrette assures “me) is heavenly; — and ‘perhaps no Princess living has a “‘finer set of diamonds.’”

Of the Crown-Princess there is some pleasant shadow traced as on cobweb, to this effect. But of the Crown-Prince there is no forming the least conception from what he says: — this is mere cobweb with Nothing elaborately painted on it. Nor do the portraits of the others attract by their verisimilitude. Here is Colonel Keyserling, for instance; the witty Courlander, famous enough in the Friedrich circle; who went on embassy to Cirey, and much else: he “whirls in with uproar “(fracas) like Boreas in the Ballet;” fowling-piece on shoulder, and in his “dressing-gown” withal, which is still stranger; snatches off Bielfeld, unknown till that moment, to sit by him while dressing; and there, with much capering, pirouetting, and indeed almost ground-and-lofty tumbling, for accompaniment, "talks of Horses, Mathematics, Painting, "Architecture, Literature, and the Art of War," while he dresses. This gentleman was once Colonel in Friedrich Wilhelm's Army; is now fairly turned of forty, and has been in troubles: we hope he is not like in the Bielfeld Portrait; — otherwise, how happy that we never had the honour of knowing him! Indeed, the Crown-Prince's Household generally, as Bielfeld paints it in flourishes of panegyric, is but unattractive; barren to the modern onlooker; partly the Painter's blame, we doubt not. He gives details about their mode of dining, taking coffee, doing concert; — and describes once an incidental drinking-bout got up aforethought by the Prince; which is probably in good part fiction, though not ill done. These fantastic sketchings, rigorously winnowed into the credible and actual, leave no great residue in that kind; but what little they do leave is of favourable and pleasant nature.

Bielfeld made a visit privately to Potsdam, too: saw the giants drill; made acquaintance with important Captains of theirs (all in asterisks) at Potsdam; with whom he dined, not in a too credible manner, and even danced. Among the asterisks, we easily pick out Captain Wartensleben (of the Korn's-Hôtel operation), and Winterfeld, a still more important Captain, whom we saw dining on cold pie with his Majesty, at a barn-door in Pommern, not long since. Of the giants, or their life at Potsdam, Bielfeld's word is not worth hearing, — worth suppressing rather; — his knowledge being so small, and hung forth in so fantastic a way. This transient sight he had of his Majesty in person; this, which is worth something to us, — fact being evidently lodged in it. "After "church-parade," Autumn Sunday afternoon (day uncertain, Bielfeld's date being fictitious, and even impossible), Majesty drove out to Wusterhausen, "where the quantities of game

"surpass all belief;" and Bielfeld had one glimpse of him:

"I saw his Majesty only, as it were, in passing. If I may "judge by his Portraits, he must have been of a perfect beauty
"in his young time; but it must be confessed there is nothing "left of it now. His eyes truly are fine; but the glance of "them is terrible: his complexion is composed of the strongest
"tints of red, blue, yellow, green," — not a lovely complexion at all; "big head; the thick neck sunk between the shoulders;
"figure short and heavy (courte et ramassée)." *

"Going out to Wusterhausen," then, that afternoon,
"October 1739." How his Majesty is crushed down; quite bulged out of shape in that sad way, by the weight of Time and its pressures: his thoughts, too, most likely, of a heavy-laden and abstruse nature! The old Pfalz Controversy has misgone with him; Pfalz, and so much else in the world; — the world in whole,
probably enough, near ending to him; the final shadows, sombre, grand and mournful, closing in upon him! —

Turk War ends; Spanish War begins. A Wedding in Petersburg.

Last news come to Potsdam in these days is, The Kaiser has ended his disastrous Turk War; been obliged to end it; sudden downbreak, and as it were panic terror, having at last come upon his unfortunate Generals in those parts. Duke Franz was passionate to be out of such a thing; Franz, General Neipperg and others; and now, "2d September 1739," like lodgers leaping from a burning house, they are out of it. The Turk gets Belgrad itself, not to mention wide territories farther east, — Belgrad without shot fired; — nay the Turk was hardly to be kept from hanging the Imperial Messenger (a General Neipperg, Duke Franz's old Tutor, and chief Confidant, whom we shall hear more of elsewhere), whose passport was not quite right on this occasion! — Never was a more disgraceful Peace. But also never had been worse fighting; planless, changeful, powerless, melting into futility at every step: — not to be mended by imprisonments in Grätz, and still harsher treatment of individuals. "Has all success forsaken me, then, since Eugene died?" said the Kaiser; and snatched at this Turk Peace; glad to have it, by mediation of France, and on any terms.

* Bielfeld, p. 35.

Has not this Kaiser lost his outlying properties at a fearful rate? Naples is gone; Spanish Bourbon sits in our Naples; comparatively little left for us in Italy. And now the very Turk has beaten us small; insolently fillips the Imperial nose of us, — threatening to hang our Neipperg, and the like. Were it not for Anne of Russia, whose big horsewhip falls heavy on this Turk, he might almost get to Vienna again, for any thing we could do! A Kaiser worthy to be pitied; — whom Friedrich Wilhelm, we perceive, does honestly pity. A Kaiser much beggared, much disgraced, in late years; who has played a huge life-game so long, diplomatising, warring; and except the Shadow of Pragmatic Sanction, has nothing to retire upon.

The Russians protested, with astonishment, against such Turk Peace on the Kaiser's part. But there was no help for it. One ally is gone, the Kaiser has let go this Western skirt of the Turk; and "Thamas Kouli Khan' (called also Nadir Shah, famed Oriental slasher and slayer of that time) no longer stands upon the Eastern skirt, but "has entered India," it appears: the Russians, — their cash, too, running low, — do themselves make peace, "about a month after;" restoring Azoph and nearly all their conquests; putting off the ruin of the Turk till a better time.

War is over in the East, then; but another in the West, England against Spain (Spain and France to help), is about beginning. Readers remember how Jenkins's Ear reëmerged, Spring gone a year, in a blazing condition? Here, through Sylvanus Urban himself, are two direct glimpses, a twelvemonth nearer hand, which show us how the matter has been proceeding since:

"London, 19th February 1739. The City Authorities," — laying or going to lay "the foundation of the Mansion-House" (Edifice now very black in our time), and doing other things of little moment to us, "had a Masquerade at the Guildhall this night. There was a very splendid appearance at the "Masquerade: but among the many humorous and whimsical "characters, what seemed most to engage attention was a "Spaniard, who called himself 'Knight of the Order' as being "of which Order he wore on his breast the form of a Star. with "its points tinged in blood; and on the back it was "painted, and in capital letters the word JAMES ~~was written~~."

“Across his shoulder there hung, instead of ribbon, a large “Halter; which he held up to several persons dressed as Eng“lish Sailors, who seemed in great terror of him, and falling “on their knees suffered him to rummage their pockets; which “done, he would insolently dismiss them with strokes of his “halter. Several of the Sailors had a bloody Ear hanging “down from their heads; and on their hats were these words, “Ear for Ear; on others, No Search or No Trade; with the “like sentences.”* The conflagration evidently going on;
 not likely to be damped down again, by ministerial art! —

“London, 19th March 1739.” Grand Debate in Parliament, on the late “Spanish Convention,” pretended Bargain of redress lately got from Spain: Approve the Convention, or Not approve? “A hundred Members were in the House of Commons “before seven, this morning; and four hundred had taken “their seat by ten; which is an unheard-of thing. Prince of “Wales,” Fred in person, was in the gallery till twelve at “night, and had his dinner sent to him. Sir Robert Walpole “rose: ‘Sir, the great pains that have been taken to influence
 “‘all ranks and degrees of men in this Nation — * * But give “‘me leave to’” — apply a wet cloth to Honourable Gentlemen.
 Which he does, really with skill and sense. France and the others are so strong, he urges; England so unprepared:
 Kaiser at such a pass; “War like to be, about the Palatinate “Dispute” (our friend Friedrich Wilhelm’s): “Where is Eng“land to get allies?” — and hours long of the like sort. A judicious wet cloth; which proved unavailing.

For “William Pitts” (so they spell the great Chatham that is to be) was eloquent on the other side:

* Gentleman's Magazine for 1739, p. 108; — our dates, as always, are N. S.

“Despairing Merchants,” “Voice of England,” and so on. And the world was all in an inflamed state. And Mr. Pulteney exclaimed: Palatinate? Allies? “We “need no allies; the case of Mr. Jenkins will raise us “volunteers everywhere!” And in short, — after eight months more of haggling, and applying wet cloths, — Walpole, in the name of England, has to declare War against Spain:* the public humour proving unquenchable on that matter. War; and no Peace to be, “till our undoubted right,” to roadway on the oceans of this Planet, become permanently manifest to the Spanish Majesty.

Such the effect of a small Ear, kept about one in cotton, from ursine piety or other feelings. Has not Jenkins’s Ear reëmerged, with a vengeance? It has kindled a War; dangerous for kindling other Wars, and setting the whole world on fire — as will be too evident in the sequel! The Ear of Jenkins is a singular thing. Might have mounted to be a Constellation, like Berenice’s Hair, and other small facts become mythical, had the English People been of poetic turn! Enough of it, for the time being. —

This Summer, Anton Ulrich, at Petersburg, did wed his Serene Mecklenburg Princess, Heiress of all the Russias: “July 14th, 1739,” — three months before that Drive to Wusterhausen, which we saw lately. Little Anton Ulrich, Cadet of Brunswick; our Friedrich’s Brother-in-Law; — a noticeably small man in comparison to such bulk of destiny, thinks Friedrich, though the case is not without example! *

* “3d November (23d October) 1739.”

“Anton Ulrich is now five-and-twenty;” says one of my Notebooks; “a young gentleman of small stature, shining “courage in battle, but somewhat shy and bashful; who has “had his troubles in Petersburg society, till the triumph came, “— and will have. Here are the stages of Anton Ulrich’s “felicity:

“Winter 1732—3. He was sent for to Petersburg (his “serene Aunt the German Kaiserinn, and Kaiser Karl’s “diplomatsists, suggesting it there), with the view of his paying “court to the young Mecklenburg Princess, Heiress of all the “Russias, of whom we have often heard. February 1733, he “arrived on this errand; — not approved of at all by the “Mecklenburg Princess, by Czarina Anne or anybody there: “what can be done with such an uncomfortable little creature? “They gave him a Colonelcy of Cuirassiers: ‘Drill there, and “‘endure.’

“Spring 1737. Much-enduring, diligently drilling, for “four years past, he went this year to the Turk War under “Münlich; — much pleased Münlich, at Oczakow and else- “where; who reports in the War-Office high things of him. “And on the whole, — the serene Vienna people now again “bestirring themselves, with whom we are in copartnery in “this Turk Business, — little Anton Ulrich is encouraged to “proceed. Proceeds; formally demands his Mecklenburg “Princess; and,

“July 14th, 1739, weds her; the happiest little man in all “the Russias, and with the biggest destiny, if it prosper.

* A Letter of his to Suhm; touching on Franz of Lorraine and this Anton Ulrich.

“Next year, too, there came a son and heir; whom they called “Iwan, in honour of his Russian Great-grandfather. Shall we “add the subsequent felicities of Anton Ulrich here; or wait “till another opportunity?”

Better wait. This is all, and more than all, his Prussian Majesty, rolling out of Wusterhausen that afternoon, ever knew of them, or needed to know! —

CHAPTER VIII.

DEATH OF FRIEDRICH WILHELM.

AT Wusterhausen, this Autumn, there is game as usual, but little or no hunting for the King. He has to sit drearily within doors, for most part; listening to the rustle of falling leaves, to dim Winter coming with its rains and winds. Field-sports are a rumour from without: for him now no joyous sow-baiting, deer-chasing; — that, like other things, is past.

In the beginning of November, he came to Berlin; was worse there, and again was better; — strove to do the Carnival, as had been customary; but, in a languid, lamed manner. One night he looked in upon an evening-party which General Schulenburg was giving: he returned home, chilled, shivering; could not, all night, be brought to heat again. It was the last evening-party Friedrich Wilhelm ever went to.* Lieutenant-General Schulenburg: the same who doomed young Friedrich to death, as President of the Court Martial; and then wrote the Three Letters about him which we once looked into: illuminates himself in this manner in Berlin society, — Carnival Season 1740, weather fiercely cold. Maypole Schulenburg the lean Aunt, Ex-Mistress of George I., over in London, — I think she must now be dead? Or if not dead, why not! Memory, for the tenth time, fails me, of the humanly unmemorable, whom perhaps even flunkys should forget; and I will try it no more. The stalwart Lieutenant-General will reappear on us once, twice at the utmost, and never again. He gave the last evening-party Friedrich Wilhelm ever went to.

* Pöllnitz (li. 537); who gives no date.

Poor Friedrich Wilhelm is in truth very ill; tosses about all day, in and out of bed, — bed and wheeled-chair drearily alternating; — suffers much; and again, in Diplomatic circles, the rumours are rife and sinister. Ever from this chill at Schulenburg's the medicines did him no good, says Pöllnitz: if he rallied, it was the effect of Nature, and only temporary. He does daily, with punctuality, his Official business; perhaps the best two hours he has of the four-and-twenty, for the time hangs heavy on him. His old Generals sit round his bed, talking, smoking, as it was five years ago; his Feekin and his children much about him, out and in: the heavy-laden weary hours roll round as they can. In general there is a kind of constant Tabaks-Collegium, old Flans, Camas, Hacke, Pöllnitz, Derschau, and the rest by turns always there; the royal Patient cannot be left alone, without faces he likes: other Generals, estimable in their way, have a physiognomy displeasing to the sick man; and will smart for it if they enter, — "At sight of him every pain grows painfuller!" — the poor King being of poetic temperament, as we often say. Friends are encouraged to smoke, especially to keep up a stream of talk; if at any time he fall into a doze and they cease talking, the silence will awaken him.

He is worst off in the night; sleep very bad: and among his sore bodily pains, ennui falls very heavy to a mind so restless. He can paint, he can whittle, chisel: at last they even mount him a table, in his bed, with joiner's tools, mallets, gluepots, where he makes small carpentry, — the talk to go on the while; — often at night is the sound of his mallet audible in the Palace Esplanade; and Berlin townsfolk pause to listen, with many thoughts of a sympathetic or at least inarticulate character: "Hm, Weh, Ihro Majestät: ach Gott, pale Death knocks with impartial foot at the huts of poor men and the Palaces of Kings!"* — Reverend Herr Roloff, whom they call Provost (Probst, Chief Clergyman) Roloff, a pious honest man and preacher, he, I could guess, has already been giving spiritual counsel now and then; later interviews with Roloff are expressly on record: for it is the King's private thought, ever and anon borne in upon him, that death itself is in this business.

Queen and children, mostly hoping hitherto, though fearing too, live in much anxiety and agitation. The Crown-Prince is often over from Reinsberg; must not come too often, nor even inquire too much: his affectionate solicitude might be mistaken for solicitude of another kind! It is certain he is in no haste to be King; to quit the haunts of the Muses, and embark on Kingship. Certain, too, he loves his Father; shudders at the thought of losing him. And yet again there will gleams intrude of a contrary thought; which the filial heart disowns, with a kind of horror, "Down, thou impious thought!" — We perceive he manages in general to push the crisis away from him; to believe that real danger is still distant. His demeanour, so far as we can gather from his Letters or other evidence, is amiable, prudent, natural; altogether that of a human Son in those difficult circumstances. Poor Papa is heavy-laden: let us help to bear his burdens; — let us hope the crisis is still far off! —

* Pöllnitz, ii. 539.

Once, on a favourable evening, probably about the beginning of April, when he felt as if improving, Friedrich Wilhelm resolved to dress, and hold Tobacco-Parliament again in a formal manner. Let us look in there, through the eyes of Pöllnitz, who was of it, upon the last Tobacco-Parliament:

"A numerous party; Schwerin, Hacke, Derschau, all the "chiefs and commandants of the Berlin Garrison are there;
 "the old circle full; social human speech once more, and
 "pipes alight; pleasant to the King. He does not himself
 "smoke on this occasion; but he is unusually lively in talk;
 "much enjoys the returning glimpse of old days; and the "Tobacco circle was proceeding through its phases, success"ful beyond common. All at once the Crown-Prince steps in;
 "direct from Reinsberg:* an unexpected pleasure. At sight
 "of whom the Tobacco circle, taken on the sudden, simul"taneously started up, and made him a bow. Rule is, in "Tobacco-Parliament you do not rise for anybody; and they

* 12th April 1740? (Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 29); Pöllnitz is dateless.

“have risen. Which struck the sick heart in a strange painful way. ‘Hm, the Rising Sun?’ thinks he; ‘Rules broken through, for the Rising Sun. But I am not dead yet, as you shall know!’ ringing for his servants in great wrath; and had himself rolled out, regardless of protestations and excuses. ‘Hither, you Hacke!’ said he.

“Hacke followed; but it was only to return on the instant, with the King’s order, ‘That you instantly quit the Palace, all of you, and don’t come back!’ Solemn respectful message to his Majesty was of no effect, or of less; they had to go, on those terms; and Pöllnitz, making for his Majesty’s apartment next morning as usual, was twitched by a Gensdarme, ‘No admittance!’ And it was days before the matter would come round again, under earnest protestations from the one side, and truculent rebukes from the other.* Figure the Crown-Prince, figure the poorsick Majesty; and what a time in those localities!

With the bright Spring weather he seemed to revive; towards the end of April he resolved for Potsdam, everybody thinking him much better, and the outer Public reckoning the crisis of the illness over. He himself knew other. It was on the 27th of the month that he went; he said, “Fare thee well, then, Berlin; I am to die in Potsdam, then (ich werde in Potsdam sterben)!” The May-flowers came late; the weather was changeful, ungenial for the sick man: this winter of 1740 had been the coldest on record; it extended itself into the very summer; and brought great distress of every kind;— of which some oral rumour still survives in all countries. Friedrich Wilhelm heard complaints of scarcity among the people; admonitions to open his Corn-granaries (such as he always has in store against that kind of accident); but he still hesitated and refused; unable to look into it himself, and fearing deceptions.

* Pöllnitz (abridged), ii. 540.

For the rest, he is struggling between death and life; in general persuaded that the end is fast hastening on. He sends for Chief Preacher Roloff out to Potsdam; has some notable dialogues with Roloff, and with two other Potsdam Clergymen, of which there is record still left us. In these, as in all his demeanour at this supreme time, we see the big rugged block of manhood come out very vividly; strong in his simplicity, in his veracity. Friedrich Wilhelm's wish is to know from Roloff what the chances are for him in the other world, — which is not less certain than Potsdam and the giant grenadiers to Friedrich Wilhelm; and where, he perceives, never half so clearly before, he shall actually peel off his Kingdom, and stand before God Almighty, no better than a naked beggar. Roloff's prognostics are not so encouraging as the King had hoped. Surely this King "never took or coveted what was not his; kept true to his marriage-vow, in spite of horrible examples everywhere; believed the Bible, honoured the Preachers, went diligently to Church, and tried to do what he understood God's commandments were?" To all which Roloff, a courageous pious man, answers with discreet words and shakings of the head. "Did I behave ill then, did I ever do injustice?" Roloff mentions Baron Schlubbat the defalcating Amtmann, hanged at Königsberg without even a trial. "He had no trial; but was there any doubt he had justice? A public thief, confessing he had stolen the taxes he was set to gather; insolently offering, as if that were all, to repay the money, and saying, It was not Manier (good manners) to hang a nobleman!" Roloff shakes his head, Too violent, your Majesty, and savouring of the tyrannous. The poor King must repent.

"Well, — is there anything more? Out with it, then; better now than too late!" — Much oppression, forcing men to build in Berlin. — "Oppression? was it not their benefit, as well as Berlin's and the Country's? I had no interest in it other. Derschau, you who managed it?" and his Majesty turned to Derschau. For all the smoking generals and company are still here; nor will his Majesty consent to dismiss them from the presence and be alone with Roloff: "What is there to conceal? They are people of honour, and my friends." Derschau, whose feats in the building way are not unknown even to us, answers with a hard face, It was all right and orderly; nothing out of square in his building operations. To which Roloff shakes his head: "A thing of public notoriety, Herr General." — "I will prove everything before a Court," answers the Herr General with still harder face; Roloff still austerely shaking his head. Hm! — And then there is forgiveness of enemies; your Majesty is bound to forgive all men, or how can you ask to be forgiven?" "Well I will, I do; you Feeekin, write to you

Brother (unforgiveablest of beings), after I am dead, that I forgave him, died in peace with him." — Better her Majesty should write at once, suggests Roloff. — "No, after I am dead," persists the Son of Nature, — that will be safer!* An unwedgeable and gnarled big block of manhood and simplicity and sincerity; such as we rarely get sight of among the modern sons of Adam, among the crowned sons nearly never. At parting he said to Roloff, "You (Er, He) do not spare me; it is right. You do your duty like an honest "Christian man."

Roloff, I perceive, had several Dialogues with the King; and stayed in Potsdam some days for that object. The above bit of jotting is from the Seckendorf Papers (probably picked up by Seckendorf Junior), and is dated only "May." Of the two Potsdam Preachers, one of whom is "Oesfeld, Chaplain of the Giant Grenadiers," and the other is "Cochius, Calvinist Hofprediger," each published on his own score some Notes of dialogue and circumstance; which are to the

* Wrote accordingly, "not able to finish without many tears:" honest sensible Letter (though indifferently spelt), "Berlin, 1st June 1740;" — lies now in State Paper Office: "Royal Letters, vol. xciv., Prussia, 1689-1777."

 Notata ex ore Roloffi ("found among the Seckendorf Papers," no date but "May 1740"), in Förster, ii. 154, 155; in a fragmentary state: completed in Pöllnitz, ii. 545-549.

 Cochius the Hofprediger's (Calvinist Court-Chaplain's) Account of his Interviews (first of them "Friday, 27th May 1740, about 9 P.M."); followed by ditto from Oesfeld (Chaplain of the Giants), who usually accompanied Cochius, — are in Seyfart, Geschichte Friedrich des Grossen (Leipzig, 1783-1788), i. (Beilage) 24-40. Seyfart was 'Regiments-Auditor' in Halle: via same effect, so far as they concern us; and exhibit the same rugged Son of Nature, looking with all his eyesight into the near Eternity, and sinking in a human and not inhuman manner amid the floods of Time. "Wa, "Wa, what great God is this, that pulls down the "strength of the strongest Kings!" —

The poor King's state is very restless, fluctuates from day to day; he is impatient of bed; sleeps very ill; is up whenever possible; rolls about in his wheeled-chair, and even gets into the air: at one time looking strong, as if there were still months in him, and anon sunk in fainting weakness, as if he had few minutes to live. Friedrich at Reinsberg corresponds very secretly with Dr. Eller; has other friends at Potsdam whose secret news he very anxiously reads. To the last he cannot bring himself to think it serious.*

On Thursday, 26th of May, an express from Eller, or the Potsdam friends, arrives at Reinsberg: He is to come quickly, if he would see his Father again alive! The step may have danger, too; but Friedrich, a world of feelings urging him, is on the road next morning before the sun. His journey may be fancied; the like of it falls to all men. Arriving at last, turning hastily a corner of the Potsdam Schloss, Friedrich sees some gathering in the distance: it is his Father in his roll-

Work, solid though stupid, consists nearly altogether of multifarious Beylagen (Appendices) and Notes; which are creditably accurate, and often curious; and, as usual, have no Index for an unfortunate reader.

* Letter to Eller, 25th May 1740 (Œuvres, xvi. 184).

wagen (wheeled-chair), — not dying; but out of doors, giving orders about founding a House, or seeing it done. House for one Philips, a crabbed Englishman he has; whose tongue is none of the best, not even to Majesty itself, but whose merits as a Groom of English and other Horses are without parallel in those parts. Without parallel, and deserve a House before we die. Let us see it set agoing, this blessed May day! Of Philips, who survived deep into Friedrich's time, and uttered rough sayings (in mixed intelligible dialect) when put upon in his grooming, or otherwise disturbed, I could obtain no farther account: the man did not care to be put in History (a very small service to a man); cared to have a house with trim fittings, and to do his grooming well, the fortunate Philips.

At sight of his Son, Friedrich Wilhelm threw out his arms; the Son kneeling sank upon his breast, and they embraced with tears. My Father, my Father; My Son, my Son! It was a scene to make all bystanders and even Philips weep. — Probably the emotion hurt the old King; he had to be taken in again straightway, his show of strength suddenly gone, and bed the only place for him. This same Friday he dictated to one of his Ministers (Boden, who was in close attendance) the Instruction for his Funeral; a rude characteristic Piece, which perhaps the English reader knows. Too long and rude for reprinting here.*

* Copy of it, in Seyfart (ubi supra), i. 19-24. Translated in Mauvillon (ii. 432-437); in &c. &c.

He is to be buried in his uniform, the Potsdam Grenadiers his escort; with military decorum, three volleys fired (and take care they be well fired "nicht plackeren"), so many cannon salvoes; — and no fuss or flaunting ceremony: simplicity and decency is what the tenant of that oak coffin wants, as he always did when owner of wider dominions. The coffin, which he has ready and beside him in the Palace this good while, is a stout piece of carpentry, with leather straps and other improvements; he views it from time to time; solaces his truculent imagination with the look of it: "I shall sleep right well there," he would say. The image he has of his Burial, we perceive, is of perfect visuality, equal to what a Defoe could do in imagining. All is seen, settled to the last minuteness: the coffin is to be borne out by so and so, at such and such a door; this detachment is to fall in here, that there, in the attitude of "cover arms" (musket inverted under left arm); and the band is to play, with all its blackamoors, O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden (O Head, all bleeding wounded); a Dirge his Majesty had liked, who knew music, and had a love for it, after his sort. Good Son of Nature: a dumb Poet, as I say always; most dumb, but real; the value of him great, and unknown in these babbling times. It was on this same Friday night, that Cochius was first sent for; Cochius, and Oesfeld with him, "about nine o'clock."

For the next three days (Saturday to Monday), when his cough and many sufferings would permit him, Friedrich Wilhelm had long private dialogues with his Son; instructing him, as was evident, in the mysteries of State; in what knowledge, as to persons and to things, he reckoned might be usefulest to him. What the lessons were, we know not; the way of taking them had given pleasure to the old man: he was heard to say, perhaps more than once, when the Generals were called in, and the dialogue interrupted for a while: "Am not I happy to have such a Son to leave behind me!" And the grimly sympathetic Generals testified assent; endeavoured to talk a little, could at least smoke, and look friendly; till the King gathered strength for continuing his instructions to his successor. All else was as if settled with him; this had still remained to do. This once done (finished, Monday night), why not abdicate altogether; and die disengaged, be it in a day or in a month, since that is now the one work left? Friedrich Wilhelm does so purpose.

His state, now as all along, was fluctuating, uncertain, restless. He was heard murmuring prayers; he would say sometimes, "Pray for me; Betet, betet." And more than once, in deep tone: "Lord, enter not "into judgment with Thy servant, for in Thy sight "shall no man living be justified!" The wild Son of Nature, looking into Life and Death, into Judgment and Eternity, finds that these things are very great. This too is a characteristic trait: In a certain German Hymn (Why fret or murmur, then? the title of it), which they often sang to him, or along with him, as he much loved it, are these words, "Naked I came into the world, and naked shall I go," — "No," said he "always, with vivacity," at this passage; "not quite naked, I shall have my uniform on:" Let us be exact, since we are at it! After which the singing proceeded again. "The late Graf Alexander von Wartenberg," — Captain Wartenberg, whom we know, and whose opportunities, — "was wont to relate this." *

Tuesday, 31st May, "about one in the morning," Cochius was again sent for. He found the King in very pious mood, but in great distress, and afraid he might yet have much pain to suffer. Cochius prayed with him; talked piously. "I can remember nothing," said the King; "I cannot pray, I have forgotten all my prayers." — "Prayer is not in words, but in the thought of the heart," said Cochius; and soothed the heavy-laden man as he could. "Fare you well," said Friedrich Wilhelm, at length; "most likely we shall not meet again in this world." Whereat Cochius burst into tears, and withdrew. About four, the King was again out of bed; wished to see his youngest Boy, who had been ill of measles, but was doing well: "Poor little Ferdinand; adieu then, my little child!" This is the Father of that fine Louis Ferdinand, who was killed at Jena; concerning whom Berlin, in certain emancipated circles of it, still speaks with regret. He, the Louis Ferdinand, had fine qualities; but went far a-roving, into radicalism, into romantic love into champagne; and was cut down on the threshold of Jena, desperately fighting, — perhaps happily for him.

* Büsching (in 1786): Beytrdge, iv. 100.

From little Ferdinand's room Friedrich Wilhelm has himself rolled into Queen Sophie's. "Feekin, Oh my Feekin, thou must rise this day, and help me what thou canst. This day I am going to die; thou wilt be with me this day!" The good Wife rises: I know not that it was the first time she had been so called; but it did prove the last. Friedrich Wilhelm has decided, as the first thing he will do, to abdicate; and all the Official persons and companions of the sick-room, Pöllnitz among them, not long after sunrise, are called to see it done. Pöllnitz, huddling on his clothes, arrived about five: in a corridor he sees the wheeled-chair and poor sick King; steps aside to let him pass: "'It is over (Das ist vollbracht),' said the King, looking up to me "as he passed: he had on his nightcap, and a blue "mantle thrown round him." He was wheeled into his anteroom; there let the company assemble: many of them are already there.

The royal stables are visible from this room: Friedrich Wilhelm orders the horses to be ridden out: you old Fürst of Anhalt-Dessau my oldest friend, you Colonel Hacke faithfulest of Adjutant-Generals, take each of you a horse, the best you can pick out: it is my last gift to you. Dessau, in silence, with dumb-show of thanks, points to a horse, any horse: "You have chosen the very worst," said Friedrich Wilhelm: "take that other, I will warrant him a good one!"

The grim Old Dessauer thanks in silence; speechless grief is on that stern gunpowder face, and he seems even to be struggling with tears. "Nay, nay, my friend," Friedrich Wilhelm said, "this is a debt we have all to pay."

The Official people, Queen, Friedrich, Minister Boden, Minister Podewils, and even Pöllnitz, being now all present, Friedrich Wilhelm makes his Declaration, at considerable length; old General Bredow repeating it aloud,* sentence by sentence, the King's own voice being too weak; so that all may hear: "That he abdicates, gives up wholly, in favour of his good Son Friedrich; that foreign Ambassadors are to be informed; that you are all to be true and loyal to my Son as you were to me" — and what else is needful. To which the judicious Podewils makes answer, "That there must first be a written Deed of this high Transaction executed, which shall be straightway set about; the Deed once executed, signed and sealed, — the high Royal will, in all points, takes effect." Alas, before Podewils has done speaking, the King is like falling into a faint; does faint, and is carried to bed: too unlikely any Deed of Abdication will be needed.

Ups and downs there still were; sore fluctuating labour, as the poor King struggles to his final rest, this morning. He was at the window again, when the Wachtparade (Grenadiers on Guard) turned out; he saw them make their evolutions for the last time. After which new relapse, new fluctuation. It was about eleven o'clock, when Cochiuſ was again ſent for. The King lay ſpeechleſs, ſeemingly ſtill conſcious, in bed; Cochiuſ prays with fervour, in a loud tone, that the dying King may hear and join. "Not ſo loud!" ſays the King, rallying a little. He had remembered that it was the ſeaſon when his ſervants got their new liveries; they had been ordered to appear this day in full new coſtume: "O vanity! O vanity!" ſaid Friedrich Wilhelm, at ſight of the ornamented pluſh. "Pray for me, pray for me; my truſt is in the Saviour!" he often ſaid. His pains, his weakneſs are great; the cordage of a moſt tough heart rending itſelf piece by piece. At one time, he called for a mirror: that is certain; — rugged wild man, ſon of Nature to the laſt. The mirror was brought; what he ſaid at ſight of his face is variously reported: "Not ſo worn out as I thought," is Pöllnitz's account, and the likeliſt; — though perhaps he ſaid ſeveral things, "ugly face," "as good as dead already;" and continued the inſpection for ſome moments.* A grim, ſtrange thing.

* Pöllnitz, ii. 561.

 Pauli, viii. 280.

"Feel my pulse, Piſch," ſaid he, noticing the Surgeon of his Giants: "tell me how long this will laſt." — "Alas, not long," answered Piſch. — "Say not, alas; but how do you (He) know?" — "The pulse is gone!" — "Impossible," ſaid he, lifting his arm: "how could I move my fingers ſo, if the pulse were gone?" Piſch looked mournfully ſteadfaſt. "Herr Jeſu, to thee I live; Herr Jeſu, to thee I die; "in life and in death thou art my gain (Du biſt mein

* Pöllnitz, ii. 564; Wilhelmina, ii. 321.

"Gewinn).” These were the last words Friedrich Wilhelm spoke in this world. He again fell into a faint. Eller gave a signal to the Crown-Prince to take the Queen away. Scarcely were they out of the room, when the faint had deepened into death; and Friedrich Wilhelm, at rest from all his labours, slept with the primeval sons of Thor.

No Baresark of them, nor Odin's self, I think, was a bit of truer human stuff; — I confess his value to me, in these sad times, is rare and great. Considering the usual Histrionic, Papin's-Digester, Truculent-Charlatan and other species of "Kings," alone attainable for the sunk flunkey populations of an Era given up to Mammon and the worship of its own belly, what would not such a population give for a Friedrich Wilhelm, to guide it on the road back from Orcus a little? "Would give," I have written; but alas, it ought to have been "should give." What they "would" give is too mournfully plain to me, in spite of ballotboxes: a steady and tremendous truth from the days of Barabbas downwards and upwards! — Tuesday, 31st May 1740, between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, Friedrich Wilhelm died; age fifty-two, coming 15th August next. Same day, Friedrich his Son was proclaimed at Berlin; quilted heralds, with sound of trumpet and the like, doing what is customary on such occasions.

On Saturday, 4th June, the King's body is laid out in state; all Potsdam at liberty to come and see. He lies there, in his regimentals, in his oaken coffin, 31st May 1740.

on a raised place in the middle of the room; decent mortuary draperies, lamps, garlands, banderols furnishing the room and him: at his feet, on a black-velvet tabouret (stool), are the chivalry emblems, helmet, gauntlets, spurs; and on similar stools, at the right hand and the left, lie his military insignia, hat and sash, sword, guidon, and what else is fit. Around, in silence, sit nine veteran military dignitaries; Buddenbrock, Waldau, Derschan, Einsiedel, and five others whom we omit to name. Silent they sit. A grim earnest sight in the shine of the lamplight, as you pass out of the June sun. Many went, all day; looked once again on the face that was to vanish. Precisely at ten at night, the coffin-lid is screwed down: Twelve Potsdam Captains take the coffin on their shoulders; Four-and-twenty Corporals with wax torches, Four-and-twenty Sergeants with inverted halberts lowered; certain Generals on order, and very many following as volunteers; these perform the actual burial, — carry the body to the Garrison Church, where are clergy waiting, which is but a small step off; see it lodged, oak coffin and all, in a marble coffin in the side vault there, which is known to Tourists.* It is the end of the week, and the actual burial is done, — hastened forward for reasons we can guess.

Filial piety by no means intends to defraud a loved Father of the Spartan ceremonial contemplated as obsequies by him: very far from it. Filial piety will conform to that with rigour; only adding what musical and other splendours are possible, to testify his love still more. And so, almost three weeks hence, on the 23d of the month, with the aid of Dresden Artists, of Latin Cantatas and other pomps (not inexcusable, though somewhat out of keeping), the due Funeral is done, no Corpse but a Wax Effigy present in it; — and in all points, that of the Potsdam Grenadiers not forgotten, there was rigorous conformity to the Instruction left. In all points, even to the extensive funeral dinner, and drinking of the three appointed casks of wine, “the best wine in my cellar.” Adieu, O King.

* Pauli, viii. 281.

The Potsdam Grenadiers fired their three volleys (not “plackering,” as I have reason to believe, but well); got their allowance, dinner liquor and appointed coin of money: it was the last service required of them in this world. That same night they were dissolved, the whole Four Thousand of them, at a stroke; and ceased to exist as Potsdam Grenadiers. Colonels, Captains, all the Officers known to be of merit, were advanced, at least transferred. Of the common men, a minority, of not inhuman height and of worth otherwise, were formed into a new Regiment on the common terms: the stupid splayfooted eight-feet mass were allowed to stalk off whither they pleased, or vegetate on frugal pensions; Irish Kirkman, and a few others neither knock-kneed nor without head, were appointed heyducs, that is, porters to the King’s or other Palaces; and did that duty in what was considered an ornamental manner.

Here are still two things capable of being fished up from the sea of nugatory matter; and meditated on by readers, till the following Books open.

The last breath of Friedrich Wilhelm having fled, Friedrich hurried to a private room; sat there all in tears; looking back through the gulfs of the Past, upon such a Father now rapt away for ever. Sad all, and soft in the moonlight of memory, — the lost Loved One all in the right as we now see, we all in the wrong! — This, it appears, was the Son's fixed opinion. Seven years hence, here is how Friedrich concludes the History of his Father, written with a loyal admiration throughout: "We have left under "silence the domestic chagrins of this great Prince: "readers must have some indulgence for the faults of "the Children, in consideration of the virtues of such a "Father."* All in tears he sits at present, meditating these sad things.

In a little while the Old Dessauer, about to leave for Dessau, ventures in to the Crown-Prince, Crown-Prince no longer; "embraces his knees;" offers, weeping, his condolence, his congratulation; — hopes withal that his sons and he will be continued in their old posts, and that he, the Old Dessauer, "will have the same authority as in the late reign." Friedrich's eyes, at this last clause, flash out tearless, strangely Olympian. "In your posts I have no thought of making "change: in your posts, yes; — and as to authority, I

* Cœuvres, i. 175 (Mém. de Brandebourg; finished about 1747).

"know of none there can be but what resides in the "King that is sovereign!" Which, as it were, struck the breath out of the Old Dessauer; and sent him home with a painful miscellany of feelings, astonishment not wanting among them.

At an after hour, the same night, Friedrich went to Berlin; met by acclamation enough. He slept there, not without tumult of dreams, one may fancy; and on awakening next morning, the first sound he heard, was that of the Regiment Glasenap under his windows, swearing fealty to the new King. He sprang out of bed in a tempest of emotion; bustled distractedly to and fro, wildly weeping: Pöllnitz, who came into the anteroom, found him in this state, "half-dressed, with "dishevelled hair, in tears, and as if beside himself." "These huzzahings only tell me what I have lost!" said the new King. — "He was in great suffering," suggested Pöllnitz; "he is now at rest." "True, he "suffered; but he was here with us: and now —!"*

* Ranke (ii. 46, 47), from certain Fragments, still in manuscript, of Pöllnitz's Memoiren.

INDEX

TO VOLUMES I—V.

- ABEL, D. Otto, cited, iv. 298.
- Académie des Sciences, of Berlin, ii. 91. iii. 56.
- Achard, M., v. 141.
- Acre, Siege of, i. 128.
- Adalbert's, St., attempt to convert Preussen to Christianity, i. 92, 133.
- Adolf of Nassau, Kaiser, i. 225.
- Agamemnon's Sceptre, i. 3.
- Ahlden, Castle of, i. 40. ii. 277, 289. iii. 71. the 'Ahlden Heritage,' iii. 162, 194.
- Ahlden, Die Herzogin von, i. 41, 42.
- Alba, i. 298.
- Alberoni, ii. 185.
- Albert I., Kaiser, harsh and ugly, i. 167, 169; assassinated by his nephew, i. 170.
- Albert II., Kaiser, i. 226, 273.
- Albert Achilles, Kurfürst, i. 254, 264; how he managed the Bishop of Bamberg, i. 257.
- Albert Alcibiades of Baireuth, i. 272; a kind of 'Failure of a Fritz,' i. 300, 307, 327.
- Albert Archbishop of Maintz, i. 261; memorable Sale of Indulgences, i. 262; at the Diet of Augsburg, i. 282.
- Albert Friedrich, Second Duke of Preussen, ii. 1; his marriage, ii. 4; overclouding of mind, ii. 6; death, 38.
- Albert, Hochmeister, i. 287; difficulties about homage to Poland, i. 288; getting deep into Protestantism, i. 293; Hereditary Duke of Preussen, i. 295, 329; his Second Wife; death, ii. 1.
- Albert the Bear, the great Markgraf of Brandenburg, i. 106; origin of name, i. 112; descendants, 180.
- Alderfeld, cited, ii. 172 n.
- Alexius, Czarowitz, iv. 216.
- Algarotti, Signor, v. 248.
- Alphonso King of Castile and sham Kaiser, i. 150, 154.
- Altenburg, iv. 20.
- Amber, i. 91.
- Amelia, Princess, of England, ii. 276; v. 211.
- Amelia, Princess, of Prussia, ii. 290.
- America, ii. 145; Salzburg Emigrants to, iv. 277.

- Anhalt-Zerbst, i. 107, 181; iii. 292.
- Anne of Cleves, ii. 4.
- Anne of Courland, afterwards Czarina, iii. 115, 120 n., 292; iv. 197; v. 27, 72, 260.
- Anspach, i. 148, 264; iv. 30. See Culmbach, Frederika Louisa.
- Antoinette Amelia, of Brunswick, iv. 219.
- Anton Ulrich, of Brunswick, ii. 299; iv. 215, 219; his Great-grandson, iv. 220; v. 220, 263.
- Antwerp, i. 85, 87.
- Apes, Dead-Sea, i. 243.
- Applewomen knitting at their Stalls, ii. 137, 150.
- Aristocracies, mutinous, tamed-down, i. 229; ii. 3, 9. See Pride of place.
- Army, value of a good, ii. 141; iii. 3.
- Arouet, M., Senior, v. 148. See Voltaire.
- Arundel, Earl of, cited, ii. 54 n.
- Ascanier Markgraves, i. 158, 180; resuscitated, i. 187, 199.
- Aschersleben, i. 106.
- Attorneys, a fat affair for the, ii. 19, 24, 36, 37.
- Augsburg, Diet of, i. 279; iv. 23, 40.
- August Ferdinand, ii. 293; v. 278.
- August the Strong, i. 70; ii. 159, 234, 241; iii. 284; objects to the Kaiser's Pragmatic Sanction, ii. 307; quarrel with Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 89; invites him and Friedrich to Dresden, iii. 90, 97; magnificent hospitalities and unspeakable pollutions, iii. 99; his return visit, iii. 108; rumour of a projected marriage with Wilhelmina, iii. 118; Camp of Radewitz, iii. 285; King of Playhouse managers, iii. 299; attained the maximum in several things, iii. 304; meditates partition of Poland, v. 1; last interview with Grumkow, v. 3; death and absolution, v. 20.
- August III. of Poland, v. 27, 31, 105, 110.
- August Wilhelm, ii. 293.
- Austerlitz, i. 11.
- Australia, ii. 145.
- Austria, i. 85, 87; Kaisers of, still riding on the shadow of a saddle, i. 168; the 'Austrian lip,' i. 259, 312; rejection of Protestantism, i. 312; an Austrian swindle, ii. 84; iv. 306.
- Ayscough, cited, iii. 148 n.
- BACON, Lord, ii. 34.
- Baillet, cited, i. 94 n.
- Baireuth, i. 147, 264; iv. 269, 270. See Culmbach, Albert .Alcibiades, Friedrich of.
- Balaclava, iv. 277.
- Balance of Power, ii. 323, 324, 328.
- Ballenstädt, i. 106, 113.
- Baltimore, Lord, v. 250.
- Bamberg, i. 103; iv. 269.
- Barbarossa, Kaiser, i. 104, 108, 114, 119; the greatest of all

- the Kaisers, i. 116; German tradition about him, i. 119; iv. 257; changed times, i. 196; iv. 56, 262.
- Bar, Graf von, iii. 162.
- Barbier, cited, i. 240 n.; ii. 289 n.
- Bartholomew, St., night of, i. 313.
- Basel, i. 153.
- Baty Khan, iv. 287.
- Bavaria, Kurfürst of, ii. 307; iv. 71.
- Bayle, i. 54; ii. 253.
- Beausobre, M. de, i. 55; v. 139.
- Becket, Thomas à, i. 113.
- Beelzebub not God, i. 14; worshipers of, i. 238; August's Saxon Court of, iii. 103, 137.
- Belgard, v. 246.
- Belleisle, General, v. 28, 36. 104.
- Benda, the Brothers, v. 131.
- Beneckendorf, cited, iii. 67 n.
- Bentenrieder, the kidnapped Ambassador, iii. 15, 143.
- Bentham, cited, i. 88 n.
- Berenhorst, cited, v. 225 n.
- Bergerie, M. de la, i. 50.
- Berlin, early condition of, i. 159; Palace at, i. 244; Royal Academy of, ii. 91; iii. 56; St. Peter's Church burnt down, iii. 281; Friedrich Wilhelm's building operations, iv. 190.
- Berneck, v. 58.
- Bernhard of Weimar, iv. 35.
- Berwick, Maréchal Duc de, v. 42; at Philipsburg, v. 49, 53.
- Besserer, v. 111.
- Beutelsbachers, the, v. 46.
- Bible, Hebrew, i. 26.
- Bielfeld, v. 215, 222, 249, 254.
- Bielfeld, cited, iii. 10 n.
- Bieren of Courland, iv. 198.
- Blenheim, Battle of, ii. 123; iv. 35.
- Blumenthal, cited, v. 103 n.
- Boleslaus, Duke of Poland, i. 96.
- Bolingbroke, v. 154, 158.
- Bollandus, cited, i. 94 n.
- Boniface VIII., Pope, i. 167.
- Bonneville, M. de, i. 240.
- Borck, General, iii. 171, 179, 214, 221, 225; iv. 7, 133.
- Bosworth, i. 258.
- Boyer, cited, iii. 29 n.
- Brandenburg, early condition of, i. 79, 88; early Markgraves, i. 98, 100; Ascanier Markgraves, i. 137, 158, 180; how Brandenburg and the Hohenzollern Family came together, i. 166, 182; Bavarian Kurfürsts, i. 182, 186; a resuscitated Ascanier, i. 187, 199; Luxemburg Kurfürsts, i. 203; Brandenburg in Pawn, i. 212; sold to Friedrich of Hohenzollern, i. 222; Noble refractory Robberlords, i. 229; Heavy Peg, i. 231; beginning of the Prussian Nation, i. 234; Brandenburg under the Hohenzollerns, i. 236; lucky enough to adopt the Reformation, i. 309; Nadir-point of the Brandenburg Hohenzollerns, ii. 51; condition during the Thirty-Years War, ii. 54;

- again a flourishing country,
ii. 59; the Swedes driven out,
ii. 73.
- Brender, Herr, v. 86.
- Broglio, Maréchal, v. 41.
- Bromley's Collection of Royal
Letters, i. 264 n.
- Brühl, Count, iii. 112.
- Brunswick. See Anton Ulrich, Christian of.
- Brunswick-Bevern, Ferdinand
Albert Duke of, iv. 218; v.
47, 53, 108. See Elizabeth
Christina, Karl Duke of.
- Buch, Johann von, i. 162.
- Buchholz, iv. 271.
- Buchholz, cited, ii. 136 n., 233 n.
- Buddäus, cited, i. 317 n.
- Buddenbrock, General, iv. 17,
36, 121, 254, 282, 286; v. 133.
- Bülow, Mamsell, iii. 216, 231;
iv. 76, 95.
- Bünau, cited, i. 118 n.
- Burns, Robert, ii. 212.
- Büsching, cited, i. 118 n.; ii.
13 n., 75 n.; iv. 254 n.
- Büsching's crude authenticity,
iv. 251, 254 n.
- Byng, Admiral, ii. 243, 314.
- CALVIN, ii. 99, 253; iv. 97.
- Camas, Colonel, ii. 225.
- Cambrai, Congress of, ii. 245, 315.
- Campbell, cited, ii. 243 n.
- Candidatus Theologiæ, a, and the King of Prussia, ii. 151.
- Carlos II. of Spain, i. 72.
- Carlos III. of Spain, iv. 155; v.
38; King of the Two Sicilies,
v. 40, 110.
- Caroline, Queen, i. 268; ii. 275;
iii. 160, 220, 240, 265; a beautiful Brandenburg-Anspach Princess, ii. 298; refuses the Catholic Kaiser, ii.
298; iv. 214; Friedrich's
Letters to, iii. 125, 217; visit to her foolish Son, v. 196; modest stoicism and death,
v. 197.
- Carr, cited, i. 38 n.
- Carteret, Lord, ii. 184.
- Carzig, iv. 158, 170.
- Casano, Bridge of, ii. 89, 124.
- Casimir IV., King of Poland, i.
273. See Poland.
- Casimir. See Culmbach.
- Catechisms, Theological, vi.
253.
- Catharine II. of Russia, i. 107,
181; iii. 292.
- Catherine, Wife of Czar Peter,
ii. 189; at Berlin, ii. 190, 193, 325.
- Caumartin, M., v. 149.
- Cellamare, Ambassador, ii. 186.
- Charlemagne, i. 82.
- Charles XII. of Sweden, i. 216;
v. 24; arrives suddenly at Stralsund, ii. 157; his surprising career, ii. 158, 170, 185; desperate defence of Stralsund, ii. 168; assassinated at Frederickshall, ii.
171; last of the Swedish
Kings, ii. 172.
- Charlottenburg, i. 53, 62;
George I. at, ii. 284.
- Charlotte, Old Queen, iii. 194;
iv. 273; v. 191; her Father,
v. 188.
- Charlotte. See Philippina.

- Chasot, Lieutenant, v. 86, 133.
 Châtelet, Madame du, v. 163, 179.
 Chesterfield, Lord, iii. 239, 258; iv. 82.
 Chétardie, Marquis de la, v. 94, 101.
 Chivalry Orders, era of, i. 130.
 Chlumetz, iv. 290.
 Chodowiecki, ii. 182; iv. 19.
 Christian Ernst of Baireuth, iv. 196.
 Christian Ernst of Saalfeld-Coburg, iv. 22.
 Christian of Anhalt, ii. 26, 45.
 Christian of Brunswick, ii. 44, 46.
 Christian II. of Denmark, a rash, unwise, explosive man, i. 315, 320.
 Christian IV. of Denmark, ii. 46, 60.
 Christian Wilhelm Archbishop of Magdeburg, ii. 47, 56.
 Cimburgis, i. 259.
 Clamei, Meadow of, iii. 169, 173.
 Clement August. See Köln.
 Clement, the Hungarian Swindler, ii. 227, 244.
 Cleveland, Duchess of, i. 194.
 Cleve, Wilhelm Duke of, ii. 4, 13; his Heritage Settlement, ii. 14; death; his Son's tragic career, ii. 15.
 Cleve, Duchy of, ii. 11; a naturally opulent Country, ii. 13; disputed Heritage, ii. 16, 22, 36, 64; iii. 30; iv. 52; occupied by Spanish and Dutch troops, ii. 32, 37; Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, ii. 231, 322; iii. 29, 161; iv. 52, 300; v. 204.
 Clubs, origin of the term, i. 130.
 Coblenz, iv. 69.
 Cochius, v. 273, 278.
 Cöln on the Spree, i. 160.
 Cologne. See Köln.
 Conrad of Hohenzollern, i. 114; becomes Burggraf of Nürnberg, i. 119; iv. 28.
 Conrad of Thuringen, i. 140; 'whip my Abbot?' i. 141; plunders Fritzlar; repentance and Teutsch-Ritter vows, i. 143.
 Conradin, Boy, last of the Hohenstauffens, i. 150, 152.
 Cookery, spiritual, i. 22.
 Cöpenick, iv. 105.
 Councils, Church, i. 57; Council of Constance, i. 219, 224.
 Courage, iv. 222.
 Courland, Duke of, iv. 197. See Anne of.
 Coxe, cited, ii. 287 n.; iv. 155 n.
 Cramer, cited, iii. 117 n.
 Craven, Lady, i. 268; iii. 199.
 Crecy, Battle of, i. 198.
 Creutz the Finance-Minister, ii. 174; iv. 239.
 Crochet, iv. 281.
 Cromwell, what a German, might have done, i. 307; Cromwell and his Puritans, i. 310; ii. 42, 73.
 Crossen, v. 2.
 Croze, La, v. 140.
 Culmbach, Margraf of, i. 264; Friedrich founder of the Elder Line, i. 269; Casimir, a severe, rather truculent Herr, i. 271; Margraf George,

- and his connection with the King of Hungary, i. 272; gets the Duchy of Jägersdorf, i. 275; noble conduct in the Reformation, i. 278; at the Diet of Augsburg, i. 279; few truer specimens of the Honest Man, i. 283; his Son and Brothers, i. 284; troubles with Albert Alcibiades, i. 300; Diagram of the Elder and Younger Culmbach Lines, ii. 102, 103. See Friedrich George of.
- Cüstrin, i. 337; ii. 50, 53; Friedrich a prisoner at, iv. 91, 102; Katte's execution, iv. 110; Friedrich's life at, iv. 157.
- DANKELMANN, i. 66.
- Dante, i. 152, 169, 173.
- Dantzic, Siege of, v. 32, 56, 108.
- Darlington, Countess of, ii. 280; iii. 87; iv. 106.
- Darmstadt. See Ernst Ludwig.
- David's Psalms, v. 232.
- Degenfeld, iii. 277; v. 204.
- Denmark. See Christian II., IV. of, Friedrich IV. of.
- Derschau, iii. 49; iv. 162, 192; v. 114, 272.
- Deschamps, M., v. 135
- Desfontaines, v. 162.
- Dessau, ii. 122. See Leopold of.
- Dettingen, iv. 67.
- Dickens, Captain Guy, iii. 264, 297; iv. 1, 14, 88, 99, 138, 204.
- Dietzman, the Thuringian Landgraf, i. 169.
- Diplomatists, Devil-, iii. 145; an undiplomatic reflexion, iii. 175; iv. 14; Smelfungus on Modern Diplomacy, iii. 305; heavy-footed diplomacy, v. 208.
- Ditmarsch-Stade Markgraves, i. 100.
- Dobryn, Knights of, i. 139.
- Dockum, General, iv. 145, 146.
- Dohm, cited, ii. 137 n.
- Dohna, ii. 165.
- Donauwörth under ban, ii. 22.
- Dönhof, iv. 121, 147.
- Dorothee, Electress, i. 65, 67; ii. 79, 83.
- Double-Marriage, the famous, of Prussia and England, ii. 273, 294; Treaty cannot be signed, ii. 328; grown plainly hopeless, iii. 69; yet far from dead, iii. 123; reëmerges in an official shape, iii. 129; drawing to an end, iii. 211; England favourable, iii. 238, 263; effulgent flaming-point, iii. 244; as good as extinct, iii. 275; ended, iv. 13; revived, but to no purpose, iv. 306.
- Dresden, Friedrich's Visit to, iii. 98.
- Drummer, the Little, ii. 179.
- Drusus Germanicus, i. 80.
- Dryasdust, the Prussian, i. 16; iii. 251, 270; doing History, i. 26, 135, 237; ii. 107.
- Dubois, Cardinal, ii. 288; ugliest of created souls, ii. 317; v. 151.
- Dubourgay, iii. 87, 110, 173, 213, 231; Correspondence about the Double-Marriage, iii. 130, 179, 206; proves

- Grumkow's treachery, iii. 218; arrival of Hotham, iii. 240; conversation with the King of Prussia, iii. 241.
 Duhan de Jandun, ii. 178, 199, 248, 254; iv. 96.
 Dumb, busy generations, ii. 118, 126, 143.
 Dumoulin, Colonel, iv. 75, 81.
 Düsseldorf, ii. 17; iv. 73; a Dinner-scene at, ii. 28.
 Dutch Revolt, the world-famous, ii. 20, 32, 36; Dutch Traders and Karl VI., ii. 309.
 Duvernet, cited, v. 153 n.
 ECONOMICS, National, ii. 133, 146. See Thrift.
 Editor's interest in Friedrich, i. 19, 21.
 Education, ii. 201; Friedrich Wilhelm's notion of, ii. 204, 247, 258, 268; iii. 2; influences of Nature, ii. 222; teaching Religion, ii. 253
 Mother-wit squandered away for long-eared erudition, iii. 52.
 Edward I. of England, i. 164.
 Edward II., i. 178.
 Edward III., i. 186.
 Ehrenbreitstein, iv. 69.
 Eichsted, Franz von, i. 250.
 Eighteenth Century, the fraudulent, and its suicidal end, i. 12.
 Electors. See Kurfürsts.
 Elizabeth Christina, Empress, ii. 299; iv. 315, 292.
 Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern, iv. 211, 220; chosen for Friedrich, iv. 223; what he thought of her, iv. 228, 233, 234, 244, 302; v. 9; her Betrothal, iv. 242; Wedding, v. 13; grand entrance into Berlin; Wilhelmina's Portrait of her, v. 15, 16; her honest, guileless heart, v. 17; happy days at Reinsberg, v. 123, 128, 257.
 Elizabeth Farnese, Queen of Spain, ii. 244; her quarrel with Karl VI., ii. 302, 312, 318; iii. 139; the little Spanish Infanta sent back from France, ii. 319; Siege of Gibraltar, iii. 75, 123 n.; league with France, v. 38; West-Indian procedures, v. 228.
 Elizabeth, Queen, of England, i. 298.
 Elizabeth of Russia, iii. 120.
 Elizabeth, Saint, i. 140, 144.
 Elizabeth, Wife of Joachim I., i. 315; Protestantism, and escape to Lichtenberg, i. 319; visits Luther, i. 320.
 Eller, Dr., v. 274.
 Ely Cathedral, i. 88.
 Emanuel, Prince of Portugal, v. 27.
 Endorf, Johann von, i. 185.
 English Volunteers at the Siege of Jülich, ii. 26; English treatment of the great Marlborough, ii. 92, 296; how England got drilled into human order, ii. 144; England and George I., ii. 277; iii. 84; first triumph of the 'Constitutional Principle,' ii. 281; iii. 86; English

- self-complacence, ii. 286;
 Parliaments, iii. 42, 45, 261;
 an English Change of Ministry, iii. 239; English influence on Voltaire, v. 154;
 English thick-skin penetrated, v. 229, 262.
 Epic Poems, i. 25.
 Erasmus Reinhold, i. 299.
 Erfurt, i. 141.
 Erlangen, i. 126; iv. 269.
 Erman, cited, i. 43 n., 62 n.; ii. 69 n.
 Ernst August. See Bishop of Osnabrück.
 Ernst, Elector, i. 38, 70, 110.
 Ernst Ludwig of Darmstadt, iv. 65; addicted to 'ivory-turning,' iv. 65.
 Espagnac, cited, iii. 117 n.
 Ettlingen, Lines of, v. 52.
 Eugene, i. 35; ii. 88, 123; iv. 307, 312; a bright little soul, growing very old and snuffy, ii. 307; his crowning feat, iv. 63 n.; receives Friedrich Wilhelm, iv. 291, 295; his Rhine Campaign, v. 45, 55, 75, 88.
 Evangelical Union, ii. 21, 26, 41, 46; iv. 255.
 Eversmann, iv. 133.
 FABRICE, iii. 83, 88; v. 158.
 Fact, inexorable nature of, i. 21; ii. 263; iv. 103; the one asbestos which survives all fire, i. 23; iv. 312. See Reality.
 Falsehood, living under, i. 310.
 Fassmann, iii. 6, 63, 113 n., 135, 153, 198, 281; iv. 167, 266.
 Fassmann, cited, ii. 153 n.; iii. 113 n.
 Fawkener, Sir Edward, v. 156.
 Feder, cited, iii. 164 n.
 Fehrbellin, Battle of, ii. 71.
 Ferdinand II., Kaiser, ii. 24 n., 41; high-handed proceedings against the Protestants, ii. 44; all Europe to be converted to Orthodoxy, ii. 48; his Restitution-Edict, ii. 52; seizes Jägerndorf, ii. 58.
 Ferdinand III., Kaiser, ii. 24 n.
 Ferdinand King of the Romans, i. 332.
 Ferdinand, Prince, iv. 221; v. 220.
 Fiction akin to lying, i. 26; ii. 264.
 Finkenstein, Count Fink von, ii. 178, 200; iii. 214, 221; his Wife, iv. 77.
 Firmian, Count, and the Salzburg Protestants, iv. 258.
 Fischer, cited, i. 148 n.
 Fischhausen, iv. 145.
 Flemming, Fieldmarshal, iii. 96, 98.
 Fleury, Cardinal, ii. 321, 324; iii. 78, 139, 151; iv. 153, 231; v. 28, 36, 110.
 Formey, v. 135, 140.
 Formey, cited, v. 139 n.
 Förster, cited, i. 30 n.; ii. 323 n.; iii. 5 n., 6 n.; v. 113 n.
 Förster, v. 113 n.
 Fos, Mamsell, of Dessau, ii. 120.
 Fouqué, Captain, iv. 104; v. 179.
 Franke, Archidiaconus, iv. 271.
 Franke, August Hermann,

- founder of the 'Pietists,' iii. 93.
- Frankfurt, iv. 67.
- Franz Josias of Coburg, iv. 24.
- Frederick, Prince, of England, ii. 275, 328; v. 70; intended visit to Berlin, iii. 109; arrival in England, iii. 152; letters from, iii. 246; Queen of Prussia's opinion of, iv. 138; strange treatment of his young Wife, v. 197.
- Frederika Louisa of Prussia, ii. 292; demanded in marriage, iii. 154; married to the Margraf of Anspach, iii. 197; visited by her Father and Brother, iv. 30; visits Wilhelmina, iv. 303, 304.
- Frederickshall, ii. 171.
- Fredersdorf, M., v. 256.
- Freemasonry, v. 214.
- French Revolution, i. 9; a grand universal Suicide of a despicable Century, i. 13; what is to follow it, i. 22; French Protestantism, i. 313; French Cooks, ii. 149; Fashions, ii. 151; French Protestants of Erlangen, iv. 269; War with Karl VI., v. 86; Camp at Philipsburg, v. 85.
- Fréron, v. 162.
- Freytag, Baron, and his Austrian Swindling, ii. 85.
- Friedrich III., Burggraf of Nürnberg, i. 148; troubles with the Nürnbergers, i. 149; Burggraviate made hereditary, i. 150; Kaiser Rudolf's friend and helper, i. 153, 156.
- Friedrich IV., i. 172, 183; aids Kaiser Ludwig, i. 175.
- Friedrich V., i. 205; his Daughter, i. 209.
- Friedrich VI., i. 182, 205, 207, 211; helps Sigismund, i. 218; buys Brandenburg, i. 221; Noble Robber-lords brought to reason, i. 230; Heavy Peg, i. 231; taproot of the Prussian Nation, i. 234.
- Friedrich II., Kaiser, i. 141, 144; Friedrich III., ii. 18.
- Friedrich I., King, and his Grandchildren, i. 31; rather 'an expensive Herr,' i. 60; the first King of Prussia, i. 68; his back injured in infancy, i. 64; ii. 89; quarrels with his Stepmother, i. 65; how he came by his 'Kingship,' i. 69; his sublime Coronation, i. 73; his Father's Death, ii. 81; how Austria swindled him out of Schwiebus, ii. 84; his true Hohenzollern character, ii. 88; closing days, ii. 92; his third marriage, ii. 96; death, ii. 98, 128.
- Friedrich II., sauntering on the terraces of Sans Souci, i. 3; physiognomic traits, i. 4; human interest in what he did, i. 6; the Last of the Kings, i. 9, 24; English prepossessions about him, i. 17; by no means a perfect demigod, yet a true man and King, i. 20, 32. Joy at his birth, i. 29; his christening, i. 32; his ancestors, i. 235;

ii. 51, 81. Not a skilful gambler and worshiper of Beelzebub, i. 238; recovery of Jägerndorf, ii. 58; interest in Jülich, ii. 65; opening the Great Kurfürst's coffin, ii. 81. Infancy, ii. 94, 95, 108; French educational element, ii. 109; iii. 79; one of the prettiest vividest little boys, ii. 110; his affectionate disposition, ii. 112, 113, 210, 225, 249; bad spelling, ii. 115, 248, 266; German element, ii. 115, 117; his Father's Spartan discipline, ii. 127, 267; iii. 1, 79; one of his first impressions of war, ii. 457; his Tutors, ii. 178, 199, 247; Portraits of him, ii. 179; the commonly-received Portrait, ii. 182; his education, ii. 201, 247, 263; iii. 78; his Father's notions about it, ii. 203; miniature Soldiering, ii. 206; his Cousins, ii. 223; love for his Sister Wilhelmina, ii. 225; at the Roucoules Soiree, ii. 225; troubles preparing from afar, ii. 244, 330; his contraband Latin lessons, ii. 250; French fashions; his bright locks to be ruthlessly shorn away, ii. 251, 252; his Theological drill-sergeants, ii. 253; divulsion, fearfully widening, between Father and Son, ii. 258; iii. 126; George I. pleased with him, ii. 285; goes into the Potsdam Guards, iii. 1; surrounded by intrigues and treachery,

iii. 17; unwillingly at the Tobacco-Parliament, iii. 48, 79; life heavy at Potsdam, iii. 78; his Books, iii. 79; visit to King August at Dresden, iii. 98; dissolute seductions, iii. 100, 112; poor Fritz fallen into the wake of Beelzebub, iii. 104, 177; miserable health, iii. 106, 112; his soul tragically dimmed for the remainder of life, iii. 107; pleased with Maréchal de Saxe, iii. 116; writes to Queen Caroline, unknown to his Father, iii. 125, 217; letter to his Father, and angry reply, iii. 127; his Father's ill-treatment, iii. 131, 132, 144, 156, 175; thoughts of flight, iii. 180, 207, 230, 236; his regiment on the march, iii. 187; his Father surprises him at unlawful amusements, iii. 261; publicly beaten by his Father, iii. 207, 295; iv. 14; makes a companion of Katte, iii. 209; iv. 11; his debts, iii. 230; v. 18; off to Dresden, iii. 237; Father will not agree to his marriage, iii. 248; Hotham's testimony of him, iii. 265; letter to Hotham, iii. 278; at King August's Camp of Radewitz, iii. 285, 289, 294, 300; attempted flight, iii. 297; rumour of marriage with Maria Theresa, iii. 298; England will not sanction flight, iv. 2; letter to Hotham, iv. 10; will fly, in spite of all, iv. 11, 15, 31; Journey to the Reich, iv. 16; arrangements for flight, iv. 33, 48, 56; more ill-usage, iv. 34, 38; flight prevented, iv. 35; paternal taunts, iv. 66; a detected prisoner, iv. 67, 70; chastised like a dog, iv. 68; confesses nothing, and narrowly escapes his Father's sword, iv. 80; an arrested Deserter, iv. 80, 84; a prisoner at Mittenwalde; interrogated and threatened by Grumkow, iv. 90; rigorous confinement at Cüstrin, iv. 91, 102; his notion of Predestination, iv. 97, 165; to be tried by Court-Martial, iv. 101; a lucid human judgment in him, iv. 103; sees poor Katte led to execution, iv. 110; crushed-down by sorrow and despair, iv. 115; Chaplain Müller's favourable testimony, iv. 117, 123; condemned to death, iv. 121; to repent, and not perish, iv. 122; takes an Oath of repentance and prostrate submission, iv. 123, 125; letter to his Father; begins gradually a new career, iv. 126; corresponds with Grumkow, iv. 128, 224, 233, 234, 237, 280; among the Domain Sciences at Cüstrin, iv. 156, 157; efforts to regain favour, iv. 160; polite cloak-of-darkness, iv. 161; visited by his Father, iv. 162; loyalty to fact, iv. 167; his life at

Cüstrin, as reported by Schulenburg, iv. 172; the beautiful Madam de Wreech, iv. 174, 180; glimpses of Friedrich's habits, iv. 183, 189; returns to Berlin at his Sister's Wedding, iv. 201; a much-changed Crown-Prince, iv. 202; solitude of soul, iv. 204; Colonel of the Goltz Regiment, iv. 207, 244, 245; whom shall he marry? iv. 211; all romance too sorrowfully swept out of him, iv. 212; what he thought of his destined Wife, iv. 223, 233, 234, 241, 244, 302; v. 10; continued love for Wilhelmina, iv. 231, 241, 243; v. 14, 59; his Betrothal, iv. 241; Life at Ruppín, iv. 245; anxiety to learn what seemed worth learning; military studies, iv. 247, 248; love for his rugged Father, iv. 249; v. 242, 285; spirit of frolic, iv. 250; v. 81; letter to Captain Hacke, iv. 282; to Seckendorf, iv. 283; what he thought of the Kaiser, iv. 301; his Marriage, v. 8; back to Ruppín, v. 17; at Philipsburg; his first experience of arms, v. 44, 67; interest in the war, v. 50, 57; a difficult meeting with Wilhelmina, v. 58; what he thought of the Rhine Campaign, v. 77; news of his Father's illness, v. 83, 89; visits the French Camp, v. 85; visits Wilhelmina at Bai-

- reuth, and talks of his future plans, v. 90; in his Father's sick-room, v. 94; sent to Preussen, v. 103, 105; his Father's growing satisfaction with him, v. 106, 211; his Apprenticeship completed, v. 117; life at Reinsberg, an actual snatch of something like the Idyllic, v. 121, 179, 230, 248, 254; love of Music, v. 131; choice of associates, v. 138; religious doubts, v. 141; literary correspondence, v. 143; writes to Voltaire, v. 145; ardent admiration, v. 167, 170, 234; their correspondence, v. 168, 212; correspondence with Suhm, v. 180; with Manteufel, v. 182; Dr. Zimmermann's puddle of calumnies, v. 183; a visit to the Prince of Mirow, v. 184; return visits, v. 189; quality of his Letters to his Father, v. 194; visits Loo with his Father, v. 210; his Anti-Macchiavel, v. 212, 233; becomes a Freemason, v. 214, 220; his literary achievements, v. 230; journey to Preussen with his Father, v. 240; visit of Lord Baltimore and others, v. 248; his poor Father's last illness, v. 268, 274; long private dialogues with him, v. 277; his Father's death, v. 282, 284; Friedrich is King, v. 285.
- Friedrich's Letters: — to Duhan, ii. 249; to his Father, iii. 127; iv. 126, 170; v. 67, 105, 185, 189, 193, 251; his Mother, iii. 207; his Sister, iv. 241, 243; v. 14, 59, 63, 66; to Hotham, iii. 278, 280; iv. 10; Grumkow, iv. 228, 233, 234, 280; Hacke, iv. 282; Seckendorf, iv. 283; Markgraf Heinrich, v. 50; Camas, v. 77; Gröben, v. 79; Karl of Brunswick, v. 109; Voltaire, v. 171, 213, 241; quality of, iv. 161; v. 142, 143, 168, 194.
- Friedrich King of Bohemia, Winterkönig, i. 216; ii. 34, 36, 39; ex-King, ii. 40, 43.
- Friedrich II., Kurfürst, recovers Neumark from the Teutsch Ritters, i. 244, 249; his Pomeranian war, i. 244, 249.
- Friedrich of Baireuth, iii. 225; iv. 27, 130; arrives at Berlin, iv. 136; introduced to Wilhelmina, iv. 138; an honourable and eligible young Prince, iv. 138; betrothal, iv. 139; a narrow escape, iv. 190; marries Wilhelmina, iv. 195; full of honest sunshine towards her, v. 9, 60; at the Rhine Campaign, v. 82.
- Friedrich IV. of Denmark, ii. 159.
- Friedrich of Meissen, Hochmeister, i. 288, 290.
- Friedrich the Fair, Duke of Austria, i. 176.
- Friedrichsfelde, iv. 158. See Carzig.
- Friedrich Wilhelm, Cousin of Friedrich, ii. 223, 224 n.; iii. 121; v. 51, 82, 88.

Friedrich Wilhelm, Eleventh or Great Kurfürst, i. 63, 65, 67; ii. 59; his wariness and dexterity, ii. 61; gets Hinder-Pommern, ii. 63; marches into Jülich, ii. 64; his Polish-Swedish War, ii. 65; essentially an industrial man, ii. 69; character and portrait, ii. 70; Battle of Fehrbellin, ii. 71; beats the Swedes out of Preussen, ii. 74; conquers Swedish Pommern, but cannot keep it, ii. 76; his true Wife, Louisa of Nassau-Orange, ii. 74, 77; his second Wife, Dorothea, ii. 79; mutinies quenched out, ii. 80; death, ii. 81; how Austria settled his Silesian claims, ii. 84.

Friedrich Wilhelm, King; as Crown-Prince, i. 34, 46; taken to Hanover in childhood, i. 38; a rough unruly boy from the first, i. 43, 49, 73; ii. 128; an abrupt peremptory young King, ii. 117; his Spartan habits, ii. 127; his Father's death, ii. 128; the new King's house swept clear of mendacity and idle hypocrisy, ii. 130; his strange wild ways, ii. 132; love of justice, ii. 134; iii. 39; the first years of his laborious reign, ii. 135; a 'man of genius,' fated to work in National Husbandry, ii. 139, 165; iii. 3, 10, 17; iv. 312; his tall Potsdam Regiment, ii. 141, 197; iii. 3; iv. 250;

v. 284; the great Drill-sergeant of the Preussen Nation, ii. 143; his faculty of minding his own business, ii. 146, 240; iii. 306; Portraits of him, ii. 146; iii. 105; iv. 274; personal habits, ii. 148; no love for the French or their fashions, ii. 151; Brobdignagian waggeries, ii. 152; iii. 53; an original North-German Spartan, ii. 153, 220; charge of avarice, ii. 155; iii. 132; his siege of Stralsund, ii. 157, 166; regard for Charles XII., ii. 164, 170; an original farewell Letter of Instructions, ii. 165; makes his Will in favour of the Queen, ii. 165, 227; iii. 18; returns victorious, ii. 172, 183; visited by Czar Peter, ii. 185; Tutors selected for Fritz, ii. 199; his notions about education, ii. 203; fond of hunting, ii. 210; iii. 134; habits at Wusterhausen, ii. 218; his Tobacco-Parliament, ii. 221; iii. 39 (see Tobacco-Parliament); alarming attack of 'nephritic cholic,' ii. 227; interest in Cleve-Jülich, the Pfalz-Neuburg Heritage, ii. 231, 323; iii. 29; iv. 52; v. 204; interferes for the Heidelberg Protestants, ii. 232; a King who stayed well at home, ii. 240; iii. 306; loses favour with the Kaiser, ii. 241; disappointed with his son Fritz, ii. 253; assists at the birth of

Princess Amelia, ii. 290; list of his Ten Children, ii. 292; sings Treaty of Hanover, ii. 322; gets annoyed with the Double-Marriage Treaty, ii. 329; iii. 48 (see Double-Marriage); his recruiting difficulties, and predatory encroachments, iii. 9, 91; George I. fires-up, iii. 16; surrounded by intrigues, iii. 17; snared for the Kaiser by Grumkow and Seckendorf, iii. 23 (see Grumkow); Treaty of Wusterhausen, iii. 29, 68; 'possessed' as by two devils, iii. 35, 68, 145, 176, 220; iv. 14; horse-play with Gundling, iii. 53; his irreverence for the Sciences and Fine Arts, iii. 56; summary treatment of Wolf, iii. 57; how Queen Sophie might have managed him, iii. 70; his sorrow at the death of George I., iii. 87; unsuspected tears in the rugged man, iii. 88; hypochondriacal fits, iii. 89; talks of abdicating, iii. 93; visits King August at Dresden, iii. 98, 235; dissolute entertainments, iii. 100; singular mutual liking of the two, iii. 105; Friedrich Wilhelm receives a return-visit at Berlin, iii. 108; increased dislike for his Son, iii. 126, 200; contemptuous Letter to him, iii. 128; a grand slaughter of wild swine, and what his Majesty did with the park, iii. 134; a bad attack of the gout, iii. 135, 154; ill-treatment of his family, iii. 145, 154, 175, 200, 206; iv. 35; quarrels with George II., iii. 158, 170; troubles of Mecklenburg, &c., iii. 168; resolves to challenge George II. to single combat, iii. 178; imminency of War between them, iii. 181, 186; arbitration, iii. 189; publicly canes the Crown-Prince, iii. 207, 295; iv. 14; will end the Double-Marriage speculation, iii. 211; Wilhelmina to have Friedrich of Baireuth, iii. 225; a conversation with Dubourgay, iii. 241; jealous of the Crown-Prince, iii. 242, 248; joyful reception of Hotham, iii. 244; will not consent to Friedrich's marriage, iii. 250; looks sour on Hotham, iii. 266; apprised of Grumkow's treachery, but refuses to believe it, iii. 272, 275; will agree to Single Marriage, not Double, iii. 274; King August's Camp of Radewitz, iii. 285; extraordinary conduct to Hotham, iv. 1; passionate vexation with himself and others, iv. 13; Journey to the Reich, iv. 16; no taste for salutations in the market-place, iv. 19; a Bridal-procession, iv. 40; visits the Duke of Würtemberg, iv. 42; gives him good advice, iv. 48; visits Karl Philip, iv. 49, 61; a simple dinner, iv. 56; discovers Friedrich's attempt at flight, iv. 62; suppressed rage, iv. 63; visits Ernst Ludwig, iv. 65; can suppress no longer, iv. 68; summary orders, iv. 70; visits Clement August, iv. 71; letter home, announcing arrest, iv. 79; draws his sword upon his Son, iv. 80; 'let him take the doom the Laws have appointed,' iv. 80; arrives at Berlin, iv. 84; almost mad at the turn things have taken, iv. 85; receives a packet of fictitious Letters; assaults Wilhelmina in a frenzy of rage and disappointment, iv. 86; no more negotiations with England, iv. 93; cannot get to the bottom of the conspiracy, iv. 94; wholesale punishments, iv. 95; anxiety to save Friedrich's soul, iv. 97; something of the nature of real prayer, iv. 98, 166; his conduct, looked at from without and from within, iv. 99, 119; distracted wanderings, iv. 100; will have Katte and Crown-Prince tried by Court-Martial, iv. 101, 105; Katte must die, iv. 108; the King's troubled thoughts, iv. 119; spares his Son's life, iv. 121; and even hopes to save his soul, iv. 124; resolves on Wilhelmina's marriage, iv. 130; preparations for her Betrothal, iv. 135; never neglects public business, iv.

141; the Salzburg Protestants, iv. 141, 255; hangs Schlubhut for theft, iv. 143; elk-hunting at Pillau, iv. 145; cudgels his Criminal-Collegium, iv. 148; excessively severe on defalcations, iv. 149; reconciled to his Son, iv. 162, 171; a narrow escape from a bullet, iv. 190; his Majesty's building operations, and infringements of Free-Trade, iv. 191; v. 114; his store of silver, iv. 199; takes Friedrich into favour, iv. 202, 247; repentant love for Wilhelmina, iv. 205; decides on a Bride for Friedrich, iv. 223; his Letters, iv. 225; receives the Salzburg Protestants at Berlin, iv. 273; a man skilful in investments, iv. 276; his Majesty visits the Kaiser, iv. 279, 284; contempt for their ceremonials, iv. 285, 292; dines at Prag with Prince Eugene, iv. 295; meetings with the Kaiser, iv. 298, 300; returns home, with new experiences of his high friends, iv. 300; visits Wilhelmina, iv. 303; passes Leipzig, iv. 305; total change of mind towards the Kaiser, iv. 309; v. 13, 115; a strange Session of the Tobacco-Parliament, iv. 309; a ride with Seckendorf, iv. 313; v. 99; passionate remorse, iv. 313; interest in West-Preussen, v. 5; rough banter with Wilhelmina, v. 8; provision for

- Friedrich on his marriage, v. 18, 121; small interest in the Polish Election, v. 26; connection with the Rhine-Campaign, v. 45, 47; grants asylum to Stanislaus, v. 58; Friedrich still finds him difficult to please, v. 59; at Phillipsburg, v. 70; steadily refuses to give up Stanislaus, v. 73, 101; falls seriously ill, v. 83; pleased with Friedrich's success in Preussen, v. 108; continued illness, v. 113, 230; fallen-out with the Kaiser, v. 114, 205, 206; a visit to Loo, v. 210, 214; growing favour for Friedrich, v. 212, 243; renewed anxiety about his Heterodoxies, v. 221; Friedrich's testimony to his noble kingly qualities, v. 242; a new fit of illness, v. 244; the final shadows closing in upon him, v. 259, 266; his last Tobacco-Parliament, v. 269; how he shall stand justified before Almighty God, v. 271, 277; much affected at seeing his Son, v. 275; Instructions for his Funeral, v. 276; abdicates in favour of Friedrich, v. 277, 279; death, v. 282; his Spartan Funeral, v. 283.
- Friesack demolished, i. 232, 234; ii. 73.
- Friesland, ii. 88.
- Fritzlar plundered and burnt, i. 142.
- gers, the, of Augsburg, i. 3, 280; iv. 40.
- Funccius of Nürnberg, i. 298.
- GALLAS, Austrian, i. 60.
- Gebhardus of Milan, i. 117.
- Geldern, ii. 5; iv. 74; v. 210.
- Genius, i. 32; ii. 135, 139; iii. 79.
- George I. of England, i. 39; ii. 164, 166, 185; the Pretender coming, ii. 186; his Majesty visits Berlin, ii. 208, 273; assists the Heidelberg Protestants, ii. 237, 238; English troubles, ii. 277; first triumph of the "Constitutional Principle," ii. 281; iii. 85; consents to the Double-Marriage scheme, ii. 283; Treaty of Hanover, ii. 322; does not sign the Double-Marriage Treaty, ii. 328; fires-up at Friedrich Wilhelm's predatory recruitings, ii. 12; his smoking-room, iii. 41; not inclined for War, iii. 77; death by apoplexy, on the road to Osnabrück, iii. 82.
- George II. of England, i. 18, 183; as Prince of Wales, ii. 277, 328; gives no help to the Double-Marriage scheme, iii. 120; quarrels with Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 158, 170; his dapper, self-satisfied character, iii. 159; coerces the Duke of Mecklenburg, iii. 166; discovers Grumkow's treachery, iii. 220; iv. 5; helps the Salzburg Protestants, iv. 277; his quarrel with the Prince of - Wales, v. 195; his Wife's death, v. 197.

- George III. of England, iii. 194.
- George, Markgraf. See Culmbach.
- George, Duke, of Saxony, i. 329.
- George Friedrich of Culmbach, i. 284, 306, 330, 335; goes to Preussen to administer, ii. 8.
- George Wilhelm, Tenth Kurfürst, helpless amid the hot ashes of the Thirty-Years War, ii. 39, 50.
- Gera Bond, the, an excellent piece of Hohenzollern thrift, i. 267; ii. 9, 82, 83; iv. 21; the Salzburg Protestants at Gera, iv. 270; Friedrich delayed at, v. 59.
- Gerber, iv. 90, 107.
- German language, the, ii. 115.
- Geyler, ii. 70 n.
- Gibraltar, Spanish siege of, iii. 75, 82, 141.
- Gilge, ii. 74.
- Ginkel, General, iv. 99, 168, 286; v. 83.
- Glatz, iv. 288.
- Glinde, Albrecht, i. 250.
- Glume, v. 133.
- Göbel, iv. 272.
- Goethe, i. 26; ii. 115; iv. 67; his Hermann and Dorothea, iv. 277.
- Gompert, ii. 137.
- Görtz, ii. 185.
- Gottfried, cited, iii. 84 n.
- Gough, cited, i. 151 n.
- Grafigny, Madame de, v. 164 n.
- Grätz, Fortress of, v. 227.
- Graun, the Brothers, v. 131.
- Grävenitz, Countess, and the Duke of Württemberg, iv. 43; becoming much of a Hecate, iv. 46; stowed away, iv. 49, 175.
- Gregory, St., of Nazianzen, i. 57.
- Grimnitz, Schloss of, i. 328.
- Gröben, Lieutenant, iv. 253; v. 78.
- Grumkow, Baron, ii. 117, 141; iii. 101; a cunning, greedy-hearted, long-headed fellow, ii. 118; sets a spy on Creutz, ii. 174; challenged by the Old-Dessauer, and humbly apologises, iii. 20; introduces Seckendorf to Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 24; bribed by the Kaiser, iii. 26, 36; he and Seckendorf Black-Artists of the first quality, iii. 26; how they 'possessed' Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 35, 145, 176; iv. 14; skilful manœuvres in the Tobacco-Parliament, iii. 43, 93, 131, 142, 168, 243, 248; deputation to the Queen, iii. 214, 221; Cipher-Correspondence with Reichenbach, iii. 218, 251, 267; their treachery brought home to them, and denied, iii. 272, 273; an intercepted Letter, iv. 4; Grumkow interrogates Friedrich at Mittenwalde, iv. 90; becoming almost too victorious, iv. 93, 101, 121; if the King should suddenly die on us, iv. 103, 120; Grumkow visits Friedrich at Cüstrin, iv. 103, 123; is one of the Court-

- Martial to try him, iv. 107; correspondence with Friedrich, iv. 128, 224, 233, 234, 237, 280; deputation to Wilhelmina, iv. 133; his account of the King's interview with Friedrich at Cüstrin, iv. 162; receives a private report of Friedrich from Schulenburg, iv. 171; introduces Friedrich to Wilhelmina, iv. 201; with the King at his visit to the Kaiser, iv. 290, 293, 297; visits Wilhelmina, iv. 304; will have nothing to do with Kaiser's Double - Marriage project, iv. 308; last interviews with the King of Poland, v. 2, 20.
 Guhrauer, cited, ii. 279 n.
 Gumbrecht, i. 285.
 Gundling, Jakob Paul, and his sublime long-eared erudition, iii. 50; Friedrich Wilhelm's rough sport with him, iii. 53; quarrels with Fassmann, iii. 64; strange burial, iii. 66.
 Gustaf Adolf, the great, i. 216; ii. 39, 40, 49, 50, 52.
 HACKE's wedding, iv. 239; his advancement, iv. 281, 286, 297; v. 279; letter from Friedrich, iv. 282.
 Halle, University of, ii. 91; controversy with Wolf, iii. 57; the Salzburg Protestants at, iv. 270.
 Hameln, ii. 47.
 Hamersleben, ii. 237.
 Hanover, Electorate of, i. 38; Linden Avenue at, i. 48; Treaty of, ii. 322; iii. 22, 28; our Hanover Series of Kings, iii. 85.
 Hapsburg Kaisers. See Rudolf.
 Harrington, Lord, iii. 140, 297.
 Hartoff, Herr von, iii. 182.
 Havelberg, ii. 187; iv. 273.
 Heavy Peg, i. 232; ii. 143.
 Heidelberg Protestants, ii. 227.
 Heilbronn, ii. 41; iv. 58.
 Heilsbronn, i. 123; iv. 29.
 Heinrich Friedrich, Cousin of Friedrich, ii. 223, 224 n.; v. 50, 81, 190, 192.
Helden-Geschichte, cited, iii. 285 n.
 Hennert, cited, v. 124 n.
 Henry II. of England, i. 121.
 Henry VIII., ii. 4.
 Henry II. of France, i. 303.
 Henry IV., ii. 21, 26.
 Henry IV., Kaiser, i. 103.
 Henry VII., Luxemburg Kaiser, i. 170, 225; poisoned in sacramental wine, i. 173; his descendants, i. 189.
 Henry the Fowler, beginning of German Kings, i. 82; his six Markgraviates, i. 84; a valiant Son of Cosmos, i. 86.
 Henry the Lion, i. 108, 121.
 Herrenhausen, ii. 283.
 Herstal, v. 205.
 Hervey, Lord, iii. 178.
 Hervey, cited, iii. 178 n.
 Hesse, poor old, iv. 149.
 Hildburghausen, Prince of, v. 201.
 Hildebrand, Pope, i. 103.
 Hille, iv. 157, 159.
 Himmelstädt, iv. 158.

- History, all, an imprisoned Epic, Psalm and Prophecy, i. 25; fleeting rumours of, i. 102; use of, iv. 247.
- Hochstädt, ii. 88.
- Hof, i. 183; v. 58.
- Hohenstauffen Dynasty, i. 104; tragic end of the, i. 150, 152.
- Hohenzollerns, the, i. 115; Burggraves of Nürnberg, i. 122; iv. 28; a thrifty, steadfast, clear-sighted line of men, i. 123, 149; how they obtained Baireuth and Anspach, i. 147, 148; Burggraviate made hereditary, i. 150; further acquisitions, i. 178; become connected with Brandenburg, i. 182, 204; become Kurfürsts, i. 229; contrast between guidance and no-guidance, i. 237; not worshipers of Beelzebub, i. 238; not speckless paragons of all the virtues, i. 242; practical notions of Fairplay, ii. 70; the Twelve Hohenzollern Electors, ii. 99; National Drill-sergeants, ii. 143; fine talent for annihilating rubbish, iv. 21. See Brandenburg, Prussia.
- Holberg, cited, i. 317 n.
- Holle, cited, i. 146 n.
- Holstein, ii. 162, 172; Holstein-Beck, Prince of, iii. 291.
- Homer's Iliad, i. 26.
- Hompesch, Baron von, iii. 13.
- Hopfgarten, General, and his complimentary balderdash, iv. 18.
- Hoppe, cited, iii. 164 n.
- Hormayr, cited, i. 170 n.; iv. 213 n.
- Horn, cited, i. 67 n.
- Hotham, Sir Charles, English Envoy to Prussia, iii. 240; welcomed at Berlin, iii. 243; dinner with the King, iii. 244; his Despatches, iii. 262; Double-Marriage scheme as good as ended, iii. 275, 277; amazing interview with the King, iv. 1; no choice but to return home, iv. 7.
- Hoym, Graf von, iii. 296.
- Hübner, cited, i. 88 n.; v. 24 n.
- Hungary becomes part of Austria, i. 275.
- Hunger, war waged by, ii. 53.
- Huss, i. 219, 224.
- Hypocrites, Sincere-, ii. 202.
- ICH DIEN, i. 198.
- Ilgen, ii. 165; iii. 129.
- Intellects, female, i. 61; the best symptom of Intellect, ii. 265; uttered and un-uttered Intellect, iv. 222; Intellect and Vulpinism, iv. 312; love of Intellect, v. 139.
- Italian Liberty, i. 173; Italy extinguishing its Protestantism, i. 312.
- Iwan, ii. 193; iv. 220.
- Iwanowna. See Anne of Courland.
- JACOBÆA of Baden, ii. 16.
- Jägerndorf, Duchy of, i. 275, 306, 334; ii. 9, 55, 77; iv. 289.
- James I. of England, ii. 34, 45, 46.

- James Sobieski of Poland, ii. 229.
- Jandun, Duhande. See Duhan.
- Jaromierz, iv. 289.
- Jean Paul, i. 126.
- Jenkins, Captain Robert, scandalous treatment of, by the Spaniards, iv. 150; his 'Ear' reëmerges, and produces effects, v. 228, 261.
- Jerome's, St., method of scripture commentary, i. 57.
- Jesuits, ii. 16, 26, 33, 42, 44, 233; iii. 13; v. 157.
- Joachim Ernst, Markgraf, ii. 43.
- Joachim Friedrich, Eighth Kurfürst, i. 328, 341; fairly gets hold of Preussen, ii. 10; death, ii. 12.
- Joachim I., Kur-Brandenburg, i. 262, 263, 282; his character, i. 314; his Protestant Wife, i. 315; death-bed, i. 319.
- Joachim II., Sixth Kurfürst, i. 321; abhorrence of chicanery, i. 326; accident to his poor Wife in the Schloss of Grimnitz, i. 328; gets Co-infestment in Preussen, i. 329; Heritage-Brotherhood with the Duke of Liegnitz, i. 330; stiff debates with King Ferdinand, i. 334; stanch to the great cause of Protestantism, i. 336; on good terms with Karl V., i. 338.
- Joachimsthal Gymnasium, i. 328, 341.
- Jobst of Mähren, i. 193, 207, 212, 214, 217.
- Johann II. Burggraf of Nürnberg, i. 182, 204.
- Johann Friedrich the Magnanimous taken captive by Karl V., i. 322, 326, 339; iii. 287; his Wife, ii. 5.
- Johann George, Elector of Saxony, ii. 52.
- Johann George of Jägerndorf, ii. 9, 55.
- Johann George, Seventh Kurfürst, i. 265; ii. 2, 6; Gera Bond, i. 267; with Karl V. at the siege of Wittenberg, I. 338; a prudent, thrifty, just-minded Herr, i. 340.
- Johann King of Bohemia, i. 189, 192; death on the field of Crecy, i. 198.
- Johann of Cüstrin, i. 336.
- Johann of Nepomuk, i. 208; iv. 297.
- Johann Sigismund, Ninth Kurfürst, ii. 10, 12; interest in the Cleve-Heritage, ii. 13; his claims disputed, ii. 17; slaps young Pfalz-Neuburg's face, ii. 30; gets possession of Prussia, i. 38.
- Johann the Alchemist, i. 252.
- Johanna Elizabeth, Wife of Duke of Würtemberg, iv. 42; steadily refuses an iniquitous divorce, iv. 44.
- Johannes Cicero, Fourth Kurfürst, i. 260.
- Johannes of Valencia, i. 285.
- Johannes Parricida, i. 170.
- John Casimir, King of Poland, ii. 66; gives-up the Homage of Preussen, ii. 66; abdicates, ii. 68; v. 4.

- John, St., Hospitallers of, i. 133; iv. 167.
- John the Steadfast, Kur-Sachsen, i. 280, 282.
- Johnson, cited, iii. 153 n.
- Johnson, Samuel, i. 8, 61, 240; ii. 140, 212; iii. 202.
- Jordan, Charles Etienne, v. 132, 135, 256.
- Jülich, ii. 5, 13, 64; siege of, ii. 25; a carpenter of, kidnapped, iii. 13. See Cleve.
- Justice, love of, ii. 134; iii. 39; iv. 149; persistence in, ii. 136, 240; iv. 222.
- KAISERS, the early, i. 83, 103; three futile Kaisers, i. 150; a new Kaiser, i. 153; a contested Election, i. 175; seven Non-Hapsburg Kaisers, i. 225.
- Kalkstein, Baron von, kidnapped at Warsaw, ii. 80, 201.
- Kalkstein, Lieutenant-Colonel, ii. 179, 201.
- Kamecke, Frau von, ii. 109; letter from the King, iv. 79; defends Wilhelmina from her Father's violence, iv. 86, 87.
- Kamken. See Kamecke.
- Kannegiesser, iii. 163, 164, 181, 195.
- Kanzler von Ludwig, iv. 192.
- Kapp, cited, i. 306 n.
- Karl, Duke of Brunswick, iv. 220; v. 108, 219.
- Karl, Grand-Master of the Knights of St. John, iv. 167.
- Karl Gustaf of Sweden, i. 216; war with Poland, ii. 65; dream of a new Goth Empire; death, ii. 67.
- Karl IV., Kaiser, i. 188, 193, 196, 226; buys Brandenburg, i. 202, 203,
- Karl V., Kaiser, i. 274, 280, 297, 302, 307, 333; ii. 6; iii. 24; at the siege of Metz, i. 303; his Sister married to Christian II. of Denmark, i. 315; triumph at Mühlberg, i. 322; iii. 288; his haughty ways, i. 324; reverses and abdication, i. 327; at the siege of Wittenberg, i. 338.
- Karl VI., Kaiser, i. 32; ii. 93, 295, 310; iv. 292; his feebly-virulent quarrel with the Queen of Spain, ii. 243; a fearful affair, though a ludicrous one, ii. 244, 300, 312, 330; iii. 139; converts and marries a Protestant Princess, ii. 298; iv. 214; his Pragmatic Sanction in favour of Maria Theresa, ii. 304; iii. 144; iv. 64, 232; his Ostend East-India Company, ii. 309; Congress of Cambrai, ii. 315; Treaty of Vienna, ii. 320; iv. 153; sends Seckendorf to Berlin to snare Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 22, 142; bribes Grumkow, iii. 26; high-sniffing contempt for Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 28; a treacherous bargain, iii. 30, 161; Congress of Soissons, iii. 139; suspends the Duke of Mecklenburg, iii. 165; a visit from Friedrich Wilhelm, iv. 284; dreadful doubts

- about the ceremonial, iv. 285, 290; unceremonial meetings, iv. 297; what Friedrich thought of his Father's visit, iv. 301; attempt to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, iv. 306; v. 11; interferes in the Polish Election, v. 26; attacked by the French, v. 36; applies to the Reich for help, v. 45; high demands on Friedrich Wilhelm, v. 101; second Rhine-Campaign, v. 102; the damages he had to pay, v. 110; fallen out with Friedrich Wilhelm, v. 114; declares war against the Turks, v. 201; disastrous results, v. 225; shameful Peace, v. 259; a Kaiser much beggared and disgraced, v. 260.
- Karl VII., Kaiser, i. 183, 226.
- Karl Philip, Kur Pfalz, ii. 228; v. 203; runs-off with James Sobieski's Bride, ii. 230; becomes Pfalz-Neuburg, ii. 231; tribulations of the Heidelberg Protestants, ii. 232; Friedrich Wilhelm's visit, iv. 49, 61; his Mistress, iv. 175.
- Katsch, iii. 92.
- Katte, Lieutenant, iii. 107, 201; a dangerous companion for Friedrich, iii. 209, 297; iv. 11; Wilhelmina's Miniature, iv. 12; Friedrich's projected Flight, iv. 15, 32, 37; news of his Arrest, iv. 76; sends Writing-desk and money to the Queen, iv. 78; arrested, iv. 79; the King's ungovernable rage, iv. 86, 89; Katte and the Crown-Prince to be tried by Court-Martial, iv. 101; Katte's iron doom, iv. 108; piously prepares himself to die, iv. 109; last words with the Prince, and death, iv. 112.
- Katte, Lieutenant - General von, v. 73, 112.
- Katte, Rittmeister von, v. 26, 32, 34.
- Katzbach, the, iv. 287.
- Katzenellenbogen, iv. 66.
- Kaufbeuern, iv. 266.
- Kausler, cited, ii. 73 n.
- Kehl, v. 36.
- Keith, General, at the siege of Oczakow, v. 200.
- Keith, Lieutenant, iii. 107, 296; stationed at Wesel, iii. 209, 296; a party to Friedrich's projected Flight, iv. 33; news of its discovery by the King, iv. 70; escapes, iv. 74, 81; safe in England, iv. 82; sentence, iv. 107.
- Keith, Page, iv. 35, 37; will get horses for Friedrich, iv. 56; attempted flight at Steinfurth, iv. 60; confesses all to the King, iv. 62; packed into the Fusileer Regiment, iv. 83.
- Kemeter, v. 121.
- Kendal, Duchess of, i. 194; ii. 279; iii. 87, 262; iv. 106.
- Kepler, ii. 34.
- Ker of Kersland, ii. 279 n.
- Kettlers, the, iv. 197.
- Keyserling, v. 14, 133, 178, 257.
- Kielmannsegge, Graf von, v. 217.

- King, a, without the trappings, i. 3; Sham Kingship, i. 10; the True King, ii. 132, 138; worth of, ii. 144; an Economist King, ii. 146; a Constitutional King, ii. 281, iii. 85; a Working King, iii. 10; v. 232; an Absolute King, iii. 39; a Kingly Fight lost to the world, iii. 178; Modern Kings, v. 282.
- Kirkman, James, the Irish Giant, iii. 5, 8; v. 284.
- Kladrup, iv. 291.
- Klinggräf, iv. 193.
- Kloss, cited, i. 99 n.
- Knobelsdorf, v. 62, 132, 255.
- Knut, i. 88.
- Knyphausen, iii. 131, 190, 231, 264, 271; iv. 95.
- Koch, iv. 193.
- Köhler, cited, i. 82 n., 84 n., 103 n., 145 n., 247 n.
- Köhler, i. 84 n., 173 n.
- Kolin Battle, iv. 294.
- Kolitz, v. 202.
- Köln, Clement August, Kurfürst of, iv. 69, 188; famed old City of, iv. 73.
- Königsberg, i. 73, 137, 288; ii. 74; University of, i. 299; Bürgermeister of, seized in open Hall, ii. 80; Stanislaus at, v. 107.
- Königsmark tragedy, the, i. 39.
- Königseck, Graf von, v. 41.
- Köppen, Lieutenant, ii. 168.
- Kröcher, Colonel, iv. 18.
- Kunersdorf, iv. 180.
- Kunz von Kauffungen, i. 255; iv. 20.
- Kurfürsts and their function, i. 109; the Twelve Hohenzollern, ii. 99.
- Kurt, iv. 95.
- LACRETELLE, cited, ii. 289 n.
- Lacy, Marshal, v. 29, 104.
- Lange, iii. 58.
- Latin, learning, ii. 204. See Education.
- Lausitz, i. 84, 88.
- Law, the Finance-Wizard, ii. 187, 288.
- Lecouvreur, Adrienne, iii. 115; v. 160.
- Lediard, cited, iii. 167.
- Leibnitz, cited, i. 85 n.
- Leibnitz, i. 39; Leibnitzian 'justification of the ways of God,' i. 44; sage Leibnitz, a rather weak but hugely ingenious old gentleman, i. 54, 55, 60; ii. 279.
- Leipzig, iv. 19.
- Leo X., Pope, i. 262.
- Leon, Herr von, ii. 247.
- Leopold, Archduke, at the Siege of Jülich, ii. 25.
- Leopold, Richard's, Duke of Austria, a man with some stuff in him, i. 128.
- Leopold, Kaiser, i. 70; ii. 62, 77, 83, 295.
- Leopold of Anhalt-Dessau, i. 35, 106, 181; ii. 88, 117, 168, 224; iii. 47, 58; a rugged practical man, of dreadful impetuosity, ii. 119, 125; Fos's Daughter, ii. 119; kills a Cousin of hers, and marries her, ii. 121; inventor of modern military tactics, ii. 122; iv. 137; General Field-

- marshal of the Prussian Armies, ii. 123; at Blenheim; Bridge of Cassano; Lines of Turin, ii. 123; iv. 37; at the Siege of Stralsund, ii. 168; challenges Grumkow, iii. 20; leaves him and the Court in disgust, iii. 20; at King August's Camp of Radewitz, iii. 291; takes Mörs Castle, iv. 74; favours Friedrich at Cüstrin, iv. 104, 121, 206; assists in his military studies, iv. 248; sends the King tall recruits, iv. 282; the Rhine Campaign, v. 47, 76, 104; visits the French Camp, v. 84; with the King at Belgard, v. 246; at his death, v. 279; interview with King Friedrich, v. 285.
- Lepel, Major-General, iv. 162.
- Leuthen, Battle of, i. 11.
- Lewin, iv. 289.
- Lichtenberg, i. 319.
- Lichtenstein, Prince von, v. 69, 101.
- Lie, a, i. 14, 21; galvanised, i. 296. See Fiction, Mendacity.
- Liège, Bishop of, v. 205.
- Liegnitz, Duke of, i. 270, 284, 291; Heritage-Brotherhood with Joachim, i. 330; what comes of it, ii. 76; the town of, iv. 287.
- Ligne, Prince de, i. 239.
- Linger, iv. 121.
- Lintz, ii. 34.
- Lippe-Bückeburg, v. 215, 221.
- Literature, romantic appetite for, ii. 264; literary fame, ii. 57; v. 137; Book-writing, of two kinds, iii. 60; v. 223; something grander than all literatures, v. 168; Friedrich's literary attainments, v. 230. See Newspaper, Review-articles.
- Lithuania, v. 241.
- Locke, v. 154.
- Loo, Palace of, v. 210.
- Lorraine, Leopold Joseph, Duke of, iii. 147; Charles, iii. 149; Franz Stephen, iii. 149; iv. 127, 231; v. 35, 111; visits Potsdam, iv. 238, 244; at Kolitz, v. 202; end of 'Turk War, v. 259; Karl of, iii. 149; Lorraine taken by the French, v. 37, 110.
- Lothar, Kaiser, i. 104, 108.
- Lottum, Count, ii. 187.
- Louis XIV., ii. 62, 71, 73, 76, 88, 161, 233, 296; death of, ii. 92; bankrupt condition of, ii. 163.
- Louis XV., i. 183; ii. 319, 321; v. 24.
- Louis Ferdinand, ii. 293; v. 278.
- Louis, Fort, v. 53.
- Louisa of Nassau-Orange, Wife of the Great Kurfürst, ii. 74, 77.
- Louisa of Prussia, v. 192.
- Louisa Ulrique, ii. 184, 293.
- Ludwig IV., Bavarian Kaiser, i. 175, 225.
- Ludwig, Bavarian Kurfürst of Brandenburg, i. 186; marries Margaret Maultasche, i. 190; will not be turned out, i. 199; retires to Bavaria and the Tyrol, i. 201.

- Ludwig, Kurfürst, the Roman, i. 201.
- Ludwig Ohne Haut, the last King of Hungary, i. 274, 331.
- Ludwig Rudolf, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, iv. 216.
- Ludwigsburg, iv. 42.
- Luiscius of the One Razor, v. 206.
- Luise, Princess of Orange, i. 64.
- Luther, i. 144, 258, 272, 318 n.; iv. 18; visited by Markgraf George, i. 278; by Hochmeister Albert, i. 293; opinion of the Teutsch Ritters, i. 295; visited by Elizabeth of Brandenburg, i. 320; his Bible, ii. 116; Hymn, ii. 125; at Coburg during the Diet of Augsburg, iv. 24.
- Lützen, iv. 20.
- Luxemburg Kaisers, i. 170, 174.
- Lyttelton, Sir Thomas, at Lorraine, iii. 146; at Soissons during the Congress, iii. 150; in the Ministry, iii. 153; in Opposition, v. 71.
- MACCHIAVEL, v. 235.
- Magdeburg, i. 161, 284; ii. 49, 57, 72, 136, 237. See Christian Wilhelm of.
- Magnetic Mountains, the, pulling, ii. 282.
- Maillebois, Marshal, v. 39.
- Maintz, Archbishops of, i. 141, 154, 173. See Albert Archbishop of.
- Malplaquet, Battle of, i. 36; bloodiest of obstinate fights, ii. 89.
- Mannheim, Karl Philip removes his Court to, ii. 239.
- Mannstein, cited, ii. 192 n.
- Mansion-House, the, v. 261.
- Manteufel, v. 182.
- Marburg and its Teutsch Ritters, i. 143; Wolf finds shelter at, iii. 59.
- Margaret Maultasche, i. 190.
- Marheineke, cited, i. 281 n.
- Maria Eleonora, Wife of Albert Friedrich of Preussen, ii. 4, 8, 12.
- Maria Theresa, i. 18; ii. 304, 324; iii. 149; iv. 127; rumour of Marriage with Friedrich, iii. 298; iv. 213; to marry the Duke of Lorraine, iv. 232.
- Marienburg, i. 136, 185.
- Markgrafs, origin of, i. 86.
- Marlborough, i. 35, 71; ii. 23, 88, 124; his dextrous management, ii. 92; how the English treated him, ii. 93, 296; his last days, iv. 37.
- Marwitz, Demoiselle, v. 92, 93.
- Matinées du Roi de Prusse*, an impudent pamphlet of forgeries, i. 238.
- Maud, Empress, i. 105.
- Maupertuis, M. de, v. 213.
- Maurice, Count, iii. 115.
- Mauvillon, cited, ii. 176 n.; v. 220 n.
- Max, Kaiser, i. 258, 270, 287.
- Maximilian Duke of Bavaria, ii. 23, 27, 33, 41, 45, 49, 59.
- Mecklenburg, i. 112; ii. 49, 172; unparalleled Duke and Duchess of, ii. 191; iii. 292; iv. 178; the Duke's mis-

- government and suspension, iii. 164, 191; their Daughter, v. 220, 263.
- Meiningen, Dowager Duchess of, iv. 196.
- Menckenius, cited, i. 141 n.
- Mendacity, the fellest sort of, ii. 131, 202. See Lie.
- Mentzel, cited, i. 129 n.
- Mephistopheles, ii. 295.
- Meran, i. 146.
- Mercy, Graf von, v. 40.
- Metz, Siege of, i. 303.
- Meuselwitz, iv. 19.
- Michaelis, cited, i. 99 n.
- Minden, ii. 237; iv. 264.
- Milan, v. 38.
- Military tactics, modern, ii. 122; military studies, iv. 248.
- Militair Lexikon*, ii. 178 n.
- Minnesänger*, Manesse's, i. 152, 161.
- Mirabeau, i. 4, 9, 17; his Grandfather, ii. 124; cited, i. 5 n.
- Mirepoix, Bishop of, v. 161.
- Mirow, Karl Ludwig Friedrich, Prince of, v. 184, 190.
- Misnia, i. 84, 87.
- Mist, cited, iii. 141 n.
- Mistovoi, King of the Wends, i. 99, 100.
- Mitbelehrung* of Preussen, i. 329.
- Mohacz, Battle of, i. 275.
- Montbail, Dame de, i. 43; ii. 109.
- Montemar, Duke of, v. 39.
- Montesquieu, iii. 239; v. 144.
- Montholieu, iv. 95.
- Moore, Dr., i. 5.
- Moritz of Saxony, i. 301, 305, 323, 327; iii. 287.
- Mörs, iv. 73.
- Mosel, General, iv. 80.
- Mosheim, v. 13; cited, v. 15 n.
- Mühlberg, Camp of, iii. 237, 285.
- Mühldorf, Fight of, 175.
- Müller, Chaplain, and Lieutenant Katte, iv. 109; waits on the Crown-Prince, iv. 116, 122.
- Münchow, President, iv. 104, 159.
- Münnich, General, v. 33, 72, 74, 108, 199, 225.
- Mylius, iv. 107.
- NACHOD, iv. 289.
- Nadir Shah, v. 261.
- Nanke, cited, i. 249 n.
- Nantes, Edict of, ii. 69, 109, 114.
- Naples, v. 38.
- Napoleon, i. 10, 22, 111, 124, 297; ii. 75.
- National dry-rot, ii. 132; Economics, ii. 133, 146; Drill-sergeants, ii. 143.
- Natzmer, Captain, the Prussian Recruiter, iii. 91; Natzmer Junior and the Duke of Lorraine, iv. 127.
- Nauen, iv. 279.
- Nepomuk. See Johann of.
- Neumark, i. 109, 159, 213, 244, 249.
- Newspaper editing, iii. 63; newspaper rumour, iv. 277.
- Newton, ii. 279; v. 155.
- Nicolai, cited, i. 67 n.; 159 n.; iii. 204 n.; iv. 124 n.

Nicolai, iii. 201; iv. 116, 124 n., 158.

Nimburg, iv. 293.

Nimwegen, Peace of, ii. 76.

Ninon de l'Enclos, ii. 68.

Noailles, Maréchal, v. 42; at the Siege of Philipsburg, v. 54.

Noltenius, ii. 253.

Nördlingen, iv. 266.

Norris, Admiral, iv. 82.

Norroy, i. 86.

Nürnberg, i. 123; iv. 28, 269.

See Friedrich Burggraf of.

Nüssler, iii. 195; iv. 192.

OBEDIENCE, iv. 103.

Oberg, Baron von, v. 217, 254.

Oczakow, Siege of, v. 199.

Oliva, Peace of, ii. 68.

Olmütz. See Wentzel.

Oppeln. i. 277, 335.

Orange, Princess of, i. 64;

Prince of, v. 70, 87, 210, 213.

Oranienburg, ii. 77.

Orlamünde, iv. 22.

Orleans, Regent d', ii. 288, 317; v. 149, 151.

Orlich, cited, v. 97 n.

Orseln, Werner von, i. 185.

Orzelska, Countess, iii. 103, 112, 292, 294.

Osiander, Dr., i. 293, 298.

Osnabrück, Ernst August, Bishop of, i. 52; iii. 83; his death, iii. 164.

Ostend East-India Company, Karl VI.'s, ii. 309.

Otto, Duke of Meran, slain, i. 146.

Otto III., Elector of Brandenburg, i. 137.

Otto III., last of 'Saxon Kaisers,' i. 92, 96.

Otto of Stettin, Duke, Burial of, i. 250.

Otto, last Bavarian Elector of Brandenburg, i. 202.

Otto with the Arrow, i. 161.

Ottocar, King of Bohemia, i. 137; scandalous plight before Rudolf of Hapsburg, i. 156.

Oxenstiern, ii. 53.

PANNEWITZ, Colonel, iv. 79.

Panzendorf, ii. 253.

Papistry, ii. 204, 240; the Catholic Bull taken by the tail and taught manners, ii. 263; a Papist conversion, ii. 299; absolution, v. 22. See Popes.

Park, cited, v. 253 n.

Parliament, reduced to its simplest expression, iii. 40, 42; Constitutional Parliaments, iii. 43; English, iii. 45, 261; iv. 194; a Female Parliament, iii. 216.

Passau, Peace of, i. 303.

Pauli, cited, i. 99 n.

Paul of Russia, iv. 296.

Pedants, learned, ii. 204; iii. 50.

Penalties, i. 309.

Perry, Alderman, v. 228.

Pesne's Portraits, i. 147, 180, 182; iv. 274; at Reinsberg, v. 129.

Peter, Czar, ii. 155, 283; visits Friedrich Wilhelm at Berlin, ii. 185; the strangest mixture of heroic virtue and brutish Samoiedic savagery, ii. 189;

- at Magdeburg, ii. 191; his physiognomy, ii. 195.
- Peter's St., Church at Berlin, burnt down, iii. 281.
- Petitot, cited, v. 37 n.
- Pfalz-Neuburg, Wolfgang Wilhelm, ii. 15, 20; claims the Cleve-Heritage, ii. 17, 27; face slapped, ii. 30; conference with the Great Kurfürst, ii. 64; his Grandson Karl Philip, ii. 231.
- Pfanner, cited, ii. 31.
- Pfeffel, cited, ii. 309 n.
- Philip of Hessen, i. 143, 145, 282, 322; entrapped by Karl V., i. 324.
- Philippina Charlotte, ii. 292; iv. 135; v. 10; wedded to Karl of Brunswick, iv. 220; v. 17; their Sons, v. 219.
- Philips, the English Groom, v. 275.
- Philipsburg, Siege of, v. 42, 51.
- Phillimore, cited, iii. 153 n.
- Pictures, ii. 180, 181, 182.
- Pillau, iv. 145; v. 245.
- Pine, John, the English Engraver, v. 233.
- Pitt, William, v. 262.
- Plantagenet Kings, Mother of our, i. 104; their family name, i. 112; worth to England, ii. 145.
- Plassenburg, Castle of, i. 125, 146, 269, 306.
- Platen, General von, v. 246.
- Plötz, iv. 280.
- Poet, the highest, the fittest Historian, i. 26.
- Poland, edging itself into the territories of Prussia, i. 245, 248; Partition of, i. 249; ii. 68; v. 1; an 'Aristocratic Republic,' ii. 4; v. 23, 26; Polish Chivalry, ii. 68; a Polish Election, v. 26.
- Pöllnitz, cited, i. 62 n.; ii. 97 n.; iii. 197 n.
- Pöllnitz, iii. 34, 48; v. 203 n., 244, 270.
- Pomerania, i. 112, 250; ii. 47, 183; divided by Sweden, ii. 63, 76.
- Pompadour, i. 194.
- Pope, v. 154.
- Popes, the Avignon, i. 170, 172, 179; the Pope prays for a good quarrel among the Heretics, iii. 188. See Boniface, Hildebrand, Leo X., Papistry.
- Porta, Baptista, ii. 35 n.
- Potsdam Giants, Friedrich Wilhelm's, iii. 3; iv. 250; their last service, v. 284.
- Poyntz, Stephen, iii. 141.
- Prætorius, General, v. 189.
- Prag, ii. 33, 52; iv. 290, 294, 297.
- Pragmatic Sanction, Karl VI.'s, ii. 304; iii. 141; iv. 64, 155.
- Predestination, iv. 97, 165.——
- Preuss, cited, i. 29 n.; ii. 113 n.; iii. 1 n.
- Preuss, ii. 113 n.
- Preussen. See Prussia.
- Pride of place, the last thing that deserts a sinking house, i. 290.
- Primogeniture, Law of, i. 267, 341; iv. 21.
- Prinzen, ii. 165.

- Prinzenraub, Little Albert of the, ii. 19.
 Priort, iv. 313; v. 99.
 Promethean conquests, i. 283.
 Protestant Refugees, ii. 14, 69;
 Protestant Germany, ii. 41;
 'enlightened Protestantism,' ii. 112, 253; the Heidelberg
 Protestants, ii. 227; Birthplace of Protestantism, iv.
 18; the Salzburg Protestants,
 iv. 141, 255. See Reformation.
 Prussia, early condition of, i.
 90; a vehemently Heathen
 Country, i. 91; attempts at Conversion, i. 93; brought to terms by the Teutsch Ritters,
 i. 133, 184; West Preussen cut away by the Polish sword,
 i. 248; how East Preussen came into the Hohenzollern Family, i. 287; Mitbelehnung,
 i. 329; a troublesome Aristocracy, ii. 3; tamed-down by George Friedrich, ii. 9; possessions in the Rhine Country, ii. 37, 64; freed from Homage to Poland, ii. 66, 68;
 invaded by the Swedes, ii.
 73; Kingdom of Prussia contrasted with Westphalia,
 ii. 90 (see Friedrich I.);
 dawning of a new day for Prussia, ii. 128, 202; Salzburg Protestants in, iv. 262.
 See Brandenburg.
 Pufendorf, cited, ii. 30 n., 71 n.
 Pütter, cited, ii. 238 n.
 Pytheas, i. 79, 91.
- QUANTZ, the Saxon Music-master, iii. 201.
 Queens, the average of, v. 192.
 Quitzow, Dietrich von, i. 232.
 RADEWITZ, Camp of, iii. 237,
 285.
 Radzivil, i. 229.
 Ramen, iii. 216, 223.
 Ramrods, iron, ii. 122.
 Ranfft, cited, iv. 74 n.
 Ranke, cited, iii. 295 n., 296 n.
 Rastadt, ii. 93.
 Rathenau, ii. 72.
 Ratibor, i. 277, 335.
 Ravallac, ii. 26.
 Reality, worth of, ii. 135. See Fact.
 Rebecca, the, boarded by the Spaniards, iv. 151.
 Reform, Administrative, ii. 128.
 Reformation, the, Markgraf
 George in the great business of, i. 278; the Event of the Sixteenth Century, i. 308; ii.
 20; fatal consequences of rejecting, i. 311; symptoms of the Thirty-Years War, ii. 22;
 George Wilhelm's perplexities, ii. 39.
 Rehback, Jakob, i. 187.
 Reichartsbronn, Abbey of, i.
 141.
 Reichenbach, iii. 219; his Cipher-Correspondence with Grumkow, iii. 250, 262, 266;
 his recall, iii. 275, 276.
 Reinsberg, iv. 206; v. 19, 123;
 Friedrich's Mansion at, v.
 121, 126.
 Religion, teaching, ii. 253. See Education.

- Rentsch, cited, i. 114 n.
 Rentzel, ii. 207.
 Reuss, Counts von, i. 147.
 Review-articles, i. 139. See Literature.
 Rhadamanthus, not so well informed as he might be, iv. 96.
 Richard Cœur-de-Lion and the Siege of Acre, i. 128, 140.
 Richard of Cornwall, sham Kaiser, i. 151, 154.
 Riesbeck, cited, i. 119 n.; iv. 157 n.
 Ripperda, Duke de, ii. 318; iii. 75, 151.
 Ritter, Doris, iv. 95.
 Robinson, Sir Thomas, iii. 141; iv. 153, 155, 307.
 Rochow, Lieutenant-Colonel, iv. 17, 32, 39; prevents Friedrich's Flight, iv. 59, 84.
 Rōdenbeck, cited, ii. 131 n.; iv. 56 n.
 Röder, General, v. 49.
 Rodolf II., Kaiser, ii. 24, 27.
 Rohan, Duc de, and Voltaire, v. 151.
 Rohwedel, iv. 126.
 Rollin, v. 144.
 Roloff, Provost, v. 268, 271.
 Rosbach, Battle of, i. 11.
 Rostock, ii. 49.
 Rothenburg, Count, and his French fashions, ii. 152; iv. 33.
 Rottembourg, Count de, v. 85.
 Roucouilles, Dame de, i. 43; ii. 109.
 Rüdiger von Manesse, cited, i. 161.
 - of Hapsburg, i. 137, ; elected Kaiser, i. 153; humiliation of King Ottocar, i. 156; unlovely posterity, i. 167.
 Rügen, Isle of, ii. 168.
 Rupert, Kaiser Kur-Pfalz, i. 214, 226.
 Ruppin, iv. 206, 245; v. 121.
 Rutowski, iii. 103.
 Ryswick, Peace of, ii. 233.
 SACHSEN-MEININGEN, Duchess of, iv. 196.
 Salmon, cited, iii. 76 n.
 Salzburg Protestants, the, Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, iv. 141; v. 241; Emigration of, iv. 255; the Salzburg Country, iv. 256.
 Salzdahlum, v. 12.
 Salzwedel, i. 84, 87, 109.
 Samson, Abbot, i. 113.
 Samson Agonistes, i. 8.
 Sardinia, v. 37.
 Satan's Invisible-World, i. 175.
 Sauerteig on Ideal History, i. 24; on Purity in the Relation of the Sexes, iii. 107; on Friedrich and Voltaire, v. 145.
 Savage, cited, ii. 62 n.
 Savage's, Mr., Compleat History of Germany, ii. 62 n.
 Saxe, Maréchal de, iii. 115; iv. 198; v. 54.
 Saxony, Elector of, claims Cleve, ii. 18, 27.
 Scepticism, i. 55.
 Schellenberg, ii. 23; iv. 36.
 Schiller, i. 25, 28; iv. 296.
 Schlözer, cited, v. 88 n.
 Schlubhut hanged for theft, iv. 142; v. 271.

- Schmalkaldic War, the, i. 321, 338.
- Schmettau, Count von, v. 85.
- Schöll, cited, ii. 233 n.
- Schöning, Madam, iv. 174.
- Schulenburg, Fieldmarshal, iii. 86; Lieutenant-General, iv. 106, 189, 286, 297; v. 50, 266; his account of Friedrich at Cüstrin, iv. 171.
- Schwartz, Monk, i. 193.
- Schwartzburg, Princess of, v. 187, 190.
- Schwartzenbergs, the, of Austria, ii. 50.
- Schwedt, Margraves of, ii. 223; iii. 19, 121; iv. 137; the Mother Margravine, iii. 224; iv. 137, 200; Heinrich, iv. 253.
- Schweinfurt, ii. 72.
- Schwerin, Colonel von, iii. 166, 192; iv. 95, 121.
- Schwiebus, Circle of, ii. 84.
- Sciences, the, or Technologies, iv. 247.
- Scoundrelism, one of the crowning summits of, i. 172.
- Secchia, surprisal of the, v. 41.
- Seckendorf, cited, i. 318 n.; iii. 27 n.
- Seckendorf, ii. 141, 166, 179; arrives at Berlin, ii. 331; iii. 23 (see Grumkow); a stiff-backed, petrified, inscrutable old Intriguer, iii. 32, 176; an offence to Queen Sophie, iii. 68, 189; present at Friedrich's attempted Flight, iv. 59, 60, 69, 74; negotiates his Marriage, iv. 224; letter from Friedrich, iv. 283; negotiates Friedrich Wilhelm's visit to the Kaiser, iv. 284; the visit, iv. 304; tries to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, iv. 306; v. 11; a ride with the King, iv. 313; v. 99; at the Rhine Campaign, v. 73, 96, 104; quits Berlin, v. 95; Commander-in-chief against the Turks, v. 201; a prisoner in the Fortress of Grätz, v. 224.
- Seckendorf Junior, v. 96.
- Seehausen, iv. 273.
- Senning, Major von, ii. 207; v. 132.
- Seville, Treaty of, iii. 142; iv. 153.
- Seyfart, cited, v. 273 n.
- Seyfarth, cited, v. 63 n.
- Shakspeare, i. 26.
- Shams, hatefulness of, ii. 134.
- Sibylla, Wife of Johann Friedrich, ii. 5, 18.
- Sicilian Vespers, i. 152.
- Sigismund I. King of Poland, i. 291, 295, 296, 329.
- Sigismund, Kurfürst of Brandenburg and King of Hungary, i. 205, 207, 209, 214, 226; becomes Kaiser, i. 217; Council of Constance, 219, 224, 273.
- Silence, value of, v. 232.
- Silesia, Prussian claims on, ii. 58, 77, 84, 323; iv. 288.
- Sinzendorf, Cardinal, Bishop of Bamberg, iv. 26.
- Sinzendorf, Hof-Kanzler Count von, iv. 296.
- Slave, etymology of, i. 81.
- Smelfungus on Tobacco-smo-

- king, iii. 42; on Modern Diplomacy, iii. 305; Voltaire's Biographers, v. 154.
- Sobieski, King, ii. 230.
- Soissons, Congress of, iii. 140.
- Solitude of Soul, iv. 204.
- Sölltl, cited, ii. 40 n.
- Sonsfeld, Madam, ii. 286; iii. 216; iv. 77, 86, 131.
- Sophie Charlotte, Friedrich's Grandmother, i. 38; ii. 96; her love for Friedrich Wilhelm, i. 49; her death-bed, i. 51; she and her Mother shrewd, noticing, intelligent women, i. 54; her philosophical reunions, i. 55; her symbolic pinch of snuff, i. 76.
- Sophie Dorothee, Friedrich's Mother, i. 37, 45; ii. 96, 167; her husband's confidence in her, ii. 165, 227; iii. 18; iv. 100; her reception of the Czarina Catherine, ii. 190, 193; her love for Fritz, ii. 261; iii. 201; Double-Marriage scheme, ii. 260, 275, 282, 329; her English Pension, ii. 280; secret Correspondence with her poor Mother, ii. 289; iii. 71; unexpected birth of Princess Amelia, ii. 290; surrounded by intrigues and treachery, iii. 17; Seckendorf an offence to her, iii. 68; difficulties becoming insuperable, iii. 70; visit of August of Saxony, iii. 113; persistence in the Double-Marriage scheme, iii. 123, 158, 221; a pressing message from the King, iii. 214, 221; her Female Parliament, iii. 216; a bed of sickness the one refuge left, iii. 222, 238; proposes Friedrich of Baireuth for Wilhelmina, iii. 225; not a perfectly wise Mother, iii. 230; Dr. Villa sent express to England, iii. 232; joyful news about the Double-Marriage, iii. 246; grievous disappointment, iii. 281; iv. 11; news of her Son's arrest, iv. 76; receives his Writing-desk from Katte, iv. 77; delivers it to the King, filled with fictitious letters, iv. 86; terror for her Son's life, iv. 122; will not give-up the English Marriage, iv. 130; anger at Wilhelmina, iv. 134, 136, 139, 202, 204; v. 8, 60; her opinion of the Prince of Wales, iv. 138; interest in the Salzburg Protestants, iv. 274; contempt for her Son's Bride, v. 10, 14; the King's Death, v. 279.
- Sophie Dorothee Maria, ii. 293; v. 51, 60.
- Sophie Dorothee of Hanover, i. 39; thirty-years imprisonment, i. 40; ii. 277, 289; iii. 72; her Will, iii. 162.
- Sophie, Electress, i. 38; ii. 94, 276; iii. 163.
- Sophie Louisa, third Wife of King Friedrich I., ii. 96; her dreary orthodoxy, ii. 96; madness and death, ii. 99.
- Spaen, Lieutenant, iv. 89, 95.

- Spandau, Commandant of, ii. 60.
- Spanish 'Protestantism,' i. 312; Spaniards in Holland, ii. 20; in Cleve, ii. 32, 37; Spanish quarrel with Karl VI., ii. 243 (see Elizabeth Farnese); ill-treatment of Captain Jenkins, iv. 150; v. 228.
- Spartan, an original North-German, ii. 153, 156.
- Spittler, cited, iv. 47 n.
- Stanislaus King of Poland, v. 23, 27, 28, 32, 57, 72, 107, 110, 112.
- Steinfurth, iv. 58.
- Stenzel, cited, i. 229 n.
- Sterne's Father, ii. 315; iii. 76.
- Stettin, Duke Otto's burial in the High Church of, i. 250; ii. 47, 64; Friedrich Wilhelm's possession of, ii. 162, 183, 187; iv. 190.
- Stille, Major von, v. 134.
- Stockholm Blutbad, i. 314.
- Stollhofen, Lines of, v. 53.
- Stralsund, ii. 49; Friedrich Wilhelm's Siege of, ii. 157, 166.
- Strasburg, ii. 56.
- Strelitz, Karl Ludwig of, iv. 273; v. 186, 190.
- Stump-oratory at zero, ii. 135; hideous nightmare of, iii. 43.
- Stuttgard, iv. 45.
- Suhm, Baron von, iii. 79, 91, 98; v. 68, 180, 181.
- Sulli, Duc de, v. 151.
- Sweden without a King, ii. 172. See Charles XII., Gustaf Adolf, Karl Gustaf.
- Sword-Brothers, Livonian, i. 139.
- Syberg, iv. 310.
- TACITUS, cited, i. 80 n.
- Tangermünde, i. 161, 203, 235; famine, ii. 54.
- Tannenberg, Battle of, i. 217, 245, 287, 289.
- Tell, i. 170.
- Templars, Knights, end of the, i. 133.
- Tentzel, cited, i. 169 n.
- Tetzel, i. 263.
- Teutsch Ritters, the, i. 126; origin of the Order, i. 129, 130; removal from Palestine to Venice, i. 131; conversion and settlement of Prussia, i. 133; for more than a century a bright beacon in those Northern Countries, i. 139; the stuff they were made of, i. 140; degenerating into idleness and riches, i. 184; a Grand-Master assassinated, i. 185; pride tripped into the ditch at Tannenberg, i. 216; sinking steadily into final extinction, i. 245; new false hopes, i. 287; the end, i. 295. See Albert Hochmeister.
- Thirty-Years War, ii. 22, 33, 43; hunger the grand weapon, ii. 53.
- Thorn, town of, i. 184; hurls out the Teutsch Ritters, i. 247.
- Thrift, no great empire ever founded without, ii. 154; incalculable value of, v. 126, 128. See Economics.

Thulmeyer, iv. 133.

Thüringen, iv. 269.

Tilson, George, iii. 218.

Tindal, cited, iv. 277 n.

Tobacco, good and bad influences of, iii. 41.

Tobacco-Parliament, Friedrich Wilhelm's, ii. 221; description of, iii. 39; a strange Session, iv. 309; the last, v. 269.

Toland, i. 58; his account of Prussia and Westphalia, ii. 90; cited, i. 59 n.

Townshend, Lord, iii. 173, 190, 264, 271; quarrel with Walpole, iii. 239.

Trenck, Baron, ii. 291.

Trier, Kurfürst of, iv. 69.

Triglaph, god of the Wends, i. 99.

Turin, Lines of, ii. 89.

Turks, the, iv. 63 n.; attacked by Russia and Austria, v. 198, 225; ruin put off till a better time, v. 261.

Tyrants, so-called, ii. 144.

UCKERMÜNDE, i. 253.

Ulm, iv. 270.

Ulrich von Hutten, cited, i. 262 n.

Ulrique Eleonora Queen of Sweden, ii. 184.

Ursula, St., iv. 73.

Utrecht, Treaty of, ii. 92, 160, 297.

VANDALS. See Wends.

Varnhagen von Ense, cited, i. 35 n.

Vere, Sir Horace, ii. 43.

Victor Amadeus King of Sardinia, iv. 187.

Vienna, Congress of, ii. 37; Karl VI.'s Treaty of, ii. 320; iv. 306; what Friedrich thought of the Vienna Court, iv. 301.

Vigo, descent on, ii. 314.

Villa, Dr., iii. 231, 238.

Villars, Marshal, v. 38.

Virnsperg, i. 126.

Vladislaus King of Hungary and Bohemia, i. 273, 276, 331.

Vohburg Family, the, i. 120.

Voigt, cited, i. 94 n., 145 n.

Voigtland, Duke of, i. 146, 183.

Voltaire, cited, i. 19 n.

Voltaire, and his scandalous Life of Friedrich, i. 19; iv. 88, 96; his Life of Charles XII., i. 172; iii. 89; v. 158; his first renown, ii. 245; sees the Congress of Cambrai, ii. 317; his Henriade, iii. 79; v. 159; his Name, iii. 88; v. 154; Friedrich's admiration, iv. 281; v. 167, 170; their correspondence, v. 144, 168, 212; Sauerteig's estimate, v. 145; no proper History of Voltaire, v. 147. His parentage and youth, v. 147, 148; insulted by the Duc de Rohan, v. 152; challenges him, and flies to England, v. 153; English influences and associates, v. 154, 155; his stereotype Englishman, v. 157; a shrewd financier, v. 159; returns triumphant to France, v. 160; Lions and

- Dogs in his path, v. 161;
 Madame du Châtelet, v. 163;
 life at Cirey, v. 164; his first Letter to Friedrich, v. 174; his account of Luisius; difference between a witty satire and a prose fact, v. 206, 207; edits Friedrich's Anti-Mac- chiavel, v. 236.
 Von Loen, cited, ii. 247 n.
 Vota, the famous Jesuit, i. 56.
- WACKERBART, Fieldmarshal, iii.
 98, 291.
 Waghäusel, v. 55.
 Wagram, i. 11, 156.
 Waldau, Colonel, iv. 17, 286.
 Waldburg, Colonel Truchsess
 von, iii. 193.
 Wales's, Prince of, Plume, ii.
 277; ancestors, iv. 24.
 Wallenstein, ii. 40, 49, 52, 167;
 iv. 299.
 Walpole, Horace, ii. 280; iii.
 140; cited, ii. 278 n.
 Walpole, Robert, ii. 278; iii.
 77; v. 198, 228, 262.
 Walpot von Bassenheim, i. 129.
 War, art of, i. 12.
 Warsaw, Battle of, ii. 66; Kalk-stein kidnapped at, ii. 80;
 Election at, v. 29.
 Wartburg, i. 140.
 Wartensleben, Captain, v. 218,
 221.
 Weber, cited, i. 294 n.
 Wegführer, cited, i. 64 n.
 Wehlau, iv. 145.
Weibertreue, iv. 57.
 Weimar, Duke of, v. 188.
 Weinheim, v. 78.
- Weinsberg, siege of, ii. 62 n.;
 iv. 57.
 Weissenberg, Battle of, ii. 43,
 57; iv. 299.
 Weissenfels, Johann Adolf
 Duke of, iii. 120, 131, 211,
 224, 291; iv. 269, 270; v. 33.
 Welfs, the, iv. 222.
 Wends, the, settling in Europe,
 i. 81, 91; converted to Christianity and Civilisation, i. 98,
 100, 111.
 Wentzel, the young Bohemian
 King, i. 169, 189.
 Wenzel, Kaiser, i. 203, 207, 215,
 217, 226.
 Werben, iv. 273.
 Westphalia, savage condition of, ii. 90; hams, ii. 91; Treaty of, ii. 63; iv. 259.
 Wiesenthal, v. 55.
 Wigs, Friedrich Wilhelm's taxes on, i. 151.
 Wilhelm Bishop of Riga, i. 284.
 Wilhelm of Hessen, ii. 41, 53.
 Wilhelm the Rich, Markgraf of Meissen, i. 214.
 Wilhelmina, cited, i. 31 n.
 Wilhelmina, Frederika Sophie,
 i. 29, 31, 44, 126, 268; ii. 94,
 292; her Book, with its shrill exaggerations, yet earnest veracity, ii. 107, 133; iii. 37;
 v. 93; her Portrait as a child,
 ii. 180; her account of Czar
 Peter's visit, ii. 189, 193; recollections of Wusterhausen, ii. 220; love for her Brother,
 ii. 225; proposed marriage with the Prince of Wales, ii.
 275, 330; iii. 111, 248; interview with George I., ii. 285;

her notion of Grumkow and the Old Dessauer, iii. 18; account of Franke the Pietist, iii. 94; her Brother's visit to King August, iii. 102; August's visit to Berlin, iii. 113; Wilhelmina's ineffectual Suitors, iii. 117, 179, 211; illness, iii. 136, 154, 200; her sister Louisa's marriage, iii. 154; her Father's violent ill-usage, iii. 157, 175, 206; anxiety about her Brother, iii. 208; is to be married out of hand, iii. 211; worn down by agitations, iii. 224; Friedrich of Baireuth, iii. 225; iv. 130; troubles with her Mother, iii. 229; v. 8; Dr. Villa, iii. 231; her Brother talks of flight, iii. 236; prematurely saluted as Princess of Wales, iii. 246; Katte's unwise worship, iv. 11; no marriage with England, iv. 12; her Brother's attempted flight, and arrest, iv. 76; his letters burnt, and fictitious substitutes written, iv. 78; her Father's furious rage, iv. 86; a close prisoner in the Berlin Palace, iv. 92, 131; her pity for poor Katte, iv. 109; to marry the Prince of Baireuth, iv. 130; her distracted consent, iv. 134; preparations for betrothal, iv. 135; the Prince introduced, iv. 138; a Bride these six months, iv. 190; her magnificent wedding, iv. 195; meeting with her Brother, iv. 201; opens her heart to her Father, iv. 205; a grand problem coming for her, iv. 231, 303; letters from her Brother, iv. 241; v. 14, 59, 63, 66; helps the Salzburg Protestants, iv. 269; her Father's visit, iv. 308; her inauspicious visit to Berlin, v. 8, 15; meetings with her Brother and his Bride, v. 9, 16; difficult meeting with him on his way to Philipsburg, v. 59; he visits her at Baireuth, strangely altered, v. 90.

Wilke, iv. 149.

William Conqueror, ii. 144.

William Count of Holland, 'Pope's Kaiser,' i. 150.

William, our Dutch, i. 64, 69, 70; ii. 77, 81.

Winkelmann, iv. 273.

Wit, modern, i. 239, 311.

Wittenberg, siege of, i. 338.

Wolden, iv. 126, 162, 169, 176, 227; v. 132.

Wolf, and the Halle University, iii. 57; what Friedrich thought of him, v. 171, 181.

Wolf, Pater, Kaiser's Confessor, i. 72.

Wolfgang Wilhelm. See Pfalz-Neuburg.

Work, a Captain of, iii. 10.

Wotton, Sir Henry, ii. 27 n., 34, 41.

Wraxall, cited, iii. 84 n.

Wreech, Colonel, iii. 193; iv. 168; his Wife and Friedrich at Cüstrin, iv. 174, 180.

Writing Era, i. 16.

Württemberg, Eberhard Lud-

- wig Duke of, iv. 42; v. 46;
 matrimonial and amatory iniquity, iv. 42; moved to repentance, iv. 48, 135; Karl Alexander Duke of, iv. 49,
 295; v. 46, 104; Schiller's
 Duke of, iv. 296.
 Wusterhausen, description of,
 ii. 218; Treaty of, iii. 29, 68,
 161; Tabagie at, iii. 46.
 Wylich, Captain, v. 133.
 YOUTHFUL dissipations, mud-bath of, iii. 104, 107.
- ZEITZ, iv. 270.
 Zelle, ii. 238.
 Zentha, battle of, iv. 63.
 Ziethen, Captain, v. 102.
 Zimmermann, Dr., v. 183.
 Zimmermann, Herr, the poor kidnapped carpenter, iii. 13.
 Zisca, risen out of the ashes of murdered Huss, i. 208, 224;
 iv. 298.
 Zöllner, ii. 218; cited, 221 n.
 Zorndorf, iv. 174, 180.

END OF VOL. V.

PRINTED BY BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES
STANFORD AUXILIARY LIBRARY
STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 94305-6004
(415) 723-9201

All books may be recalled after 7 days

DATE DUE

--	--

Stanford University Libraries

3 6105 020 040 874

610019

